It is open to question that the pupil does better at the town school. The rural school building must now be built with all regard to the health and comfort of the child, and as a consequence his physical surroundings are as good as that in town only on a smaller scale. His teacher also has the same education and training, and by concentrating on the fewer pupils can get better results. Is it not so that one of the great questions of the day is the increasing size of the cities with a corresponding decrease in population of rural districts? Are not the great men of our time trying to point out the danger of this condition continuing? Would it not help the rural districts, to not only maintain their place but to progress ... the Community idea, and worked more along cooperative lines than they have done? Would not doing away with such an institution as the country school, tend to increase the trouble, rather than retard it? Just another few lines and I am done. We are here in our homes. These people across the valley or over the hill are our neighbors. The character of our ... as much of each other as we wish or is good for us. Our children are of an age to go to school. Let us build ourselves a neat comfortable building with a few trees and flowers around it and send the children there. We will be able to watch them better near home. We will have Church services there and an occasional Concert or public meeting. What is the result? Instead of being isolated families with nothing in common we have become a community that soon learns to discuss its welfare. We get in the habit of meeting together to see how we can better our ... In this way we progress.

Thanking you Mr Editor for valuable space

A Shooting Match

At Which One of the Parties Was Sure to Win.

By AINSWORTH RHODES.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The first time I saw Daisy she was coming over her father's broad acres on a horse whose lope was very like a rocking chair. She was riding straddle with divided skirts. No other woman on the ranches thereabout would ride in any other costume. Barker was riding beside her, and the two made a very handsome pair. The brim of his sombrero was flattened against his forehead by the wind, a lariat hung at his saddle bow, and his splendid figure was revealed by his costume—viz., flannel shirt and trousers, with boots to his knees.

Daisy had gone out from the east with her father, who became a sheep raiser, and she had become fascinated with ranch life. Unfortunately she had conceived a romantic idea of the genus cowboy, and, Barker being physically a perfect type, she had persuaded herself, or, rather, he had persuaded her, that he was just the man for her. I say "unfortunately" because he was not an educated man and in every way beneath her. There were other features about him to render him undesirable which will appear presently.

The couple passed me, all of us saluting, though they were unknown to me, and I rode on to the ranch house, where I had business with John Nolan with reference to a large purchase of wool. While dickering with him on his veranda up the roadway came the couple I had met and alighted at the foot of the steps. Throwing their bridle reins over a post, they walked up on to the veranda. Then I learned that Daisy was Nolan's daughter.

As the pair passed into the house I noticed a cloud fill over the face of the girl's father. I knew by Barker's bearing toward her that he was in love with her, and I judged that his attentions were not relished by Nolan. But he said nothing to me then, and we went on with our dickering. When I arose to go he said:

"There's no place about here in which you will be comfortable except my house. Send for you traps."

I accepted the invitation, especially as I was pleased at being under the same roof with Miss Daisy. I knew she had a lover, but my attraction for her did not then go so far as to intend to come between them. I merely liked the idea of being near her during my stay.

But I stayed a good while, and it was not very long before she and I each made a discovery. I discovered that I wanted her, and she discovered that she didn't want Barker. Meanwhile I found out something else—that he had become frightfully jealous of me, and if I took her away from him he would probably kill me. At first he and I spoke to each other when we met either on the ranch or elsewhere. Then he only noticed me at the Nolan house.

I thought it best after awhile to remove to the (so called) hotel, a mile from Nolan's. If anything happened between Barker and myself I preferred that it should not happen under Nolan's roof. So one day I removed my luggage to my new quarters.

One morning I was sitting on the porch of the hotel smoking a briarwood pipe. Barker came out of the barroom, where he had been drinking, and took a seat about thirty feet from me. I didn't know he was there till, turning my head, I saw him out of the corner of my eye sighting his revolver at me.

Naturally I started.

"Hold on there," said Barker. "Your pipe makes a fine target. We don't allow people to smoke such expensive pipes out here!"

The words were scarcely out of his mouth when I felt a faint tick on the bowl of the pipe, heard the crack of a gun and knew that a bullet had passed through the pipe.

"Wait up!" he growled as I was about to rise. "Your pipe won't draw with a hole in it, but it's still a mighty good target."

I snatched a look at him. He was evidently under the influence of liquor. I felt sure that if I didn't let him shoot

[illegible]

... over, he was satisfied with what he had doubtless intended for a warning that if I took Daisy Nolan away from him I would have to face sure death. The witnesses urged me to go in and have something, but I declined, saying that I was anxious for a smoke and would go upstairs for another pipe. The truth is I wanted a chance to go where I could, unobserved, give way to my feelings for a few moments, they having been controlled only by a most desperate effort.

When I was alone I staggered to the bed, fell on it and for a few minutes trembled like a leaf. But when I began to recover I started to get mad at the same time. Men will fight more desperately for a woman than for any other cause, and it occurred to me that, Daisy being the bone of contention, if she preferred me either Barker or I must die. I spent some time considering what to do, then went to the ranch, intending to offer myself to Daisy. If she refused me I would leave the field at once to all comers. If she accepted me I would have it out with Barker.

I found Miss Daisy very much excited. She had heard of Barker's shooting escapade and had turned bitterly against him. I told her that I wanted her and if she wanted me I was willing to settle the matter between Barker and myself. Her reply was all I could have asked for, but she positively forbade my coming into

"I might in two or three shots."

"Well, I give Daisy my plan, and she's decided to try it. Here's a note for you, and here's a note for Barker. Whichever hits a hens egg with a forty-two the most out'n five shots she'll marry."

He handed me a note to that effect from Daisy and showed me another he was commissioned to deliver to Barker.

"Do you consent?" he added, drawing rein.

"Yes," I said, "I consent to anything Daisy desires."

Without waiting for more he turned about and rode back in the direction from whence he came.

The next day Uncle Jake informed me that Barker had gladly agreed to the terms.

On the appointed day I made my appearance at the barn, wondering what was to be the upshot of this singular contest. I found an egg suspended over a basket by a fine thread. I won the toss and with it the right to fire five consecutive shots at the egg. I missed the first and the fourth, but put a hole in the egg on the second, third and the fifth. For my life I could not see why I had not lost. It would be nothing for Barker to hit the egg every time.

A new egg was attached to the thread for him to shoot at, and, whipping out his revolver, he fired with ap-

HOUSE ADJOURNS UNTIL MAY 26TH

Assent Given to Bills by His Honor—Estimates for Five Months Are Brought Down

March 19th.— Shortly after noon to-day the legislature adjourned till May 26th. Before adjournment his honor, the lieutenant-governor, came down to the House and assented to a number of private bills whose urgency was such that they could not conveniently be held over until the members reassembled.

The temporary supply for five months ending May 31st was passed this morning and the premier in [illegible] budget speech announced a surplus of $12,000 for last year.

The temporary estimates for the five months total $1,689,539.25.

In the administration of justice is an item for $25,500 to pay the expense in connection with the royal commission.

In the public works department there is a capital expenditure of $573,840, principally on public buildings now in progress of construction.

The bills assented to are as follows:

A bill respecting the Salvation Army, a bill to ratify by-laws of the town of Camrose, a bill to incorporate the Alberta and Saskatchewan Central railway company, a bill to incorporate the Lacombe and Brazeau railway company, a bill to ratify Calgary by-laws, a bill respecting the Diamond Coal company, a bill ratifying bylaws of the town of Cardston, a bill to change the name of the Elks club of Calgary, a bill amending the Lethbridge charter, a bill to amend the Edmonton charter, and to ratify the C. P. R. entrance agreement, a bill to amend the Strathcona charter and a bill respecting land surveyors, a bill to validate certain by-laws of the town of Taber.

Yesterday Afternoon

[illegible]

The premier yesterday afternoon gave the assurance that not one cent of the guaranteed bonds would be paid out and the location of the A. & G. W. railway [illegible] would not be approved until the House met again in May. This was entirely satisfactory to all the members.

The remainder of the afternoon and evening sessions was taken up with getting through the most pressing legislation. The government bills have been left over until after the adjournment.

The football season opened Monday evening at the Athletic grounds. Base-ballers will soon follow suit. Cricket and tennis will also [illegible] due attention

Mr Williams, representing the R. S. King Co., of Seattle, Washington, spent a few days in town during the week and looked over the [illegible] subdivision which the company are placing on the market. Mr Williams expressed himself as most agreeably surprised with the advanced stage and [illegible] prospects of the town as well as with the splendid lay and [illegible] of the [illegible] the R. S. King Co. are handling. He had with him copies of a handsome folder dealing with the town and district. Mr Williams who came direct from Seattle left Monday night for Winnipeg where the company is opening an office for the explicit purpose of handling this property. With him was a party who came to invest in one hundred lots located in their sub-division. With the developments the R. S. King Co. contemplate there is going to be something doing in the real estate line this spring and summer.

Judicial Commission Appointed

The endorsation of the entire Legislature was given Wednesday 16th to the government's resolution for the appointing of a judicial commission, composed of Hon. Justices Scott, Harvey and Beck to investigate all matters in connection with the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway transaction.

The resolution as it finally passed the house is as follows:

"Whereas it is advisable in the public interest that inquiry should be made for the purpose of ascertaining whether any, and, if any what officer or officers or member or members of the legislature of the province were or are interested either directly or indirectly by themselves or through others in the creation, incorporation or organization of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway Company, or in the making of, or entering into of [illegible]

She eagerly awaited her daughter's coming, and, having lingered at the window to watch with impatience the rather ceremonious leave taking, she hastened to the door of the improvised sitting room to welcome the mountaineers as they returned to tell their adventures.

"My darling, who do you think was listening and looking from the window next ours?" she breathlessly inquired when she had embraced her newly restored treasure, for the secret of the adjoining room was too good to keep until questions had been put. "Can't you guess? I'm surprised that since you were so sure last night of a certain person's presence not far away. Why, who but your emperor himself!"

The princess laughed happily and kissed her mother's pink cheek. "Then he must have an astral body," said she, "since one or the other has been with me all day, and it was to him—or his doppelganger—that you offered your purse to make up for accusing him of stealing."

The grand duchess sat down, not so much because she wished to assume a sitting position as because she experienced a sudden uncontrollable weakness of the knees. For a moment she was unable to speak or even to speculate, but one vague thought did trail dimly across her brain: "Heavens, what have I done to him? And maybe some day he will be my son-in-law."

Meanwhile Frau Yorvan—a strangely subdued Frau Yorvan—had droopingly followed the chamois hunter into the inn.

"My dear old friend, you must learn not to lose that well meaning head of yours," said he in the hall.

"Oh, but, your majesty"—

"Now, now, must I remind you again that his majesty is at Kronburg or Petersbruck or some other of his residences when I am at Allehelligen? This time I believe he's at the baths of Matina. If you can't remember these things I fear I shall be driven away from here to look for chamois elsewhere than on the Schneehorn."

"Indeed, I will not be so stupid again, your—I mean I will do my very best not to forget. But never before have I been so tried, to see your high-born, imperial shoulders loaded down as if—as if you had been a common gepacktrager for tourists instead of"—

"A chamois hunter. Don't distress yourself, good friend. I've had a day of excellent sport."

"For that I am thankful. But to see your—to see you coming back in such an unsuitable way has given me a weakness of the heart. How can I order myself civilly to those ladies who have"—

"Who have given peasant Leopold some hours of amusement. Be more civil than ever for my sake. And, by the way, can you tell me the names of the ladies? That one of them—a companion, I judge—is a Miss Manchester, I have heard in conversation, but the others"—

"They are mother and daughter, sir. The elder, who in her ignorance cried out such treasonable abominations from the window, as I could tell even with the little English I have picked up, is Lady Mowbray. I have seen the name written down, and I know how to speak it because I have heard it pronounced by the companion, the Miss Manchester. The younger, the beautiful one, is also a Miss, and the mother calls her Helene. They talk together in English, also in French, and, though I have so few words of either language, I could tell that London was mentioned between them more than once while I waited on the table. Besides, it is painted in black letters on their traveling boxes."

"You did not expect their arrival?"

"Oh, no, sir! Had they written beforehand at this season, when I generally expect to be honored by your presence, I should have answered that the house was full or closed or any excuse which occurred to me to keep strangers away. But none have ever before arrived so late in the year, and I was taken all unawares when my son, Alois, drove them up last night. He did not know you had arrived, as the papers spoke so positively of your visit to the baths, and I could not send travelers away. You have bidden me not to do so once they are in the house. But these ladies are here but for a day or two more on their way to Kronburg for a visit, and I thought"—

"You did quite right, Frau Yorvan. Has my messenger come up with letters?"

"Yes, your—yes, sir. Just now also a telegram was brought by another messenger, who came and left in a great hurry."

The chamois hunter shrugged his shoulders and sighed an impatient sigh. "It's too much to expect that I should be left in peace for a single day, even here," he muttered as he went toward the stairs.

To reach Frau Yorvan's best sitting room (suitably arranged, according to one opinion, by four men almost all day on a mountain) he was obliged to pass by a door through which issued unusual sounds. So unusual were they that the emperor paused.

Some one was striking the preliminary chords of a volunteer of his favorite instrument, a Rhaetian zither. As he lingered, listening, a voice began to sing. Ah, what a voice!

Softly seductive it was as the cooing of a dove in the spring to its mate, pure as the purling of a brook among meadow flowers, rich as the deep notes of a nightingale in his passion for the moon. And, for the song, it was the heartbreaking cry of a young Rhaetian peasant who, lying near death in a strange land, longs for one ray of sunrise light on the bare mountain tops of the homeland more earnestly than for his first sight of an unknown heaven.

The man outside the door did not move until the voice was still. He knew well, though he could not see, who the singer had been. It was impossible for the plump lady at the window or the thin lady with the glasses to own a voice like that. It was the girl's. She only of the trio could so exhale her soul in the very perfume of sound, for to his fancy it was like hearing the fragrance of a rose breathed aloud. "I have heard an angel," he said to himself, but in reality he had heard Princess Virginia of Baumenburg-Drippe showing off her very prettiest accomplishment in the childish hope that the man she loved might hear.

Leopold of Rhaetia had heard many golden voices—golden in more senses of the word than one—but never before, it seemed to him, a voice which so stirred his spirit with pain that was bittersweet, pleasure as blinding as pain and a vague yearning for something beautiful which he had never known.

If he had been asked what that something was he could not, if he would, have told, for a ... plain that part of himself which he has never even tried to understand.

Before he had moved many paces from the door the lovely voice, no longer plaintive, but swelling to brilliant triumph, broke into the national anthem of Rhaetia—warlike, inspiring as the "Marseillaise," but wilder, calling her sons to face death singing in the defense.

"She's an English girl, yet she sings our Rhaetian music as no Rhaetian woman I have ever heard can sing it," he told himself, slowly passing on to his own door. "She is a new type to me. I don't think there can be many like her. A pity that she's not a princess or ... that Leopold, the emperor, and Leo, the chamois hunter, are not two men. Still, the chamois hunter of Rhaetia would be no match for Miss Mowbray of London, as the weights would balance in the scales as unevenly as now."

He gave a sigh and a smile that lifted his eyebrows. Then he ... the door of his sitting room to forget among certain documents which urged the importance of an (...) ... to duty the difference between Leopold and Leo, the difference between women and a woman.

"Goodby to our mountains tomorrow morning," he said to his three chosen companions. "Hey for work and Kronburg!"

She was going to Kronburg in a few days, according to Frau Yorvan. But Kronburg was not Allehelligen, and Leopold, the emperor, was not at his palace in the way of meeting tourists or even "explorers."

"She'll never know to whom she gave her ring," he thought, with the dense innocence of a man who has studied all books save women's looks. "And I'll never know who gives her a plain gold one for the finger on which she once wore this."

"She's an English girl, yet she sings our Rhaetian music."

But in the next room divided from him by a single wall, sat Princess Virginia of Baumenburg-Drippe.

"When we meet again at Kronburg he mustn't dream that I knew all the time," she was saying to herself. "That would spoil everything—just at first. Yet, oh, some day how I should love to confess all—all! Only I couldn't possibly confess except to a man who would excuse or perhaps even approve because he had learned to love me well. And what shall I do, how shall I bear my life now I've seen him, if that day should never come?"

CHAPTER SIX

LETTERS of introduction for Lady Mowbray and her daughter to influential and interesting persons attached to the Rhaetian court were necessarily a part of the wonderful plan concocted in the English garden, though they were among the details thought out afterward.

The widow of the hereditary Grand Duke of Baumenburg-Drippe was reported in the journals of various countries to be traveling with the Princess Virginia and a small suit through Canada and the United States, and, fortunately for the success of the innocent plot, the grand duchess had spent so many years of seclusion in England and had even in her youth met so few Rhaetians that there was little fear of detection. Her objections to Virginia's scheme for winning a lover instead of thanking heaven quietly for a mere husband were based on other grounds, but Virginia had overcome them, and eventually the grand duchess had proved not only docile, but positively fertile in expedient.

The choosing of the borrowed flag under which to sail had at first been a difficulty. It was pointed out by a friend taken into their confidence, a lady whose husband had been ambassador to Rhaetia, that a real name and a name of some dignity must be adopted if proper introductions were to be given. And it was the grand duchess who suggested the name of Mowbray on the plea that she had in a way the right to annex it.

The mother of the late Duke of Northumberland had been a Miss Mowbray, and there were still several eminently respectable, inconspicuous Mowbray cousins. Among these cousins was a certain Lady Mowbray, widow of a baron of that ilk and possessing a daughter some years older and innumerable degrees plainer than the Princess Virginia.

To this Lady Mowbray the grand duchess had gone out of her way to be kind in Germany long years ago, when she was a very grand personage indeed and Lady Mowbray comparatively a nobody. The humble connection had expressed herself as unspeakably grateful, and the two had kept up a friendship ever since. Therefore when the difficulty of realism in a name presented itself the grand duchess thought of Lady Mowbray and Miss Helen Mowbray. They were about to leave England for India, but had not yet left, and the widow of the baron was flattered as well as amused by the romantic confidence reposed in her by the widow of the grand duke. She was delighted to lend her name and her daughter's name, and who could blame the lady if her mind rushed forward to the time when she should have earned gratitude from the young empress of Rhaetia? For of course she had no doubt of the way in which the adventure would end.

As for the wife of the late British ambassador to the Rhaetian court, she was not sentimental and therefore was not quite so comfortably sure of the sequel. As far as concerned her own part in it, however, she felt safe enough, for, though she was after a fashion deceiving her old acquaintances at Kronburg, she was not foisting adventuresses upon them. On the contrary, she was giving them a chance of entertaining angels unawares by sending them letters to ladies who were in reality the Grand Duchess of Baumenburg-Drippe and the Princess Virginia.

The four mysterious gentlemen left Allehelligen the day after Virginia's encounter with the chamois hunter. But the Mowbrays lingered on. The adventure had begun so gloriously that the girl feared an anticlimax for the next step. Though she longed for the second meeting, she dreaded it as well and put off the chance of it from day to day. The stay of the Mowbrays at Allehelligen lengthened into a week, and when they left at last it was only just in time for the great festivities at Kronburg which were to celebrate the emperor's thirty first birthday, an event enhanced in national importance by the fact that the eighth anniversary of his coronation would fall on the same date.

On the morning of the journey the grand duchess had neuralgia and was ...

"I don't see, after all, what you've accomplished so far by this mad freak which has dragged us across Europe," she said fretfully in the train which they had taken at a town twenty miles from Allehelligen. "We've perched on a mountain top like the ... for a week freezing. ... What have we ... ?"

Virginia had nothing to ... at least nothing that she ... to show even to her mother ... in a ... bag of silk which lay next her heart was ... of hunting paper. If ... looked at the ... in a mirror you saw written ... head ... the ...

The princess had ... in the best ... Yorvan had ... its new ... Allehelligen ... with ... there.

To learn her full name he must have thought it worth while to make inquiries. It had lingered in his thoughts or he would not have scrawled it twice on some bit of paper since destroyed, no doubt, in a moment of idle dream.

PENALTY CLAUSES

(Alberta Homestead.)

Our farmers have been eagerly laying plans for starting co-operative government owned pork packing plants. Most are anxiously waiting to see one such start, and many are very impatient, but there has been one hill to climb or one fence to jump that many have balked at, which is the penalty clause.

This is the crux of the whole matter and which spells in a great measure "success" or "failure".

What is needed is a clear vision upon the subject. It takes at least two to make a bargain or a contract. The farmer asks the government, a business organization elected to represent the whole people, to form a co-operative meat packing institution for his benefit or that is for farmers in general who form one part of the community. The farmers have lost sight of the fact that they are one party to the contract which has to be made with the government, the representatives of themselves, and the other party to the contract, viz. the whole people.

In order to insure the fulfillment of obligations it is customary in the business world to make contracts or sign pledges to do certain things, with penalty clauses attached whereby the injured party can collect for non-fulfillment. The government is simply asking the farmers to enter into a simple business contract, that if the government does its part each individual farmer will do his.

Now if this was not customary or necessary it would not have been required. But our farmers who are anxious to see this co-operative packing factory materialize are well aware that the Danish system, to which they point as an instance of success, and by which they intend to take pattern, owes its success to this very same pledging habit of the Danish farmers balk at doing what they know or should know they will have to do.

Taking other instances of co-operative dealings which have been a success on this continent our farmers might study the following from the Saturday Evening Post of March 12th.

THE FARMERS PENALTY CLAUSE.

Later on when other farmers companies had been organized, all but two commission houses refused to handle our grain. I have known shipments from farmers' elevators to stand on a siding for five days. The situation is changed now. I find the commission men who formerly would not take our business patting us on the back and calling us good fellows. I wish to say to you: Remember the men who handled your grain when by so doing they were liable to lose their business.

"Gentlemen," added Mr McManus impressively, in closing his address, "I hear those fellows, who tried to down us no hatred, but there is enough Irish in me to remember those fellows.

Co-operative grain selling has been tried before and had failed. The success of the Rockwell company and those that came later is often attributed to a device which that company adopted, called the penalty clause or maintenance clause. This provides that any member who sells his grain otherwise than to the company shall pay a penalty of one-half cent to a cent and a half a bushel—the amount of the fine varying in different companies. This is to prevent the opposition from taking away the business of the farmers' company by simply overbidding it for a season or two. An outside buyer must overbid the company by more than the amount of the penalty in order to get its members' business. It is said there has been no failure of a farmers' company which has adopted this clause— except one or two instances in which failure was caused by speculation and embezzlement on the part of the manager. In selling coal, lumber and other merchandise, however the companies lay no obligation upon the members who are free to buy of the company or elsewhere, as they please.

It is the penalty clause that holds the combination together and in the case of our farmers in Alberta would bind them to the government and the government to them. Without any penalty clause the whole scheme would be so hampered that it would probably run on the rocks.

So far the Alberta government has not been having much success at securing pledges from the farmers to supply hogs to the co-operative plant, and it is difficult to see how this enterprise can ever materialize without these pledges.

He stated that the board had voted $100.00 to the advertising part of their work and as other expenses were heavy the special grant was asked of the council.

On Motion of Freeman-Hayward, the sum of $250.00 was voted the B. of T. for publicity purposes.

WINNIPEG'S EVER WIDENING CIRCLE of MILLIONAIRES

C. H. ENDERTON

THE conversation drifted to millionaires. Some one made the statement that Winnipeg has more millionaires than Montreal or Toronto. An argument ensued.

"How many millionaires are there in Winnipeg, anyway?" someone asked.

"Fifty," announced the real estate man with his customary optimism.

The meeting [illegible] and so the guesses ranged.

The conversation, however, set a Telegram representative thinking and he started a systematic investigation of the subject.

J. A. M. Aikins, K.C., holds the somewhat unique position of being a millionaire lawyer. Mr. Aikins is a many-sided man and it is not alone as the unquestionable leader in every sense of the Western bar, but that he is a Winnipegger of wealth. That he enjoys and has enjoyed one of the most lucrative practices of any lawyer in the Dominion for nearly a third of a century, does not entirely explain the fact that he is a Winnipeg millionaire. He has ever had confidence in Winnipeg and the future greatness of Western Canada and in that confidence has invested largely in real estate. He has done more. He has given tangible evidence of his confidence in the building of one of the largest business blocks [illegible] and in one of the best [illegible] in the city of Winnipeg. A POPULAR SOLDIER

Col. Steele, Who Succeeds Gen. Buchan, With the R.N.W.M.P.

Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. S. B. Steele, C.B., M.V.O., has been selected by His Excellency the Governor-General for the position of Honorary Aide-de-Camp, made vacant by the death of Brigadier-General Buchan. As the title itself implies, the appointment of Honorary Aide-de-Camp is entirely an honorary one, the only duties attaching to it being to attend His Excellency at state functions, such as the opening of Parliament, state dinners, etc. But it is one of the very few honors which the Governor-General has the privilege of personally conferring without consulting anybody, and as such it is very highly regarded in the force, although there have been some absurdly injudicious awards of honorary aide-de-campships in years gone by. There was certainly be no grumbling over the last appointment, for there is no more popular soldier in Canada today than Col. Steele. Most Canadians consider Col. Steele as a contribution of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police to the Canadian Militia. He was so long in the redcoated police, and was so closely identified with some of its most stirring episodes of service, that it has been generally forgotten that he had seen considerable service in the Active Militia before joining the Mounted Police. It will be remembered that the organization of the Mounted Police in 1873 and 1874 was entrusted to Lieut.-Col. now Major-Gen. Sir George French. This officer at the time was inspector of artillery and commanded A Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, then quartered at Kingston. The recruits for the chief detachment of the Mounted Police force were mobilized at Toronto, and French naturally drew upon the non-commissioned officers of his battery for instructors to knock the recruits into something like shape before entraining them, unarmed and uniformed for the long trip to Manitoba frontier via Chicago and St. Paul.

Col. Steele was then a sergeant in A Battery, and it did not take much persuasion to induce him to enlist for the new force. He was posted as Troop Sergeant-Major to A Division or Troop and so was part of the force detached under Inspector Jarvis to proceed via and Fort Carlton to Edmonton, while French with the main body struck out for the whisky trader's district in what is now Southern Alberta. Jarvis, on reaching Fort Edmonton, Oct. 27, 1874 wrote a lengthy report to headquarters in which he specially brought Troop Sergeant-Major Steele's services to official notice. He wrote "S. M. Steele has been unsparing in his efforts to assist me and he has done the manual labor of at least two men." It might be explained that for two or three hundred miles of the last part of the march the detachment had to make its own roads, including considerable bridges and long stretches of corduroy, and the horses could not be used to any great extent, as they were half-starved, there being no oats for the last five hundred miles. After he [illegible] his promotion appeared inevitable and it came, in due course, with the first vacancy in the establishment. Being considered a man for [illegible] he was given charge of [illegible] justice at and in [illegible] the rail head during the construction of the C.P.R. through the Northwest Territories.

The Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

Through most of her life Virginia had known the lack of money, but she would not have exchanged a thousand pounds for the contents of that little bag.

Hohenlangenwald is the name of the house from which the rulers of Rhaetia sprang. Therefore everything in the beautiful city of Kronburg which can take the name of Hohenlangenwald has taken it, and it was at the Hohenlangenwald hotel that a suit of rooms had been engaged for Lady Mowbray.

The travelers broke the long journey at Munich, and Virginia's train had reached the capital of Rhaetia [illegible] the morning of the emperor's [illegible] many of the [illegible] by the emperor [illegible] to the Leopoldplatz [illegible] of the Hohenlangenwald [illegible].

Virginia looked forward to seeing the emperor from her own windows, as, according to [illegible] an hour to spare [illegible] they were [illegible] carriage [illegible] crowd in the streets [illegible] great he feared [illegible] undertaking to get through. Some of the thoroughfares were closed for traffic. He would be obliged to [illegible] about way and [illegible] reach the main entrance of the [illegible]. At last he was [illegible] passengers and [illegible] entrance in a narrow street.

As the carriage stopped from far away came a burst of [illegible] a military band playing the national air which the chamois hunter had heard a girl sing behind a closed door at Alleheiligen.

The shops were all shut, would be shut until the day after tomorrow, but their windows were unshuttered and gayly [illegible] to add to the brightness of the scene. Strange old shops displayed the marvelous chased silver, the jeweled weapons and gorgeous embroideries from the far eastern provinces of Rhaetia. Splendid new shops rivaled the best of the Rue de la Paix in Paris. Gray mediaeval buildings made wonderful backgrounds for drapery of crimson and blue and garlands of winter flowers. Modern buildings of purple red porphyry and the famous honey yellow marble of Rhaetia flamed with flags, and above all in the heart of the town, between old and new, rose the Castle Rock. Virginia's pulses beat as she saw the home of Leopold for the first time, and she was proud of its picturesqueness, its riches and grandeur, as if she had some right in it too.

"We can't do better."

grand duchess. I can't think of a worse [illegible]. Fancy what a crush there will be—all sorts of creatures trampling on each other for places. Besides, you can't see anything."

"Oh, mother," pleaded the princess in her softest sweetest voice, the tone she kept for extreme emergencies, "[illegible] up here [illegible] that music plate and the [illegible] for [illegible]. Besides, it's the most curious thing—I feel as if a voice were calling to me that I must be there. Miss Portman and I'll take care of each other. You will let me go, won't you?"

Of course the grand duchess yielded, her one stipulation being that the two should keep close to the hotel, and the princess urged her mother not to [illegible] away [illegible] to hear her mother's last counsels.

Their rooms were on the first floor, and the girl turned eagerly down the broad flight of marble stairs, Miss Portman following dutifully upon her heels.

They could not get out by way of the front door, for people had paid for standing room there and would not yield an inch even for an instant, while the two or three steps below and the broad pavement in front were as closely packed.

Matters began to look hopeless, but Virginia would not be daunted. They tried the side entrance and found it free. [illegible] comparatively empty, but just beyond, where it ran into the great open square of the Leopoldplatz, there was a solid wall of sightseers.

"We might as well go back," said Miss Portman, who had none of the princess' keenness for the undertaking. She was tired after the journey and for herself would rather have had a cup of tea than see fifty emperors unveil as many statues by celebrated sculptors.

"Oh, no!" cried Virginia. "We'll get to the front somehow sooner or later, even if we're taken off our feet. Look at that man just ahead of us. He doesn't seem to turn back. He's not a nice man, but he's terribly determined. Let's keep close to him and see what he means to do; then maybe we shall be able to do it as well."

Miss Portman glanced at the person indicated by a nod of the princess' head. Undismayed by the mass of human beings that choked the Leopoldplatz a few yards ahead, he walked rapidly along without the least hesitation. He had the air of knowing exactly what he wanted to do and how to do it. Even Miss Portman, who had no imagination, saw this by his back. The set of the head on the shoulders was singularly determined, and the walk revealed a consciousness of importance accounted for perhaps by the gray and crimson uniform which might be that of some official order. On the short black head was an eagle perched hat, adorned with an eagle's feather, fastened in place by a gaudy pin, and this hat was pulled down very far over the face.

"Perhaps he knows that they'll let him through," said Miss Portman. "He seems to be a dignitary of some sort. We can't do better, if you're determined to go on, than keep in his wake."

"He has the air of being ready to die [illegible]," said Virginia, for they were [illegible].

"[illegible] you tell? We haven't seen his face yet [illegible] the other in the crowd [illegible]."

"[illegible] at the back of his neck and his ears."

"[illegible] looked and gave a little shiver and would never have [illegible] if her attention had not been called to the yellow skin [illegible] the black bristles. [illegible] he raised his hand [illegible] and [illegible]."

"Horrid!" she ejaculated. "He's probably dying of some contagious disease. [illegible]."

"[illegible]," said Virginia. "He's our only hope. They're going to let him through."

Miss Portman listened, but as she understood only a few words of Rhaetian she [illegible]. "I wish we [illegible] must be going to the [illegible]."

"Ah, must be time!" She would be so [illegible] "I shall [illegible] from my windows and see him."

But at the hotel, which they did finally reach, the girl had to bear a huge disappointment. With many apologies the landlord explained that he had done his very best for Lady Mowbray's party when he received their order a fortnight before and that he had allotted them a good suit, with balconies overlooking the river at the back of the house—quite a Venetian effect, as her ladyship would find. But as to rooms at the front—impossible! All had been engaged fully six weeks in advance. One American millionaire was paying a thousand guldens solely for an hour's use of a small balcony, today for the unveiling and again tomorrow for the street procession. Virginia was pale with disappointment. "Then I'll go down into the crowd and take my chance of seeing something," she said to her mother when they had been shown into handsome rooms entirely hidden by everything but attention.

"I must see the memory of Herr [illegible]. We [illegible] he'll [illegible] Virginia heard [illegible] a bandstand [illegible] and these ladies [illegible] with him [illegible] crowd at a corner [illegible] the man in gray and crimson, obedient to the [illegible] who were using him as a [illegible] the crowd [illegible] parted for them. The [illegible] of people were moved at the [illegible] of the [illegible]. [illegible]

People were moved at the audacity of the girl and the elderly woman and were pushed from her grasp, but [illegible] the cortical second [illegible].

"My dear child, impossible for you to do such a thing!" exclaimed the [illegible] segment, the Imperial Life guards [illegible] up in sight which told that the emperor was coming. Promptly the small group concerned forgot its grievance in excitement, crowding together so that Virginia was pressed to the front, and only arms Portman was pushed ruthlessly into the background. The poor lady raised a feeble protest in English which nobody heeded unless it were the man who had inadvertently acted as pioneer. At her shrill outburst he turned quickly, as if startled by the sudden cry, and Virginia was so close to him that her chin almost touched his shoulder. For the first time she had a glimpse of his face, which matched the yellow wax of his neck in pallor.

The girl shrank away from him involuntarily. "What a death's head," she thought—"a sly, wicked face and awful eyes. He looked frightened. I wonder why."

Assured that the sharp cry did not concern him, the man turned to the front again, and, having obtained his object—a place in the foremost rank of the crowd, with one incidentally for the princess—he proceeded to take from his breast a roll of parchment tied with narrow ribbon and sealed with a large red seal. As he drew it out and rearranged his coat his hand trembled. It, too, was yellow white. The fellow seemed to have no blood in him.

Virginia, standing now shoulder to shoulder with the man in gray and crimson, had just time to feel a stirring of dislike and perhaps curiosity when a great cheer arose from thousands of throats. The square rang with a roar of loyal acclamation. Men waved tall hats, soft hats and green peasant hats with feathers. Beautifully dressed women grouped on the high decorated balconies waved handkerchiefs or scattered roses from gilded baskets. Women in gorgeous costumes from faroff provinces held up half frightened, half laughing children, and then a white figure on a white charger came riding into the square under the triumphal arch wreathed with flags and flowers.

Other figures followed—men in uniforms of green and gold and red on coal black horses—yet Virginia saw only the white figure, shining, wonderful.

Under the glittering helmet of steel, with its gold eagle, the dark face was clear cut as a cameo, and the eyes were bright with a proud light. To the crowd he was the emperor, a fine, popular, brilliant young man, who ruled his country better than it had been ruled yet by one of his house and, above all, provided many a pleasing spectacle for the people, but to Virginia he was far more—an ideal Sir Galahad or a St. George strong and brave to slay all dragon wrongs which might threaten his wide land.

"What if he should never love me?" was the one sharp thought which pierced her pride of him.

The people were proud, too, as he sat there controlling the white war horse, with its gold and silver trappings, the crusted jewels of many orders sparkling on his breast, while he saluted his subjects in his soldier's way.

For a moment there was a pause, save for a shouting which rose and rose again. Then he alighted, whereupon important looking men with ribbons and decorations came forward bowing, to receive the emperor. The ceremony of unveiling the statue of Rhaetia was about to begin.

To reach the great crimson draped platform on which he was to stand the emperor must pass within a few yards of Virginia. She gazed eagerly over the gay crowd. What if it should not open her? The girl's heart was in her throat. She could feel it beating. [illegible] and for a moment the tall white figure was lost in a mist which dimmed her eyes.

She had forgotten how she came to this place of vantage, forgotten the pale man in gray and red in whose shadow she had crept forward, but suddenly while her heart was at its loudest and while [illegible] her eyes [illegible] she grew conscious again of his existence, poignantly conscious of his close proximity. He seemed to her to stand that a quick start, a gathering of his muscles for a spring, shot like an electric message through her own body.

The mist was burnt up in the flame of a strange enlightenment, a certainty of sudden vision, which showed not only the hero of the day, the throng and the man who stood beside her, but something which was in the mind of that man as well.

"He is going to kill the emperor!"

It was as if a voice spoke the words in her ear. She knew now why she had struggled to win this place, why she had succeeded—that she had come to do [illegible] to [illegible].

Leopold was not half a dozen yards away. The man was coming nearer. No one but Virginia suspected evil. She alone had felt the thrill of a murderer's impulse in the tense cording of his muscles. She alone guessed what the roll of parchment hid.

"Save—save!" she cried, [illegible] whisper again, and she had no fear [illegible]. While the crowd cheered wildly for "Leopold!" a man in gray and red leaped outside of the [illegible] the white figure that [illegible] advanced. Something sharp and bright [illegible] turned the roll of parchment [illegible] in a streak of steely light.

Leopold saw, but not in time to swerve. The crowd shrieked, rushed forward too late, and the blade would have drunk his life had not the girl [illegible] the blow fell on [illegible] arm, [illegible] struck her in the arm below the shoulder.

The tall man [illegible] for her [illegible] that she was [illegible] [illegible]

OUR FIRST COMMONS

OLD LEGISLATIVE HOME STILL STANDS AT KINGSTON.

The Forerunner of the Present Federal House at Ottawa Is Now a Tiny Ramshackle Building in Frontenac County—Legislative Assembly and Council Then Stood For Commons and Senate Respectively.

The Parliament now sitting in that magnificent building that crowns old Barracks Hill, Ottawa, is the direct descendant of the first Parliaments of Upper and Lower Canada, which assembled one hundred and seventeen years ago at Newark (now Niagara, Ont.), and in the City of Quebec, for the transaction of the public business of the two provinces into which Canada had been divided by the Constitutional Act passed by the British Parliament in the preceding year. In the manner of its composition, in its procedure of business, in the rules of debate, but in a more limited extent, in its jurisdiction, the Federal Parliament of to-day is very similar to those two Provincial Parliaments which were the first that Canada knew. That similarity is due to the fact that our earliest as well as our later legislative bodies were created and modelled after the Parliament sitting at Westminster, the great mother of free, representative institutions throughout the civilized world. In the important matter of legislative jurisdiction there have been, through the course of our constitutional history, many changes and readjustments, and although our first Parliaments were not given as full powers as are now possessed by our whole legislative machinery of to-day consisting of the Federal Parliament and Legislatures of the nine autonomous provinces, still in some respects they were wider than the powers of the Federal Parliament, because now a certain portion of the legislative field is assigned to the Provincial Legislatures into which the Federal Parliament cannot enter. For instance, the Legislatures have exclusive [illegible] in matters relating to property and civil rights and to [illegible] of a purely local nature. The first Parliaments of Upper and Lower Canada were, within the scope of their powers, the only legislative bodies for the respective provinces in which they were set up.

Simcoe had selected Newark, now known as Niagara, as the capital of Upper Canada. It was not much more than a village, but as at that time the principal settlements of Upper Canada were in the Niagara peninsula and the adjoining districts, Newark was held to be the best place. A village had grown up at Kingston, and in several of the surrounding townships settlement had been made, but Kingston was thought to be too far east for a provincial capital.

According to Duncan Campbell Scott, the biographer of Simcoe, the first session of the Upper Canadian Parliament met in a rough wooden building known as the Freemasons' Hall. There on Sept. 17, 1792, gathered the members of the Legislative Council and of the House of Assembly and at high noon, accompanied by a guard of honor from the 5th Regiment, the Lieutenant-Governor [illegible] with a speech from the throne. Fine Old Gentleman Was Keen Book-lover and Ardent Gardener.

To go down into green Surrey to Farnham, [illegible] out of town on the pastoral Wey, and out to Moor Park and its Old World loveliness, is to gain an abiding interest in one of the finest types of one-time country gentleman, [illegible]. Further, if it be one's fortune, as it was mine, to turn over a bookstall the four leather-clad octavos entitled "The Works of Sir William Temple, Bart., with Lely's handsome portrait of the author, and printed in London in 1814," by [illegible], London, also others of Dame Osborne's [illegible] of Pope's acquaintance—his happiness will be complete. Uncompromising integrity, voiced with irony, was a marked characteristic of the Duke of Wellington. Once in India, after the British victory at Assaye, the envoy of the Nizam offered £70,000 for some information as to the districts to be assigned to his master.

General Wellesley, as the Duke then was, listened to the proposal with great gravity, and when the Indian had ceased to speak, said to him, "Can you keep a secret?"

The envoy was sure he had succeeded in his endeavor.

"Certainly, sahib," he said eagerly.

The Rev. H. J. Inglis, at a newsboys' Christmas dinner in Denver, amused his young audience with some striking instances of overfeeding, says the New York Times.

"'[illegible] carry me, but don't [illegible] me.'

"I asked a third lad, as the fruit and nuts came on, if he had made a good dinner.

"'[illegible], sir,' he answered, pressing his hand to his stomach; 'it don't hurt me yet.'"

Mark Twain was praising the New York Society of Good Cheer, of which he is the only man member.

A former president of the Canadian Women's Press Club, who is widely known by her pen name, Mary Markwell, tells the following story:

"When I was in London a couple of years ago, the opening of the British Parliament seemed to be something I ought to see. Being the President of the Canadian Women's Press Club, I considered it only necessary to send my official card to the Lord High Chamberlain and forthwith receive a card of admission to peerage seats!

"I awaited this recognition of my own importance until two days before Parliament opened, the last mail brought me nothing—the official Source of Parliamentary favors had, probably, lit his official pipe with my official card! Nevertheless, I began to realize how very big the British Parliament, and, incidentally, how very small the 'President of the Canadian Press,' etc., was. But the Canadian spirit dies hard—I wanted to witness this pageant of pageantry! Then I remembered.

"Wasn't Mr. Hamar Greenwood a House member? More, wasn't he a Canadian? I sat down and wrote Mr. Greenwood the following note:

"'Dear Mr. Greenwood—Parliament opens to-morrow. I am a Canadian woman in London. I want to see my King, and the Lord High Chamberlain-something-or-other won't let me. Can you help me? Signed M.M.'

"That night I cried myself to sleep in my S.W. Kensington lodgings, feeling that the talk of the 'Imperial spirit' was [illegible] of its elixir 'at home.' Of course, I was Nobody—why should the great Lord High Chamberlain recognize in poor me my great-grand-mamma's right to Debrett? How I hated Lord High Chamberlains!

"Next morning dawned in a deluge of rain. Clad in working togs, I took the penny 'bus for No. 12 Charing Cross, where day after day I was enlightening 'decayed gentlewomen' on chances in Canada. I had given up all hope of seeing my King in his royal robes, and I had too much Canuck spunk left to go out in a raincoat and 'galoshes' to see him passing by. I went to my desk and set about opening a Vesuvius of mail enquiries.

"Suddenly the office door swung open and in whirled a strikingly handsome man, silk hat in hand and swinging a gold-headed cane-umbrella.

"'Are you Mary Markwell?'

"'Yes.'

"'My name is Greenwood. I got your note yesterday, but I wasn't able to secure you a ticket of admission until about an hour ago, by happy chance I got it for you' (extending an official looking envelope).

"'Oh, Mr. Greenwood!' (this in a despairing wail) 'I haven't got a decent hat this side of Kensington—and—and there the tears came), and it's after [illegible] and Parliament opens at [illegible].'

"'I'll call a cab,' said the gentleman briskly, 'get ready to rush home and get your hat' (consulting his watch with tremendous gravity). 'You've just forty minutes left, and you can make it if you try.'

"Then Hamar Greenwood, British M.P., silk hatted and dressed for [illegible] [illegible]

Mary Markwell [illegible] adds: "The only time I ever felt like joining the 'votes for women' order, I would like to be able to vote for Hamar Greenwood!"

Neglect of a cough or a cold often leads to serious trouble. To break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable, mix two ounces of Glycerine, a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. THE FARMERS' OPPORTUNITY

Amid the numerous articles that are being written as to the cause of high prices and the increased cost of living the farmer of today must surely see the word of opportunity in clear unmistakeable letters. The increased cost of living is due to the great increase in cost to consumers of staple farm products and this is due to no other cause than decreased or stationary production and increased domestic demand all over this continent. The export of eggs from Canada, once considerable, has practically ceased, exports of butter have fallen from 31,000,000 lbs. to 6,000,000 lbs., exports of cheese from 215,000,000 to 160,000,000 lbs., exports of bacon in pounds are more than cut in two and give promise of disappearing if present conditions prevail. In the province of Ontario, the records of the agricultural department show that during the last ten years, as compared with the previous nineteen years, there has been a great decrease in the production of hogs milch cows, beef cattle, sheep and lambs and poultry, but a small increase in the yield per acre of wheat, peas, oats, barley and corn and a correspondingly small increase in the yield per acre of hay and clover. On the other hand the census return show the population is increasing year by year.

In the United States during the last ten years, the population has increased by some twelve millions. This population is to be found chiefly in the cities and towns and therefore represents that addition to the great body of consumers. The department of agriculture at Washington is responsible for the statement that notwithstanding this great increase in population and consequent increase in demand during the ten years, hogs in farmers hands have decreased 25 per cent. there being 47,000,000 hogs held by farmers in January 1910, as compared with 62,000,000 in January 1900. The population increased 15 per cent. and the number of hogs decreased 25 per cent. Cattle of all kinds have increased only 1,300,000 head and sheep have decreased 4,300,000 head. The receipts of live stock at seven primary points in the United States for the month of January, were 30 per cent. less than the same month in 1909. Receipts in hogs at the same points for January were 32 per cent. less than in the same month in 1908 and 40 per cent less than for the same month in 1907.

In this province the population is greatly increasing year by year and so is the sum total of farm products. But whatever the ratio of increase in farm production to that of population may be, the fact remains that this year will see carload after carload of butter, eggs poultry, cheese cured meats, and fruit imported to meet the demand of the consumers. The farms of Alberta will not produce enough of these commodities to meet requirements and they will have to be brought in from outside, thus curtailing by so much the amount available for export to other countries.

What is the remedy? A common purpose on the part of all identified with agriculture to seek to benefit the output of our farms through the exercise of that quality of effort which reflects sound intelligence, sound industry and sound methods. Sound organization upon every farm in this province, the introduction of mixed farming on a much broader scale the use of better seed and the improvement in the character of the stock would show such an increase in farm production as would stagger the farmers themselves. The spring season is opening now and much can be done this year. — Alberta Homestead.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

The agriculturist is optimistic just now. And he can well afford to be. Look the field over carefully. Has there ever been a time in the history of this country when the market end of the farmer's business was as satisfactory as it is right now? Prices are high, the buyer is right on the spot looking for the goods. Horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, in fact nearly the whole list of what the farmer has to sell, have only to be offered to be sold right off the bat. The one fly in the ointment is, that the farmer has so little to sell. The country is well cleaned up of everything in the stock line. It will be pretty clear sailing for some time to come. It is easier to get out of stock than to get into it again. In any case therefore it will be a year or two before things get back into the normal so far as production is concerned. It looks as if the consumer would have to pay pretty dear for his beef, lamb and pork for a good while yet. A couple of years ago when the boom in horse breeding began, not a few were of the opinion that the business would soon be overdone. There are no indications of it at the present time. Horses are booms these days. Almost anything on four legs in the shape of a horse, more particularly if he has any work in him, will sell for what could have been considered extravagant prices several years ago. In Ontario, for example horses have been selling by the thousand this winter. Breeding mares have been bought up by the hundreds. While it is satisfactory to know that they have not been taken out of Canada it looks as if the breeding ground for heavy horses was being transferred from the east to the west, from Ontario to the Prairie Provinces. With an eye to the main chance the Westerner has not been content with left overs. He has sought the best, and as he was willing to put up the price, has secured many of the best breeding mares for his broad acres west of the great lakes. What is his gain is Ontario's loss.— Canadian Farm.

A St. Paul company is bringing in several trainloads of American farmers to occupy 40,000 acres of land Southwest of Vermilion.

One of the first things essential to town publicity is that you believe in your town. Believe that it is going to advance and get to work and make the town.

POULTRY CULTURE

"Poultry culture has been reduced to a science. Science is just another word for good business education" and "the man who keeps hens is not so much of a philosopher as the man who has the hens keep him." These two quotations are from the pen of Michael K. Boyer and are good sound sense. The reader will do well to consider them.

The hatching season is again at hand, in fact many chicks are out already. Leghorns, etc. are best hatched in the middle of April, they are not likely to moult in the fall if hatched at this time. When hatched in March and laying in September they sometimes moult in the fall. This means that they stop laying for a month or more while if hatched a few weeks later they will not likely stop laying to moult. This has been the experience of one of the best paying egg farms. It's worth remembering.

You cannot get chicks of the heavy breed out too early; Cochins, Brahmas and Langshans especially. They do not develop nearly so fast as the lighter breeds and as a consequence, if late hatched they will not have attained full growth by the winter, and unless they get extra good care during the winter they wont grow much then, so it is wise to hatch them as early as you possibly can.

Are you feeding any green bone? You had better add it to the ration of the hens. It has a greater nutritive value than meat scraps, dried blood or animal meal; so says Professor James E. Rice. The mash fed by a large egg farm is composed of half green-cut bone.

Water is necessary for the formation of the egg, so see that the hens have plenty of it and nice and fresh too.

Milk is a food and one of the cheapest that you can feed your hens.

Incubators are now recognized as the uptodate means of hatching chicks if any quantity are desired. Even if only a limited number are to be hatched it will pay to invest in an incubator. You can make good money by hatching for your neighbors, if you dont need the machine for your own use all the season. Every little bit helps.

Best shut the laying ducks up every night and keep them in part of the morning so as to have the ducks all lay in the house. They are apt to lay their eggs all over if not shut in.

Turkeys do better if kept away from hens. One successful turkey raiser near here follows this method with good success. In the spring when the turkeys are ready to lay they are put in an enclosure in the orchard. Quite a strip is fenced with netting, and barrels and boxes covered with brush are placed around in the enclosure. The turkeys will choose a nest, and if shut in this yard for a while will soon learn to come here every day to lay. The nests chosen by the turkeys are covered over so that the rain cannot get through, and then the turkeys are allowed to set there. Good results have always resulted from this plan.

Vermilion School Notes

His Worship Mayor Stephens is to occupy the chair at our concert on Friday evening next April 8th.

Besides the programme numbers, advertised in the window-cards, there is to be a short farce staged by a group of our students under the superintendance of Mr. R. Dunsmore. Mr. O. E. Slater has also promised some enlivening airs on his excellent gramophone, and Miss Witherbee is expected to read, and Mr. A. Pilkie to sing.

As our advanced classes are now entering upon the last quarter before the examinations, more diligence is generally observable and it is to be hoped the excellent showing our class made last year will be repeated by both Standard V and VI.

We work at present at a considerable disadvantage in Natural science subjects, such as Botany, Agriculture and Physical Science, owing to the entire absence of any apparatus. While this is much needed, an even more noticeable need is apparatus for taking physical exercises. Mind and body being independent can only develop to advantage in harmony. Each requires suitable exercise. We hope soon to see both the above wants supplied. During inclement weather especially in winter, physical exercise indoors becomes a necessity for students in the advanced work, especially; outdoor sports fill the bill fairly well in summer. "All work and no play etc." Mental work without appropriate relaxation as well as any other work produces drudges. Animation in boys and girls is largely dependent on interest in physical exercises and games.

The wrong bundle of ready prints was printed last week and a chapter of the serial missed— this week we are running the number missed.

Popular Lawyer Leaving Town

C.L. Freeman to Join Well Known Edmonton Law Firm

We regret to learn that Mr. C. L. Freeman, who has been practising law in the town for nearly two years, is about to leave us, having entered into partnership arrangements with Messrs. Boyle & Parlee, one of Edmonton's leading legal firms.

Mr. Freeman has been one of the town's most progressive and public-spirited citizens, and his place will be very difficult to fill, especially as president of the revived Board of Trade. He is as well an able member of the town council. It is a high complement to Mr. Freeman's standing as a lawyer, that he is to enter the firm, the senior member of which is head of the insurgent movement, and the junior member employed as counsel on the Great Waterways railway investigation.

Sandstone Is Here En Bloc

Former Reports Regarding Existence and Quality Fully Verified Formation Tested for 100 Ft

Blocks of high grade sand-stone taken from the deposits adjacent to the town are to be seen at the office of the Standard. Several parties visited the ledges and procured sandstone blocks of the very highest quality. There is no discount as to the grade of the sandstone as it was seen by a party who was practically brought up in a quarry and he has pronounced it to be of the very best class of sand-stone.

About three years ago these deposits were tested and bored to a depth of one hundred feet. Samples were submitted at that time to an expert and pronounced to be of the very finest quality. The tests were conducted by private parties and development work was only prevented from lack of sufficient capital to properly work the deposit.

FLEMING AND THE CABLE.

Sir Sandford Once Engineered a Real Raid.

One of Canada's grand old men, Sir Sandford Fleming, K.C.M.G., LL.D., etc., Chancellor of Queen's University, celebrated the eighty-third anniversary of his birth at his comfortable home in Ottawa recently, and the venerable knight was the recipient of numerous telegrams of congratulation from practically all parts of the world, for, thanks to his ... with the movements for the adoption of standard time, the extension of British cables, etc., Sir Sandford has more friends outside the confines of this broad Dominion than most prominent Canadians can boast of. In connection with Sir Sandford's energetic efforts to carry out the great Pacific cable project a characteristic story about him comes all the way from Australia, where one who claims to have been a co-worker with Sir Sandford has been relating before a semi-official audience, what he described as some of the inside secrets of the cable campaign. It appears, according to this gentleman's narrative, that in January, 1894, delegates from Canada and the several Australian colonies met in London to discuss the cable matter with Lord Ripon, then Secretary of State for the Colonies. An insurmountable difficulty seemed to be the choice of a suitable spot for the landing of the Pacific ends. Necker Island in the Hawaiian group was considered the ideal spot, but it was not British territory, and it was felt that the United States would before long secure possession or control of it. Sir Sandford urged that Britain at once purchase or otherwise obtain possession of the little islet and it was agreed that negotiations should be opened with the Hawaiian Government. This was done, but the negotiations proceeded in the usual leisurely diplomatic way, and, with friends of the United States, Germany and other foreign powers, active in Hawaii, it looked as though the negotiations would never be concluded through the customary channel.

Sir Sandford at this critical moment, so the Australian narrative stated, determined on a "coup" quite as dramatic and as startling as that taken by Dr. Jameson and his Rhodesian raiders. He sent a retired naval officer to Honolulu to make preparations for formally taking possession of Necker Island in the name of Queen Victoria as soon as he received instructions from Sir Sandford. Arrangements were made for chartering a vessel for the enterprise, but ...

TO DEVELOP A BEAUTIFUL ARM

I MIGHT change the story of the ancient chronicler and begin my talk this week by singing of arms and the woman, for, indeed, a beautiful arm is one of the most important factors of grace and good looks. The question is vital to you, for words from the headquarters of fashion are suggesting that short sleeves are coming upon us. The arms, then, must be improved, softened and developed, and I am giving today a few suggestions that I am sure will help my readers.

We have had dimpled and smiling elbows flaunted at us to our chagrin, because this part of the arm seems to grow unattractively hard with age or work. The skin can be softened by a ... Place the liquid in a deep ... of plate and allow the elbows to rest in the friendly oil for fifteen or twenty minutes. Then massage it gently into the skin and prepare for the next step.

John Thompson is back to Vermilion after an absence of a few months in the States. We regret to learn that he was delayed in returning by illness.

Quite a number of friends of E. Maxwell of Mannville recently accompanied him into town to see him off for the Emerald Isle, where he is making his future home.

W. S. Cash, manager of the Alberta Western Lumber Co., town, who has been on a trip through the Okanagan Valley and other portions of British Columbia, returned to town the latter part of last week.

A. E. Howard of Vancouver, B. C. arrived in town Thursday night. Mr. Howard is here on very important business matters in connection with some large interests in the town and neighborhood.

His Lordship, the Bishop of Saskatchewan, passed through Vermilion Monday. While here he was the guest of Rev. H. L. and Mrs. Day at the parsonage.

A. H. Lewellen of Mannville, was in town the first part of the week and reported that seeding was in full swing in many parts of that district, especially so to the north-west of the town.

The Rev. H. L. Day has obtained a month's leave of absence from the Bishop of the diocese, and with Mrs. Day will leave for Toronto, Ont., the first of next week. During the absence of Mr. Day arrangements have been completed by the Rev. Mr. Trench, M. A., to continue the regular Sunday services as usual.

E. T. Brebencher, auctioneer, of Islay, has a sale billed for Tuesday next April 12th when he will sell a good list of horses, cattle and farm machinery for W. H. Springford, Sec. 2 Tp. 52, Rge. 3, ten miles north-east of Islay and eight miles north of Kitscoty. He has also another sale billed for Thursday, April 14 at Sec. 28-52-5, Chas. and James Mayer, where a huge list of stock, implements, etc. are down for sale. Both of these are [illegible]

W. H. McClinton returned last week from a week's travel in which he covered most of the west. Warman, Regina, Moose Jaw, Weyburn and Winnipeg were among the places he touched at. He is awaiting word at present from Regina in expectation of assuming the management at Weyburn of a branch wholesale grocery [illegible]

A. H. Edwards of Vermilion, is opening up a general store business on a lot on his land Sec. 27-48-5, in the Canton district, south-east of here. Mr. Edwards has purchased the McClinton feed grinding outfit which he will instal and operate in connection with the general store business. For a time he intends to run the mill here in town.

Joe Robinson, the land man, reports prospects for a big season in land deals as good. Many prospective buyers are spying out the land and Mr Robinson reports two sales within the past few days. He disposed of a choice half section north-west of Vermilion to a party from Minnesota at a good figure. The purchaser has returned to the States to bring out his family and effects. The McGinnon farm recently purchased by Mrs. Robinson, has also been turned over at a profitable figure.

J. D. Thurber has rented his land and will devote all his time to brushing.

Rev. H. A. Edwards and Mrs. Edwards reached Islay on their return from England, Saturday. Mr. Mason also returned with them.

J. G. Arthur, the well known dealer and breeder of pure bred stock, has added a fine bunch of five thoroughbred Ayrshires, which were unloaded here last week.

"Politics make strange bed fellows," but it wasn't a case of politics with the young man who slept peacefully with the barber's pole, a few nights ago. The joke was [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dunsmore reached home from the East last week. Gord received the heartiest congratulations of his numerous friends who wish them both long life and all prosperity.

Geo. Shortridge is in town from north of the Saskatchewan. Mr. Shortridge states that his district now has telegraphic communication with the outside world, the government having established a station with E. O. Boyd in charge of same.

The sale of work, held by the Women's Auxiliary of the Church of England in the Western Canada block last Thursday, was a success in every way and well patronized throughout the afternoon and evening. During the sale light refreshments were served. In the evening a concert was given and many choice numbers rendered by well known local talent of Vermilion. The total proceeds amounted to close to ninety dollars.

H. S. Russell and Sons of Landonville, have purchased a 20 h. p. International Traction Engine and plowing outfit for immediate delivery; also a Aultman Taylor Separator for fall delivery. The whole outfit was sold to Messrs. Russell by the well-known local implement dealers Messrs. West Brothers. The enterprise of Mr. Russell and his sons in introducing a power plowing outfit into his district is commendable as well as speaking well for the Landonville country, from a grain producing standpoint.

Cold Lake, the haven of fishermen, is a beautiful body of water lying north and a little east of Vermilion, ten miles wide and 14 miles long, teeming with trout and whitefish. During the last winter trout weighing as much as 45 lbs. have been taken. Farther north lies a lake of which as yet we hear little, namely Goose Lake. It is known to be 45 miles in length and some 15 to 18 miles in width. Fishing licenses are not being granted for these waters. CLARKE AND MINTY WILL NOT APPEAR BEFORE COMMISSION

S. A. Robson, Solicitor for A. & G. W. Railway also Withdraws From Inquiry Which Resumed Its Sittings this Morning

The Royal Commission on the Alberta and Great Waterways deal received sensational information when it resumed its sittings Wednesday morning after a two-week adjournment. The news reached the court through the senior counsel W. L. Walsh, and had been conveyed to him by letter only a few minutes before meeting.

"Before the commission proceeds further," he said, "I wish to convey to it information which I have just received. I have been informed by Mr. Robson K. C., who has been acting for the A. & G. W. Ry. Co. that he has withdrawn from the inquiry. He has just sent me a letter to that effect.

"Is Mr. W. R. Clark here?" the counsel then enquired, and there being no response Mr. Walsh proceeded with his statement.

"In addition to this information it has been intimated to me by Mr. Minty that Mr. Clarke will not be present and that he, Mr. Minty had returned to Winnipeg. This information came to me in a letter marked personal and I am not at liberty to disclose the contents but Mr. Minty states that if the commission goes to Winnipeg to take evidence he will be glad to give evidence there. In view of these developments of the last half hour Mr. Johnstone and myself are somewhat nonplussed.

"Your lordships will remember on the opening day that Mr. Robson said that Mr. Clark will be in attendance and we intimated by letter that we required him here this morning so as to clear up the matter of production. Relying on this we had prepared an outline of the work to be brought before the commission.

"We intended after production of documents to call Mr. J. Cornwall. He and his counsel are here. How far the change in Mr. Clark's plans will change the plans of the commission it is utterly impossible to say until Mr. Johnstone and myself have a consultation.

Evidence Necessary.

"The evidence of Clark, Minty and others, whose presence we had every reason to expect, is absolutely necessary to a complete inquiry, and every effort must be made to secure that evidence.

"Therefore, we would ask your lordships, after the witness is examined this morning, to clear up the question of documents as far as possible, to allow an adjournment till we have time for consultation.

Mr. Bennett May Withdraw

R. B. Bennett said that in view of the absence of Clarke and Minty the continuance of this investigation was nothing more or less than a farce. Mr. Robson, a member of the bar, solemnly stated on the first day of the commission that Mr. Clark would be here. Mr. Minty had also given his assurance that he would be here. He had come and given evidence under oath at the first sittings and was here yesterday [illegible]

With these conditions he did not think he would be further warranted in endeavoring to bring out the facts before the commission. The condition that had just risen was most lamentable. The commission had become the sport and by-word of two men who came before it and then made it a laughing stock.

Justice Scott: "Do I understand you to say you withdraw from the commission?"

Mr. Bennett replied that he had not yet seriously considered the matter, but he did not see how he could be of much assistance to the commission under conditions as they at present existed.

"You do not wish to make any personal reflection on Mr. Robson?" inquired Justice Harvey.

"I wish to say this, that it was discourteous of Mr. Robson to have withdrawn, as he did, without giving any explanation to the commission.

With these explanations and remarks the hearing of witnesses was begun.

Grades of Milk.

New York's milk trouble reminds Washington of the speech made here by Dr. John Fulton, secretary of the Tuberculosis Congress. In it Dr. Fulton traced the origin of tuberculosis to impure milk in most cases. Getting pure milk, he said, was a difficult task, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Post.

Penetration of Light.

Experiments show that light can be seen through a clean cut opening of not more than one forty-thousandth of an inch. This fact was determined by taking two thoroughly clean straight edges and placing a piece of paper between the surfaces at one end, the opposite end being allowed to come together. The straight edges being placed between the eye and a strong light in a dark room, a wedge of light was perceived from the ends between which the paper was placed and the opposite, which were brought together. The thickness of the paper being known, the distance apart of the two edges of the small end of the wedge of light was easily calculated.

Quenching Thirst at Sea.

Many years ago Dr. King suggested to Captain Kennedy that thirst might be quenched by dipping the clothing in salt water and putting it on without wringing it out. The captain on being cast away succeeded in persuading some of the men to follow his example, and they all survived, while [illegible] refused and drank salt water became delirious and died. Captain Kennedy goes on to say, "After these operations we uniformly found that the violent thirst went off and the parched tongue was cured in a few minutes when we had bathed and washed our clothes, while we found ourselves as much refreshed as if we had received some actual nourishment."—London Standard.

"So you wouldn't let Bombazine Bill off on the jury that tried the horse thief?"

"No," answered Three-Finger Sam, "we do things fair and square in Crimson Gulch. Bill's a good man, but the fact that he runs the only undertakin' business in the country couldn't help prejudicin' him against the defendant."—Washington Star.

MOTHERS FEEL SAFE WITH BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mothers who have used Baby's Own Tablets say they feel safe when they have this medicine in the house, as the Tablets are a never-failing cure for the ills of babyhood and childhood and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine contains no poisonous opiates. Mrs. Walter Barr, Mountain Grove, Ont., says:—"My little boy suffered terribly when teething and from constipation. Nothing I gave him did the least good until I gave him Baby's Own Tablets and these brought him speedy relief. Every [illegible] of young children should keep the Tablets in the house." BRUISES & SKIN SORES—QUICK CURE.

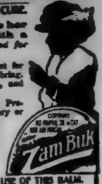
A little child ran crying to her mother the other day with a nasty flesh wound and asked for Zam-Buk.

There lies a more powerful argument for Zam-Buk than even the scientists can bring. The child had had Zam-Buk before, and knew it eased pain and healed.

Zam-Buk works in two directions. Prevents worse results from a skin injury or skin disease (such as festering and blood poisoning) while it repairs the damage already done. Zam-Buk is entirely herbal, is pure, contains no trace of animal fat or mineral coloring. Surest and quickest known healer.



FATHER AND SON BENEFIT FROM USE OF THIS BALM.

Mr. Walter Adams, 177 Railway Ave., Stratford, says:—"My son, William, while playing barefooted about the backyard, cut his little toe on the sharp edge of a piece of tin. The toe was cut at the first joint, and almost severed from the foot. My wife hurriedly bathed it with warm water, afterwards applying some lint thickly spread with Zam-Buk. The healing balm quickly checked the flow of blood, eased and soothed the pain, and prevented inflammation and more serious results. In a few weeks Zam-Buk healed the wound so nicely that my son was able once more to go about, and also to wear his shoes without the slightest inconvenience. Not only is Zam-Buk valuable for wounds and cuts, but, used as an embrocation, I have also found it effective for rheumatic pains."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, eczema, ... and all skin diseases. ... Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

The balloon pilot landed in the little backwoods village and told the loiterers the thrilling story of his escape.

Mr. G. D. Colwell, of Walkerville, Ontario, was stricken down with La Grippe in 1899 and it left him in very bad condition. He says: I was all run down and bordering on Consumption. This is how I was when I began to take Psychine, in a low nervous state; but from the first bottle I began to improve. It did marvels for me and brought me back to health ... the body against the attacks of La Grippe and is a sure preventative. AN EXCITING GAME.

Buddy Taught It to His Grandma and Explained It to His Father.

There is a good old lady who looks upon all games of cards as a menace to the soul of man. There is not a playing card in her daughter's home, where she resides, and the person convicted of indulging in solitaire, casino, euchre or any similar pastime forfeits that old lady's esteem and wins in the place her sincere and deep sympathy.

She has a grandson who is not quite so saintly. He is going to high school and has been known to win 35 cents in one afternoon at penny ante [illegible] and can riffle a pack without spilling any on the floor. He and his grandmother are great pals, and the other evening his father, who left a great many things behind him when he married, was startled to hear her exclaim:

"I'll see you and raise you three, grandma!"

On the family sewing table grandma and the young man were playing an exciting game. They were using a pack of cards designed for a game known as our feathered friends and a dish of beans. On each card was the picture of a different kind of bird.

Presently grandma in an excited tone piped up:

"Now, Buddy, you forgot to ante again."

Father became interested. Grandma stayed up until 9 o'clock, half an hour past her bedtime, and when she reluctantly arose she said:

"Well, Buddy, I have nineteen more beans than you have, and I'll get all of yours away from you tomorrow night."

"My son," said father after grandma had left the room, "what's the game you were playing with grandma?"

"It's called beans," said his son. "You see, these cards are divided into four groups—birds of prey, song birds, game birds and domestic fowls. There are thirteen of each, and they are graded. The eagle, lark, grouse and turkey count the highest. The dealer gives each player five cards, and each one can bet ... as many as he wants and draw as many more. Everybody puts one bean in the middle of the table at the beginning"—

"I ... think I understand," said father. "Let you and I play a little game, so's you can teach me how."

... the last of Buddy's beans at 10.30.

WHEN A WOMAN FAINTS

FAINTING is the sudden loss of consciousness due to an enfeebled action of the heart. A low rate of respiration and extreme pallor accompany this condition. The clear head of the outsider is all that is necessary to restore the person to consciousness, and my little talk today is to bring before your minds some of the necessary and effectual steps in the treatment of one who has fainted.

The causes of fainting are many. A general rundown and weak condition is sometimes brought to the knowledge by fainting spells. There is, of course, fainting that results from intense pain, from lack of fresh air, from an insufficient amount of nourishing food, or from a shock to the mind.

In any one of these cases women are on the fainting list more than men. But the necessary facts once acquired by you will be helpful in any emergency of this kind.

I have seen ignorant persons doing the very thing to a fainting woman that militates against the recovering of consciousness. A person who has fainted must not be kept in an upright position.

Place the body in a flat position, and if possible, have the head a little lower than the feet. The heart will be aided in its work of pumping the blood to the brain and head. When this is done, and the flushed, natural condition of the skin is evidence of the restored circulation, the return of consciousness soon follows.

As soon as this very important step is taken, loosen all tight clothing at the neck and waist. Corset strings should be cut, if there be difficulty encountered collars and belts should be detached. The object is to secure an easy condition of respiration. Fresh air must be taken into the lungs in great quantities. The removal of tight clothing assists in this action. That is one reason why a fainting person must not be surrounded by a ring or hedge of the curious and thoughtless onlookers.

A brisk rubbing of the hands will bring the blood from the heart to the surface of the body. Remember that your aim is to stimulate the heart, which has decreased its speed.

Every one knows the efficacy of the cold-water dash, that shocks the exterior muscles, thereby bringing the blood and its warmth back to the head. This can be given to the forehead or the hands.

Smelling salts stimulate circulation. Their refreshing odor is the last of the quick treatment that usually is effective.

Of course, I must insist upon the advice of a physician if fainting spells border on the chronic, or if a long duration of the unconscious condition is prevalent. The investigation of such cause is necessary, for the causes are probably serious and deserving of medical attention.

Because a woman faints do not lose your good sense and ability to act quickly and sensibly. Follow these directions and your aid to the injured will be extremely helpful.

WHAT'S WATT'S

We are pleased to notice that there is a continued interchange of editorial matter between the Edmonton Capital and our esteemed contemporary, particularly utterances respecting the A. & G. W. R. investigation. We regret, however, to notice that while the editor of the Capital credits the editorials which it copies, to the Signal, in other words renders to Caesar the things that are Caesar's our contemporary is not always so particular, and the question might well arise in the minds of some readers "What's Watt's and what's Caesar's" We refer especially to a long editorial in the last week's issue of our esteemed contemporary in which credit is not given to the Capital, from which it has apparently been taken in toto.

A good start in the season's operations means so much to Western Canada that it is hardly surprising that, with a great deal of work already done upon the land hope is running high that 1910 will be the biggest year in the history of the country. Up to the present 1905 has been the most satisfactory since large areas came under cultivation. The yield per acre that year was very high and there is much about the present spring to suggest that of a half decade ago. A Beaver Lake correspondent writes "Spring work is now in full blast, though it is probable that the bulk of the wheat will not go in till April. In 1905 some wheat was sown in February but that sown in April was just as good, if not better and was cut just about as early. That year was an ideal one in most respects with huge yields of first class grain. May this one go it one better if that is possible.

SPECTACULAR BUT HARMLESS

No Danger of Being Swat by Halley's Comet

Washington, April 11 Halley's comet was seen here yesterday for the first time by Prof. Hall of the Naval Observatory and his assistant through a 26-inch telescope. For about fifteen minutes the comet remained visible to the naked eye. Popular apprehensions regarding the harm to the earth and its inhabitants during the visit of the comet to this part of the universe is unfounded. The tail of the comet through which the earth probably will pass will be noticeable only as an absolutely harmless illuminating gas or dust. It may produce electrical and magnetic effects that can be detected only by self-recording instruments.

Everything Satisfactory

Reports from all sides and personal interviews further substantiate the statement made by the Standard last week that fully 75 per cent of the prepared land will be sown to wheat. Splendid headway is being made with seeding and the grain goes into a well prepared seed bed. The conditions have remained ideal and all grain will be in early compared with former years.

This week farmers are up to their neck getting in the grain.

Will Hold For Higher Prices

Twelve An Acre Lowest Price For Canada West Land Holdings

London, April 9. - At the annual meeting yesterday of the Western Canada Land Company, Major General Sir Ronald Lane chairman said that the small amount of land sold has been the result of the deliberate action of directors, who had been encouraged to hold the land by the satisfactory development of Western Canada. This action had been amply justified as they have sold 200,000 acres of eastern land at six per cent. profit and accepted money on 84,000 acres at $9 an acre. They did not intend to sell any more below $12 to $15. Reference was also made to the development of the company's coal field west of Edmonton the capital of which would be $1,500,000. Shareholders might calculate on what would be the value of their lands then.

Horses Shot At Stettler

Stettler, Alta., April 8—Saturday evening last, James Duckworth had two horses shot in the neighborhood of McCoig's livery barn, one of the horses dying and the other being badly injured. Suspicion fell on a man named Ed. Ekiles, who worked round the barn, and who has since disappeared. A warrant for him is in the hands of the Mounted police.

Preparing For Big Census

It Will Require 9,000 Enumerators for Dominion Census

Ottawa, April 8. Archibald [illegible], special census commissioner and other officials connected with the Dominion census branch of the Agricultural Department are already beginning preparations for the census of Canada which will be taken next year.

There will naturally be considerable interest in the census pertaining to the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan for though they were taken at a count as territories, this will be the first time their population has ever been taken as provinces. It is expected that 9,000 officials will be employed.

"A Devilish Bad Woman"

Toronto, Ont., April 10. "A devilish bad woman" was the subject of Rev. J. W. Pedley's sermon in Western Congregational church tonight. He referred to Jezebel and her marriage with Ahab. He advised his male hearers to be careful in the choice of lifepartners.

SILCHESTER

The wedding, which took place on February 23rd, was, owing to recent deaths in the families of the father and mother of the bride carried out as quiet as possible. The ceremony took place at Silchester church. The Rector (Rev. T. Langshaw) officiated The bride, Ellen Rebecca, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Staniford, looked neat and very becoming in a travelling costume and was given away by her father. She carried a beautiful bouquet of orchids. These lovely choice flowers were destined to do double service, having been sent as a present to Mr. and Mrs. James Goddard on the occasion of their golden wedding. Mrs. Goddard kindly presented them to the young couple at the farm, with all good wishes for their future matrimonial career. The bridegroom Thomas Garrett Parker Hobbis, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jethro William Hobbis of Lake View Farm Vermilion Alberta, Canada who is well known in this district having, as many of our readers will remember, resided at Silchester and Brimpton. The mother of the bridegroom was a daughter of the late Mr. John Parker of Elliotts Farm Silchester, who was for some years before his death the respected father of the [illegible] on his grace the Duke of Wellington's estates and by this marriage a link is forged which connects the two families who were neighbors for so many years in the past, and their parents were also joined together in holy wedlock at Silchester Church. The groomsman was Mr. Robert Staniford, who came over from Canada to be present at his sisters wedding, and returns with them on the 11th March. The bridesmaid was Miss Rebecca Rogers, who was attired in a blue costume. There was a quiet family gathering at the farm. The presents were many and useful. The wedding cake was presented by Mr. and Mrs. James Yates, and was a specimen of the excellency of the manufacturing productions of our village bakery. Mr. E. Strickland supplied the conveyances to the church and going away. The honeymoon was spent partly with the uncle and aunt of the bride at Ashmore Green, near Newbury, and with the aunt of the bridegroom, Rochester, Kent, having returned to Silchester for a final leave taking before departing for their home, Grange Farm, Vermilion Alberta Canada. They set sail on Friday, the 11th, from Liverpool in the Empress of Ireland, and will carry with them the good wishes of a large circle of friends for their future welfare in that distant land.

SYNOPSIS OF PROCEEDINGS OF ROYAL COMMISSION

[illegible]

The investigation into the A. & G. W. deal by the Royal Commission opened at Edmonton on March 29th and sat for three days during which time all available documentary evidence was laid before the commission. An adjournment was then made until April 13th.

Nothing sensational developed at the first session—files were produced and sworn to be complete—both Premier Rutherford and the Attorney General were examined. M. J. McLeod, E. Trowbridge, J. K. Cornwall and O. M. Biggar were also examined concerning the files. There was imposing array of legal talent present. Objection was taken to R. B. Bennett cross-examining every witness on the ground that his examination was for ulterior purposes. Justice Scott ruled in favor of Bennett, stating that he would be held within reasonable bounds.

The first sensational development in the investigation was offered by P. J. Nolan calling R. B. Bennett as a witness. Mr. Bennett however refused to produce any documents in his possession on the grounds that he had acquired his documents as a member of the legislature and later as a counsel in the commission and he would disclose them at the proper time. A number of more witnesses were examined.

The only real sensation in connection with the preliminary session of the Royal commission in the A. & G. W. railway contract was developed during the after noon of March 30, during the examination of George B. Henwood of the Edmonton law firm of Henwood & Harrison. His testimony resulted in the re- of what O. M. Biggar, who afterwards made a sworn statement on the matter, said was an attempt by Alfred Hawes of Toronto, one of the incorporators of the Athabasca railway Company to extort from J. K. Cornwall $250,000 in return for the possession of certain documents in the possession of Hawes. These documents are said to relate to the profits to be made from the flotation of [illegible] the railway company and Mr. Biggar claimed that the threat to issue a writ for $250,000 was made, just at the time the crisis was on in the legislature in order to create a stampede against the government. The mere issuance of a writ for $250,000 at that time, he said, would have meant the overthrow of the administration.

Mr. Henwood had been acting for a firm of Toronto solicitors of whom Hawes was the client. They had forwarded to him certain documents with instructions to deliver them over and cease pressing for claim only on payment of $250,000. Mr. Henwood approached Mr. Biggar who was then solicitor for J. K. Cornwall and the matter was discussed for some days. Eventually the $250,000 was reduced to $100,000, but while the matter was still pending the documents were recalled to Toronto and the copy Mr. Henwood said he had made for his own safety was also destroyed.

What Papers Contained

Mr Biggar stated in his evidence that the papers so far as he remembered, related in the first place Mr. Hawes claim that Minty had not given him some information that he had and in the second place that Minty and Cornwall had brought pressure to bear on him to abandon his rights in the railway company and having got him out, Minty and Cornwall made a deal with Clark whereby they were to make a lot of money out of the flotation of the bonds generally. The documents Hawes had in his possession so far as he could gather, related to an attempt which Hawes was going to make in 1907 to float the bonds of the Athabasca Company on the London market.

Revelation a Surprise.

The revelation which came out through Mr. Henwood's evidence was a big surprise as he stated that he did not expect to be called, until he received a subpoena in the morning. He refused to answer almost all the questions asked, claiming privilege as a result of the relations between counsel and client. In this attitude he was partially upheld by the commission.

The only question of importance which the commission ruled that he must answer was whether he had any communication from any member of the legislature relative to these documents.

"Yes, from Mr. Cornwall" was the reply.

This brought Mr. Biggar to his feet and upon being sworn he made his statement.

J. R. Boyle refused to produce documents in his counsel's hands and was upheld by the commission.

The commission adjourned until Wednesday, April 13th. In the meantime all the warrants now in the hands of the commission will be gone over by Messrs. Walsh and Johnstone and they will formulate the course of the enquiry.

L.I.D. 26-D-4

Council of L. I. D. 26-D. 4 met at J. H. Tovells Apr. 2nd 1910 as per resolution of last meeting. All the councillors present viz. J. J. Hope (chairman) J. H. Tovell, Jno. Symington and D. McNeil.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

The secretary read a communication from A. Eason, re a bridge he had built for his own convenience but which was also of convenience to the public. Mr. Eason wished some renumeration for the same. On motion of J. Symington and D. McNeil the letter was filed and Mr. Hope appointed to investigate and report at next meeting.

Council still being at variance over the expenditure and not getting much satisfaction from the letter written by the department, it was decided that G. M. Cundal should go to Edmonton and have a personal interview with the deputy minister, and thus get a lucid decision.

The following bills were passed and ordered paid: John McCallum taking affidavits, $1.50; G. Gerber, fixing bridge 52-8, $1.00; Alberta Western Lumber Co. lumber $7.15; The Standard, printing and stationary, $11.50; G. M. Cundal, salary, $50.

Council adjourned to meet at the call of the secretary.

Mannville, April 5th.

Appropriating a Crest.

There is a restaurant keeper with a new and capacious place on the upper west side about whom a story is going the rounds. This "mine host" makes no secret of the fact that when he arrived in America as a youth he had more fingers and toes than dollars and that it is due to his own industry that he now can command his little army of cooks, waiters and other help. When he opened an addition to his rooms recently, his friends were surprised to see a crest emblazoned conspicuously on various parts of the wall. The glassware also bears the crest.

"I say, Pat," said a friend recently, "where did you get that crest?"

"That belonged to a king of my name in Ireland," was the reply.

"And I suppose you were one of the royal family?"

"Well, I don't know," was the confidential reply. "I looked it up in the Astor library. There were several [illegible] [illegible] for, but I thought I'd take a chance."

Finding More Material.

"How large is your Mammoth cave?" asked the foreign tourist.

"Nobody knows exactly," said the native. "It's so large though and people get lost in it so easily that when a man is about to explore it he makes his will and wishes his weeping friends goodby."

"Most astonishing! I never heard that before."

"Oh, well, of course, it isn't quite so bad as that. I was only joking."

[Entry in foreign tourist's notebook: "Another curious custom among Americans is that when they tell an amazing lie they call it a joke."]

True Mercy.

"Prisoner," said the judge, "you are convicted of bigamy, of having married two wives. Have you any plea for mercy before the sentence of the court is imposed on you?"

"Yes, judge," said the prisoner. "Give me as long a sentence in jail as you can."

"What?"

"I want to keep out of the clutches of those two wives as long as I can, and a long jail sentence will be true mercy."

A RESOURCEFUL LAWYER.

[illegible]

A Philadelphia lawyer tells [illegible] that a picture of Fanny [illegible] once won a case for him. "A woman was suing the Pennsylvania Railroad company, of which Wayne MacVeagh was counsel, for $7,500 damages for the death of her husband. "Just a few days before the case was to have come up she happened into my office and announced that she had married again. 'Good Lord, madam,' I gasped, 'why couldn't you have waited until your case came up? It's next to impossible for me to get damages for you now.' She said she didn't care very much, and went out, seeming very happy. Well, it just happened that I had a photograph of Fanny [illegible] on my desk, and when the next day Wayne MacVeagh happened into my office to discuss quite another matter he picked up the photo and admired it. 'Who's your friend?' he asked. I had a sudden inspiration, and I said 'Why, that's the lady who is suing your company for $7,500.' 'The deuce you say,' said he. 'Handsome woman, isn't she?' 'She is, indeed,' I replied. 'H'm!' he exclaimed, looking at the picture closely, 'A deuced handsome woman, I should say. A deuced handsome woman.' There was a slight pause. 'What'll you take to settle this case?' he asked. I thought of my client's second marriage, and I fixed the figure at $5,000. The deal was consummated and the case never came to court."

Paid In His Own Coin.

Once in a way Archbishop Temple of Canterbury would get paid back in his own coin. A delightful instance of this is recorded. The church people of a certain parish are said to have strongly urged the bishop to find another sphere for their parson, whom they wished to get rid of. Dr. Temple summoned the obnoxious clergyman to his study and suggested a change of benefice. What was it, the parson wanted to know, that his people had to find fault with? "Well," said the bishop in the peculiarly harsh, strident voice that so sadly marred his preaching, "if you insist on knowing, it's your voice they complain of; they don't like your voice." "How curious!" said the clergyman. "A friend was with me at the cathedral the other day, when your lordship was preaching, and as he went out he said, 'What a fine sermon, but what an unfortunate voice!'"

An Accommodating Witness.

The witness on the stand had been bullyragged by the lawyer until his patience was exhausted.

"Now," said the attorney, "you say you saw the prisoner draw his pistol?"

"Yes."

"Remember you are on your oath."

"I'm not forgetting it."

"You are sure you are telling the truth?"

"Sure."

"No mistake about it?"

"None."

"You couldn't be persuaded into any other statement?"

Here the judge interposed.

"Oh, let him go on, your honor," pleaded the witness. "He's a lawyer, and he doesn't know the truth when he sees it, and I'm only too glad to show him how so far as I can."

The Monument Was a Misfit

A stately granite shaft had been erected in the cemetery of a Massachusetts town in memory of a man whose life had been anything but praiseworthy. None the less the monument was one of the sights to be shown to a stranger, and one day a former resident of the town who had been away for many years returned and was taken to see the granite obelisk. He was no stranger to the faults and failings of the man whom it eulogized with its gilded inscription, and, after silent contemplation of the shaft on all sides he said, "Well, if it's for goodness, it's too big, and if it's for badness it's not big enough."

Trained Chrysanthemums

Chrysanthemums in Japan are trained into numerous quaint shapes, like the old English yew trees, in the forms of peacocks, etc. In Tokyo there are gardens filled with life sized figures made entirely of the flowers and leaves, the faces being masks and these chrysanthemum figures accurately represent [illegible] warriors of [illegible] and [illegible]. One of the favorite [illegible] being a young lady with a fox's tail peeping from under her dress and a mask which by the touch of a string turns into Reynard's head.

CHAPTER EIGHT

N[illegible] all a window of the four [illegible] garden of the [illegible] with [illegible]

[illegible]

"There she is—there's the [illegible] young [illegible] who [illegible] I [illegible] there and saw her. I tell you [illegible] she an angel."

Instantly a hearty cheer went up, growing in volume and the green coated policemen had to keep back the crowd that would have stopped the horses and [illegible] for a good look into a [illegible].

Virginia shrank out of sight against the cushions, blushing and breathing quickly as she caught her mother's hand.

"Dear people—dear kind people!" she thought. "I love them for loving him! I wonder—oh, I wonder, if they will ever see me and cheer me driving by his side?"

She had chosen to wear the white dress with the pearls, though up to the last moment the grand duchess had [illegible]

[illegible] beauty. Long ago he had admired Baroness von Lyndal as passionately as it was in him to admire any woman, but that day was so far distant as to be remembered with scorn, and now such power as she had over him was merely to excite a feeling of irritation.

"I seldom trouble myself to jest," he answered.

"Ah, one knows that truly great men are born without a sense of humor. Those who have it are never as successful [illegible] as those without," smiled the baroness, who was by birth a Hungarian and loved laughter better than anything else except [illegible]. [illegible] That girl," as you so [illegible] call her, has two [illegible] at court. She is the English Miss Helen M[illegible] [illegible]

Indeed!" said the chancellor [illegible] [illegible] floating on the tide of music in the arms of Leopold. [illegible]

I thought you would have known, for you know most things before other people hear of them," went on the baroness. "Lady Mowbray and her daughter are staying at the Hoben [illegible] That's the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Dresden china [illegible] but [illegible] a great beauty.

"It's generous of you to say so, baroness," replied the chancellor. "I didn't see the young lady's face at all clearly yesterday. I was stationed too far away. And dress makes a great difference. As for what she did," went on the old man, whose coldness to women and merciless justice to both sexes alike had earned him the nickname of "Iron Heart"—"as for what she did, if it had not been she who intervened between the emperor and death it would have been the fate of another to do [illegible]

[illegible] possibilities it can do no harm to dwell upon them as ingredients for romance. Not for worlds would I suggest that his majesty isn't an example for all men to follow nor that poor, pretty Miss Mowbray could be tempted to indiscretion, but yet I'd be ready to make a wager, the emperor being human and the girl a beauty, that an acquaintance so romantically begun won't end with a bell and a call."

"What could there possibly be more, or what you hint at as more, in honor?"

The chancellor's voice was angry at last as well as stern, for he could not bear persistence in other people unless it were to further some cause of his own. To the delight of the woman who had once tried in vain to melt his iron heart, Count von Breitstein began to look somewhat like a baited bull. Really, said the baroness to herself, there was an actual resemblance in feature and [illegible] she searched for a few more little stinging barbed [illegible] derision.

What fun it was to ruffle the temper of the surly old brute who had humiliated her woman's vanity in days [illegible] past but not forgotten! She knew the chancellor's desire for the emperor's marriage as soon as a suitable match could be found and, though she was not in the secret of his plans, would have felt little surprise at learning [illegible] royal girl had [illegible] been selected. Now how amusing it would be actually to make [illegible] man tremble for the success [illegible] his hopes, even if it should turn out in the end to be impossible or undesirable to speed them!

[illegible] more in humor [illegible] after an instant [illegible] "Why, the emperor and the girl will see a great deal of each [illegible] [illegible] There'll be [illegible] instead of a short story [illegible] his majesty know the [illegible] of a—platonic friendship [illegible] and charming young [illegible]

"Because [illegible] of fashion if ever he was in among human beings with red blood [illegible] and because as [illegible] is above all [illegible] Doubles, I doubt that any woman, no matter how pretty or young, could wield a really powerful influence over his life."

"You doubt that? Then you don't know the emperor and you've forgotten some of the traditions of his house."

"Are you trying to warn me of disaster, baroness?"

She laughed. "Oh, dear, no—of nothing disagreeable! But I should be sorry to think, as you seem to do, that our emperor has no youth in his veins."

THE AMERICAN HEN.

A Wall Street Valuation of the Great Egg Producer.

It is claimed that the average production of a hen is 200 eggs per annum, but is safe to assume that the actual is much below this figure. Adopting the very conservative figure of 120 eggs per hen per annum, we find on the above basis of production there are 150,000,000 laying hens in the United States responsible for the production of 18,000,000,000 eggs.

At the farm price of 20 cents per dozen the total income derived from each hen annually would amount to $2. Allowing 40 cents for maintenance and 10 cents for depreciation, which latter would wipe out the market value of the hen in four years, irrespective of salvage when the period of production is over, the net profit per hen per annum amounts to $1.50.

This profit, according to Wall street standards, capitalized on a 5 per cent income basis, would place a nominal value of $30 on each hen. For the 150,000,000 hens this would amount to the enormous total of $4,500,000,000.

That the American hen can return a yield of 5 per cent per annum on a capitalization of $4,500,000,000 appears nothing short of remarkable, but such is the case. The entire outstanding capital obligations of the railroads of the United States in 1907 were less than four times this amount, or $16,[illegible], while the total paid out in interest and dividends represented but 4.65 per cent of this amount.—Wall Street Journal.

Daniel Webster's Carriage.

Captain Albert Hartge of Shady Side, Anne Arundel county, owns a carriage which was once the property of Daniel Webster and which is still a highly serviceable vehicle. Captain Hartge has been using it for several years and says it is far more roomy and [illegible] days. The carriage is a phaeton, built on high springs, being as good and strong now as the day it was [illegible]. It is constructed of white hickory and the great lamps, dashboard, rails, handles, etc., are of solid copper, heavily silver plated. The old carriage was the favorite vehicle of Webster at his home near Marshfield, Mass., and was sold to a Marylander several years after his death at a sale in Boston. The purchaser brought it to Baltimore and stored it away in a stable, intending to ship it to his country place in Howard county. Before doing so he died, and the old carriage was again put up under the hammer. Captain A. S. Byrne, an oyster packer of this city, happened to attend the sale and bought the old vehicle for a very small sum and later gave it to his friend Captain Hartge, who prizes it highly.—Baltimore Sun.

Airships and Fog.

The Germans are considering the problem of how aeronauts are to determine their location at night or in a fog. An ingenious engineer has proposed for the convenience of those traveling at night a very complete net work of signal lights which will enable any aeronaut at some little distance above the earth's surface to determine his location with considerable precision. To such special signal lights naturally signals by bell or siren can be added to be used in case of fog. Dr. Ballingmaier of the imperial observatory at Wilhelmshaven has, however, proposed a very simple adjustment for the equipment of the aeronaut which will enable him to locate his position with some measure of accuracy without the use of eye or ear as dependent upon terrestrial signals. [illegible] instrument in question is the so called "depth compass," devised by Dr. Ballingmaier and used by him lately during the expeditions of the German antarctic expedition.

Zoological Puzzle.

Italian zoologists have a puzzle to solve, [illegible] the discovery on Monte Blanc of the body of a white bear, which has been taken to Aosta. It was thought at first that the bear must have died some 200 years ago, and must have been preserved by the ice, since it has always been held that white bears vanished from the Alps [illegible] [illegible] days [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] London [illegible]

Police Justice.

There had been a dispute in the tenement house and one of the women principals obtained a summons for her neighbor to appear in the police court. The principals, with their witnesses, none of whom could speak English, filed into the courtroom, and the magistrate told the policeman on the bridge to find out what it was all about.

"How many witnesses have you?" asked the policeman of the woman who had obtained the summons.

"Six," she replied.

"And how many has she?"

"She has eight," said the woman.

"Go home," said the policeman in Yiddish, "you lose."—New York Sun.

Impurities of the Blood Counteracted.—Impurities in the blood come from defects in the action of the liver. They are revealed by pimples and unsightly blotches on the skin. They must be treated inwardly, and for this purpose there is no more effective compound to be used than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They act directly on the liver and by setting up healthy processes have a beneficial effect upon the blood, so that impurities are eliminated.

Samaritan Gets Stung.

Two strangers met at one of the small tables in a dining-car. They found a common bond in the effort to secure something to eat, and by the time the coffee came they were great friends, says the New York Sun.

"I wonder if you will do me a favor," remarked the first one as he covered his check with a substantial bill. The other man seemed receptive, and he continued:

"Have you a lower berth for tonight?" The man across the table nodded. "Well, I'm traveling with my mother, who is rather well along in life, and I'm anxious to make her comfortable. Would you be kind enough to give her your berth?"

"I should be delighted," responded the stranger.

"But where are you going to sleep?"

"Oh, that's all right," was the answer, "that's my lower over there."

Candidates Standing For Parliament as an Advertisement.

Amongst the members now returning to Parliament there are said to be some who did not wish to become M.P.'s. They were fighting seats from ulterior motives, praying fervently all the time that they might not be elected.

At the last general election one of the candidates, on finding that he was at the top of the poll, wrung his hands as if distraught and made such a miserable exhibition of himself that his elated and enthusiastic supporters were both amazed and sorely perplexed.

Why did his victory prove such a shock to him? In a minor degree because it was quite unexpected, but really because the young member knew only too well that he had, to quote an expressive Americanism, "bitten off more than he could chew."

Consequently, success was to him a great deal more bitter than failure would have been, and if he had thought such a result possible he would never have dreamt of contesting the seat. His means were utterly inadequate to support him in the position, and he had become a candidate solely for the advertisement to be gained by fighting what everybody considered a hopeless battle.

The great majority of this class of candidates are ambitious young barristers, to whom the notoriety of figuring as one of the chief characters in a Parliamentary election is a far more valuable advertisement than even the winning of a big case. Indeed, there is no knowing what it may not bring.

In not a few instances it has paved the way to the judicial bench, and there are a surprising number of minor [illegible] appointments with which the party in power is wont to reward the briefless ones who champion their [illegible] the constituencies. At the least it can be expected to be productive of briefs.

[illegible] candidate, who was unsuccessful at the last general election, [illegible] earned upwards of 1,000 guineas [illegible]

Indian Gamblers.

Most of us are familiar with the old joke which asserts that the best way to find the winner of a horse-race is to cut out a list of the runners, get a pin, shut your eyes, stab at the names, and put your money on the horse whose name is first pricked.

The native of India has an equally amusing method. He wagers his money according to the colors worn by the jockeys, and takes no heed of the horse [illegible] or he will back a horse ridden by his favorite jockey, no matter whether the animal is a rank outsider or not.

His ideas of gambling, in fact, are distinctly novel. [illegible]

"I suffered for years from headaches and pain in the back, and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit juice tablets and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. A LAND RUSH.

Remarkable Scene in Lethbridge Recently When Reserve Was Opened.

Lethbridge was the scene of a novel and almost [illegible] event a few days ago when [illegible] many of them waiting for days, for the allotment of land in twenty-one townships which were thrown open for settlement in Southern Alberta [illegible]

[illegible] it may morning preparations were made for business. Boxes, etc. were packed, and the line became a continuous string of humanity, most of the men passing their arms around those in front of them to keep any one from crowding in. The later arrivals fell in behind and when the office doors were opened at 9.30 men were closely lined up along three sides of the block.

In reply to a remark that it seemed a shame that some more humane system of allotting these lands was not adopted, one of the men [illegible] plied "that the reward was worth the trial. If a man secured a homestead and pre-emption it represented [illegible] for the two days wait."

The excellent manner in which the crowd was handled by the police was worthy of the highest commendation. Besides several of the city [illegible] and [illegible] the Northwest Mounted Police and Dominion [illegible] men, mounted [illegible] their presence doubtless had a salutary effect [illegible] from appearances [illegible] endeavoring to secure an undue advantage over their competitors.

During the previous night the same [illegible] endeavored to [illegible] opposite the barricade but were promptly [illegible]

New Health and Strength for Weak and Ailing Girls

I was altogether in a miserable condition and it seemed impossible for me to continue my studies unless I found a speedy cure. I tried several tonics prescribed by the doctor, [illegible] My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I finally consented to do so. I had hardly finished the second box before a change for the better took place, and the use of a few boxes more fully restored my health, and I have since been well and strong. FOR SCALDS AND BURNS

I THINK that to every one of us there comes a time when a good, sensible knowledge of the proper treatment of scalds or burns helps materially in the alleviation of pain and the prevention of subsequent trouble. I have seen children suffer agony for hours when the remedy was within the space of their ignorant elders, and some grown-ups are carrying scars that are ugly reminders of a lack of care in that painful trial by fire.

Of course there are certain general rules to keep clearly in your mind.

It seems almost unnecessary [illegible] phasize the fact that, if clothing be on fire, the person should be placed quickly on the floor and covered with a woolen rug or coat. The flat position prevents the rising of the flames to the head. [illegible] results from the inhalation of fire or fumes. Much injury can be prevented by a cool head and a clear idea of what to do.

In cases of burns and scalds the clothing must be removed in the most careful way. If torn off, there will also come the skin, and that means a longer time for the healing process. Blisters should not be broken. Cut away any material that surrounds the injured parts. Never mind about the dress, there are other things more important at this time.

A slight burn can be treated with a solution of baking soda, using a heaping tablespoonful to a cup of water. Soft linen soaked in this should be applied in bandage form. This is very effectual in cases of scalds where the skin is not broken.

Pain is felt when the injured parts come in contact with the air. Any salve that excludes the air from the wound should be applied. [illegible] vaseline is excellent, at the same time hastening the healing. Place it upon the skin before bandaging with linen strips.

If burns or scalds are deep enough to affect the cells of the true skin [illegible]

Bunched Base Ball Bungles

Editor of the Standard
DEAR SIR:—

As the Vermilion delegate to the Base Ball convention called April 14th at Vegreville for the purpose of forming a league of the ... from Fort Saskatchewan to Lloydminster, permit me to express my disgust at the action of the sports who reside near the Capital of Sunny Alberta.

Leaving Vermilion on the 14th, I was joined at Mannville by Mr ... who was to represent that town ... fully expected to ... Fort Saskatchewan and ... as the ... from the East. Arriving at Vegreville, you may imagine our surprise at not being able to locate anyone who knew anything of the proposed league.

After ... the town we at last discovered that a letter had been received giving notice of ... meeting but as Vegreville ... there was ... the matter was treated as a joke.

On the arrival of the eastbound ... we found that Fort Saskatchewan and ... were still missing ... the farce.

Now sir, we would like to know who is responsible for this fiasco? If the ... was unable to appear why did he not find a substitute ... in time to save expense and loss of many valuable hours.

Perhaps the Fort came to this conclusion, "If we can't beat the other fellows we won't let the other fellows play."

We attended in good faith expecting to meet those who love the game for the game itself, not for any Pewter Pot which may or may not be hung up for competition, and our expectations were not realized.

In conclusion allow me to suggest that Fort Saskatchewan, Clover Bar, Lamoureux ville and ... form a ... for the Fort to ... league and thereby eliminate any possible chance of Mannville or Vermilion lowering their colors.

Thanking you for your space and courtesy, I am Sir

Yours Respectfully

Last week Mr. Taylor received from the continent of Europe several packages of new varieties of wheat with which ... this year. These ... have an extraordinary heavy yield running from 50 to 75 bushels per acre and should they prove equally prolific in Sunny Alberta, the demand for the grain is assured.

Should the Dominion Government ... as has been mooted, the Standard believes no one is more entitled or better qualified to handle the work in this locality than Mr. Taylor, whose successful labors along these lines are deserving of the highest commendation.

Such Was Opinion of Driver Who Undertook to Employ One of Our Local Financial Men.

A rather good joke has been going the rounds on one of our prominent financial men, who has been interested in the town since its inception, but who at the present time is performing homestead functions and for such purposes had donned apparel in keeping with the occasion. HE STOPPED THE BELL.

Good Reason For Giving Him Free Entry to the Show.

The requests for theater favors in the small towns are very troublesome. Every person of local standing feels that he has a right to admission at least, while the trustees and the constable feel that they are entitled to private boxes. Some of the requests are decidedly unique.

Recently a company played a small southern city. The manager was taking the tickets at the door of the theater, and the natives were struggling to get in. "Suddenly," he tells, "a long, thin, lanky chinned individual divided the folding doors with his shoulder and whispered confidentially, 'I stop the bell.' I asked him to repeat. 'I stop the bell,' he said again in a hoarse whisper. 'You will have to see the opera house manager and tell him what you stop,' I said, reaching for tickets. He tripped up several ladies while backing out. Soon the manager of the house came in, saying, 'He's all right, he stops the bell.' I allowed him to go in, and after the people were seated I asked the local man what he meant by 'He stops the bell.' 'Well,' said he, 'this man is the janitor of the town hall right opposite, and on "show nights" he does not ring nine or ten on the town clock. You see,' he said, 'it would disturb the performance,' and so the poor people do not know what time it is until 11 o'clock, when the opera house is open. If I had 'turned him down' he would have rung out nine and ten every half hour to get even.'"

Lincoln the Ideal President.

Lincoln is the ideal president in that he led public sentiment, represented it and followed it. "I claim not to have controlled events," he said, "but confess plainly that events have controlled me." During his term of office he was one day called "very weak" and the next day "a tyrant," but when his whole work was done a careful survey of it could bring one only to the conclusion that he knew when to follow and when to lead. He was in complete touch with popular sentiment and divined with nicety when he could take a step in advance. He made an effort to keep on good terms with congress, and he differed with that body reluctantly, although, when the necessity came, decisively. While he had consideration for those who did not agree with him, and while he acted always with a regard to proportion, he was nevertheless a strong and self-reliant executive.—James Ford Rhodes in Scribner's.

Killing the Turtle

Killing a turtle with an arrow seems a very difficult feat, since a very hard shell covers practically all of the animal, yet the natives of the Andaman islands kill huge turtles with arrows as easily as American sportsmen kill rabbits with shot.

...THE... Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

The old man looked at her with [illegible] the [illegible] that brushes away a woman's [illegible] and powder and [illegible] [illegible] bent [illegible] to the country [illegible] one of his majesty's oldest friends."

Leopold was not supposed to care for dancing, though he danced—as it was his pride to do all things—well. Certainly there was often a perfunctoriness about his manner in a ballroom, a suggestion of the soldier on duty in his unsmiling face and his readiness to lead a partner to her seat [illegible]

But tonight a new Leopold moved to the music. A girl's white arm on his —that slender arm which had been quick and firm as a man's in the [illegible] fence—the perfume of a girl's hair and the gold glints upon it, the shadow of a girl's dark lashes and the light in a pair of gray eyes when they were lifted, the beating of a girl's heart near him, the springtime grace of a girl's sweet youth in its contrast with the voluptuous summer of Rhaetian types of beauty, the warm tone that spread upward from a girl's childlike [illegible] to the womanly [illegible] of her [illegible], these charms and more which rendered one girl a hundred times adorable [illegible] hold of him and made him not an emperor but a man unarmored.

When the music ceased he [illegible] for an instant that some accident had [illegible]

answer, but, there being no time, her response came, as his question had, from the heart, "I am glad I [illegible] do it."

"You couldn't help risking your life [illegible]"

[illegible]

[illegible] he said, opening a button of the military coat blazing with jewels and orders, he drew out a loop of thin gold [illegible] bright thing that flashed under a sun of electric light.

"My ring!" breathed Virginia.

Thus died the emperor's intention to ignore the day that had been theirs together.

"Your ring. You gave it to Leo. He kept it. He will always keep it. Have I surprised you?"

Virginia [illegible] would be best to say "Yes" [illegible] she answered "No," for [illegible] cannot be taken under such a look in a man's eyes by a girl who loves him.

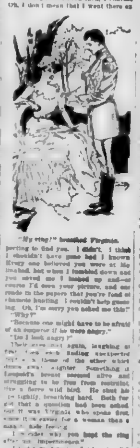
"I have not! When did you guess the [illegible]"

[illegible]

[illegible] a muscle while Leo [illegible] answer and its full meaning. He remembered the bread and ham, the cow he could not milk, the rucksacks he had carried. He remembered everything and laughed.

"You knew at [illegible]? Not at the [illegible]"

"Yes, I guessed even then, I confess. Oh, I don't mean that I went there as



"My ring!" breathed Virginia.

[illegible]

"Goodby," said Virginia [illegible]

"Not goodby. We're friends."

"Yes. But we shan't meet often."

"Why? Are you leaving Rhaetia?"

"Perhaps—soon. I don't know."

"I must see you again. I will see you once more, whatever comes."

"Once more, perhaps. I hope so, but"—

"After that?"

"Who knows?"

"Once more—once more!" The words echoed in Virginia's ears. She heard them through everything, as one hears the undertone of a mountain torrent, though a brass band may bray to drown its deep music.

Once more he would see her, whatever might come [illegible] why it might be only once, though he would fain have that once again and again repeated [illegible] more difficult to play than she had dreamed.

If she could but be sure he cared, if he would tell her so in words and not with eyes alone, the road might be easy, although it [illegible] on the end. [illegible]

NAMES AT WESTMINSTER.

"Bubble and Squeak" and "Pink-Nosed" Liverpool.

In Parliament, as out of it, one may be pretty sure that a man is a "good sort," popular with his fellows, if he is christened with a nickname, even if it is not altogether a flattering one. There will be scores of such members in our new Parliament, from "Pretty Fanny," alias Mr. A. J. Balfour, downward, and, with scarcely an exception, they will be quite proud of their pseudonyms. But in past generations it was by no means always so.

Even Palmerston was none too well pleased to be dubbed "Cupid," as a tribute to his locks and his complexion, and Macaulay strongly resented being spoken of as the "Dictionary in Breeches." Burke, the famous orator, was, oddly enough, known by his fellow M.P.'s as the "Dinner Bell," because, forsooth, his speeches usually emptied the House, and O'Connell was unflatteringly christened the "Big Beggar."

Sir Watkin Wynn and Charles, his brother, were known jointly as "Bubble and Squeak," in uncomplimentary reference to their methods of speaking. Dr. Lawrence, a politician of his time, was the "Shark," and Dundas was labelled at one time the "Impertinent Thief" and at another the "Red Indian" of debate.

Roebuck had only himself to blame for his nickname, "Tear 'Em," for a speech in which he introduced a parable of a farmer and his watchdog Tear 'Em he declared, "I, sir, am Tear 'Em!" And "Tear 'Em" he remained to his last day.

It was Pitt who gave his brother-in-law, Grenville, the nickname "Gentle Shepherd." "Let me tell them where to impose a tax, sir," Grenville declaimed in a speech. "I repeat, sir, let me tell them where." "Gentle shepherd," piped Pitt from his seat, mimicking Grenville's voice —"Gentle shepherd, tell me where." The House rocked with laughter and Grenville was ever after the "Gentle Shepherd."

Sheridan labelled Pitt the "Angry Boy," the first Lord Liverpool was "Pink-Nosed" Liverpool, while his father was known as the "Dark Lantern," and Attorney-General Cooper as "Wall Bigamy."

In later days Lord Randolph Churchill fastened the epithet "Old Morality" on Mr. W. H. Smith. Mr. Chamberlain he dubbed the "Pinchbeck Robespierre," and Mr. Gladstone "An Old Man in a Hurry." He himself was let off lightly with "Randy," which, perhaps, was better than he deserved.

MAY BE NEXT MANAGER.

H. V. Meredith Is in Line to Run the Bank of Montreal

Owing to the death of Sir George Drummond, president of the Bank of Montreal, the [illegible] will, in all probability, fall to Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., and it is but natural to presume that the general manager-ship of this great institution will be taken over by Mr. H. Vincent Meredith, who is next in the line of promotion.

H. V. MEREDITH

Mr. Meredith, who comes from an old Ontario family, and who was born in London, Ont., and is a brother of Chief Justice Meredith, joined the staff of the Bank of Montreal in 1867, entering the service at Hamilton. In 1879 he became [illegible] at the main office in Montreal, and he has step by step worked his way to his present position.

King's Royal Rifles Home Again

Old England has given the King's Royal Rifles, home from India, a typical February welcome in respect of weather. They have been shivering in their thin Indian khaki [illegible] and wondering whether they have done altogether well to exchange the heat for the east wind.

They faced the blast at Shorncliffe Camp a few days ago—thirteen officers and 805 non-commissioned officers and men of the 2nd battalion. The battalion has spent twenty years abroad.

It had only been six months in India when it returned to South Africa with the Indian contingent, went through the siege of Ladysmith, served afterwards with Buller, and then went to Ceylon to guard the Boer prisoners there. In 1901 it reached India again, and was quartered first at Rawal Pindi and afterwards at Bareilly and Jubbulpore.

Four of the six hundred have been through the twenty years [illegible] of Rouch, Q.M.S. Potter, [illegible] Ashford, and [illegible] More than a hundred [illegible] with the battalion [illegible] and ever since [illegible] of officer's [illegible] first visit to England. The men are now enjoying six weeks' furlough.

Ought to Know

The Farmers' Advocate, Weekly Sun and other agricultural papers laugh at the theory that [illegible] is essential to horse-breeding. Their testimony is weightier [illegible] that of the city sports who are more concerned about racing horses than rearing them.—London Advertiser.

CAN'T EAT! STOMACH OUT OF ORDER

You are losing strength and vitality. That listless, languid feeling is due to the weak condition of the system. These are sure signs of a breakdown. Check the breakdown quickly and effectively by using PSYCHINE the Greatest of All Tonics. If you feel worn out, and run down, it is time for a tonic. Use PSYCHINE early, do not wait till you are worse. It will tone up your system and restore you to your old-time vigor and health. Keep your stomach in order, increase your appetite, restore your system to a healthy condition by taking PSYCHINE to-day. Mrs. J. T. Miller, of 63 Notre Dame Street, Winnipeg, proved this, for she says: "I am thankful for what PSYCHINE has done for me. I was laid up with weakness. Oh, how I suffered! My appetite was very poor and my stomach was greatly disordered. To-day I am strong and well, for PSYCHINE has brought me permanent relief. I feel like a new woman now to what I did before taking PSYCHINE. I feel the vigor of girlhood in my veins once more."

Literature Is Now In Readiness

Advertising Committee Has Completed Compilation of Material for Pamphlet

The Chairman of the advertising committee, C. V. Ceasar, has submitted to the executive of the Board of Trade, the literature and illustrations for the pamphlet to be issued in connection with the publicity campaign inaugurated by that body in the early spring.

The same has been carefully gone through and is of a very creditable nature, dealing as it does in a comprehensive and interesting style with the many matters prospective settlers are most anxious to familiarize themselves with when about to cast their fortunes in a new field.

The bulk of the task of compilation has devolved upon Mr. Ceasar, who has discharged the duty with his usual ability, and brought out in clear style and pleasing diction the preeminent facts and features appertaining to Vermilion and to the Vermilion District. The pamphlet, dealing as it will do with land facts and attractive views, cannot fail but be a strong drawing card in turning settlers our way and all expedition should now be used to have the same printed for immediate distribution [illegible] both [illegible]

It appeals to the Standard as a fitting production to be issued in conjunction with the provincial publicity campaign now inaugurated by the agricultural department of the province, and in this connection no doubt some assistance in the expense of its production can be obtained from the general publicity fund of the department, which could distribute by means of its agents several thousand copies to the advantage of the province at large.

Clarke Letter Drafted By Woods'

Revised Offer of R. & G. W. Presented to Legislature Was Prepared by Ex-Deputy Attorney-General

With the adjournment of the Royal commission Friday afternoon the first part of the investigation has been brought to a close. The tribunal met again Tuesday morning at the Grain exchange, in Winnipeg.

The commission [illegible] continuous [illegible] days exclusive of the preliminary two days at the legislature a month ago. Seven witnesses have been examined, four of them having taken up about three-quarters of the time. The longest period in the witness box was occupied by J. K. Cornwall and the others in order were Dr. Waddell, S. B. Woods, Jas. A. McKinnon, Geo. S. Seymour, J. F. McMillan and Jack Southworth. There have been filed with [illegible] count one hundred and twenty exhibits, including letters, telegrams, contracts, agreements and documents. The verbatim [illegible] taken in relays by three stenographers has already covered twelve hundred pages of typewritten foolscap.

It is estimated by the commission counsel that the hearing has been one-quarter completed.

Woods' Evidence Completed

Mr. Woods' cross-examination was concluded by Mr. Bennett on Friday afternoon. The witness told of having found in the original copy of the specifications that the words "prairie loam" for ballast had been stricken out and [illegible] debate in the legislature on that point was without [illegible] ring.

How the copies brought down to the legislature contained the [illegible] explained.

Mr. Woods [illegible] stated that it was he who had drafted the Clarke letter offering to amend the agreement which was submitted to the legislature on Feb. [illegible] He said that he had prepared it to meet what he thought were the honest [illegible] of the legislature [illegible] expressed the opinion that Clarke was willing to execute a new contract in accordance [illegible]

SLEEPING DRAUGHTS AND SOOTHING MIXTURES

A medicine should never give the slightest hint of its presence. Nothing should be noticed but the cure. Any kind of a doctor can make a dose that will do the work, but it takes a physician to make a medicine that will cure painlessly and quickly. That's why Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the standard blood purifier and system regulator. It's the only medicine sold through druggists for the cure of blood diseases that's as safe to have a place in the home as a pocket of the pills it contains. Isn't that fact worth considering?

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures Eczema, Boils, Pimples, Blotches, Scrofula, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Tumors, Cancer, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Carbuncles, Fever Sores, Hip Joint Disease, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Lingering Colds, and kindred diseases.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Dizziness, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, Torpid Liver, Piles, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Sold by druggists the world over.

CHAPTER NINE

"No-o," laughed Egon uneasily. "I fancied there was some other more pressing reason. But I'm bound in common courtesy to take your sincerity for granted until you undeceive me."

"Hang common courtesy between you and me!" returned the bear. "I've nothing to conceal. I want for you to tell me what mischief that witch of Mechthilde von Lyndal is plotting. You're on the spot. Trust you for seeing everything that goes on—the one thing I would trust you to do."

"Thanks," said Egon.

"Don't thank me yet, however grateful you may be. But I don't mind hinting that it won't be the worse for you if for once you've used those fine eyes of yours to some useful purpose."

Egon was genuinely astonished at this turn of the conversation, as he had been arming himself against a personal attack from any one of several directions. He sat pointing the sharp ends of his mustache one after the other and trying to remember some striking incident with which to adorn a more or less accurate narrative.

"What would you call useful?" he inquired at last.

The chancellor answered, but indirectly. "Has the emperor been playing the fool at Lyndalberg these last few days?"

"Do you want to make me guilty of lese majesty?" Egon raised his eyebrows, but he was recovering presence of mind. "If by playing the fool though, you mean falling in love, why then, I rather I should say he had done little else during the three days and perhaps even the first of those was not the beginning."

The chancellor growled out a word which he would hardly have uttered in the imperial presence, particularly in the connection he suggested. "Let me hear exactly what has been going on from day's end to day's end," he commanded.

Egon grew thoughtful once more. Clearly here was the explanation of the summons. He was to be let off easily, it appeared. But, ...

KANGAROO MEAT.

Why the Native Youngsters of New Guinea Refused It.

In certain parts of New Guinea the wallaby, a species of kangaroo, are very plentiful, and the traveler in search of sport finds the pursuit of them an exciting occupation. Wallaby steak is a refreshing change from canned meats, and the natives are only too glad to have the remnants of the carcass. A writer in an English magazine tells an amusing incident connected with the animal.

He had been ashore in one of the sparsely populated regions of the coast and secured four wallaby, an ample supply for the whole party, native guides and servants included. But he found that, although wallaby is regarded as such a delicacy that no trouble is considered too great to obtain it, none of the native boys in the party would touch it.

This was a mystery until one of them explained that they had been trained in childhood to the belief that if they ate wallaby before reaching a certain age it would stop their growth.

These boys all belonged to the part of the country where wallaby are few, and one can imagine the crafty old folks seated round the festive pot and winking at one another as the young people declined the succulent dainty.

LACEMAKING.

An Old Legend That Tells of the Origin of the Art.

Lacemaking is by no means so old an industry as most persons suppose. There is no proof that it existed previous to the fifteenth century, and the oldest known painting in which it appears is a portrait of a lady in the academy at Venice painted by Carpaccio, who died about 1523. The legend concerning the origin of the art is as follows:

A young fisherman of the Adriatic was betrothed to a young and beautiful girl of one of the isles of the lagoon. Industrious as she was beautiful, the girl made a new net for her lover, who took it with him on board ...

BRUCE'S SEEDS

SIXTY YEARS OF SUCCESS

We are this year celebrating the 60th anniversary of the establishment of this business, and we are justly proud of the record, one which has been attained by very few seed houses in America.

The Excellence of our stocks, which are carefully tested for purity and germination, our long experience and connection with the best growers in the world, prices reasonable consistent with quality, and the great care we take in every detail of our business is the secret of our success. This with our largely increasing trade, the trade of many that we have held year after year, and the many unsolicited testimonials from our customers, substantiates our claim to be "The oldest and most Reliable Seed House in Canada."

No better seeds can be procured anywhere even at ten times our price.

All we ask from those who have not patronized us is a trial.

French Cookery in American Kitchens

Marion Harland

FIFTEEN years ago I engaged a cook, who brought what she would have termed "a rare ruck-tar" from a rich and respectable woman, in whose service she had been for seven years. I called upon her late employer, who confirmed the written certificate. She was clean, industrious, honest and sober and an excellent cook.

At the end of a week I had learned that the treasure was proficient in nothing except the plainest kind of cookery. She could roast beef and fry and cook vegetables as her mother had done before her. Beyond this rudimentary knowledge she did not aspire to go.

Death of King Edward VII

Beloved Monarch Passes Away in His 69th Year

London, May 6.—King Edward VII died at 11.45 o'clock to-night in Buckingham Palace of bronchial pneumonia, which developed from a cold contracted a few days ago. Prince George of Wales immediately upon his father's death became King. The initial act of the new ruler was to telegraph to the Lord Mayor of London, the announcement of the King's death.

Then came the official bulletin issued by the medical men in his last moments. In an instant the news that all England dreaded and which they had looked for all day was flashed throughout the country. Although the eminent physicians who attended his majesty in his last moments have made no official announcement as to the cause of his death, it is believed that bronchial pneumonia was the cause.

There is no doubt that King Edward worried greatly over the political situation which worried him, and that aggravated the illness from which the King had been suffering for more than a year. It is only three days ago that his condition became serious. King Edward returned to London Wednesday after a stay of seven weeks at Biarritz, and it was at once evident to all his intimates that his visit there to regain his health had been futile. Several alarming reports were sent out from Biarritz during the King's stay there, but official denial was given them and the nation was kept in ignorance of his real condition until the return of Queen Alexandra from her Mediterranean cruise. His failure to meet her at the railroad, as had been his custom for years gave the first inkling of his real condition. Then it was learned that he was seriously ill in Buckingham Palace and that specialists had been called in to attend him.

HOPKINS TRADING CO. STORE & STOCK BURNED

Had Just Opened For Business Loss is $2000.00 With no Insurance Will Re-Open

The new store of Mr. Jos. Valentine in the Hopkins settlement north of the Saskatchewan was entirely consumed in a prairie fire which swept through that country Friday last. Mr. Valentine had just installed a $2,000 stock and was in shape to do business when this catastrophe occurred. The place was fireguarded sufficiently for ordinary circumstances but in the wind on Friday the flames jumped everything in the shape of a guard. Mr. Valentine had barely time to save the cash box when the building was too hot to enter. His stable and some outbuildings were also destroyed and it was with great difficulty that the dwelling was saved. There was no insurance. Mr. Valentine proposes putting in another stock at once.

Judgement Giver For Vermilion Farmers

C. N. R. Held Responsible for the Big Fire West of Town Last Fall

Judgment was given in the Supreme court Wednesday afternoon in favor of the two Vermilion farmers, H.O. Woods and A. W. Roseborough, who brought action against the Canadian Northern railway to recover damages for the destruction of property on their farms by a fire which started from the C. N. R. tracks on September 25th, of last year. Each brought action against the railway company for $1,000 damages. The railway company denied that the fire had been started through the negligence of its servants and endeavored to prove that they could not be held liable as all statutory regulations, such as fireguards, etc had been complied with. On the conclusion of the argument in the first cases Chief Justice Sifton gave judgment for the plaintiff, Roseborough for $721.50 and costs, and for the plaintiff, Woods, for $772.50 and costs. H.H. Parlee and C. L. Freeman appeared for the plaintiffs and J.T.J. Collison for the defendant company.

CHAPTER TEN

THE first act is usually a dressing gown had scrubbed at Wilhelm Lindstrom on the evening of the day after Egon von Ems's visit to his trench, and the grand-duchess was beginning to wonder uneasily what kept her daughter when visited Rogero tapped on the panel of the door.

"Come in," she answered, and the sturdy sergeant, with in the white tie and clothes she had worn that afternoon, looked for an instant without speaking, her face so radically beautified that her mother thought it seemed tinted from a rich rich.

It had been on the tips of the grand-duchess to scold the girl for her tardiness, since to be late was an unpardonable offense with an Imperial majesty in the house. But in that radiance the words died.

"Virginia, what is it? You look I scarcely know how you look. But you make me feel that something has happened."

The princess came slowly across the room, smiling softly, with an air of one who walks in sleep. Hardly conscious of what she did, she sank down in a big chair and rested her elbows on her knees, her chin resting between her two hands, while a pink rose rose in its cup.

"You may call it happiness," said the proud duchess to her maid. "I sing when I want pure joy."

The obtainable pressure of trotting and crooning that had been heard in the old Bavarian home to a successful end, and Blanche had just reached a second stair to rise above her forehead, when there was a knock at the door, and out of her table could quit sit entirely was refused.

The knocker still sat dreaming, her tongue eyes far away. The grand duchess had to speak twice before the girl heard and started a little. "My daughter, have you gone mad, or is it only a new fit?"

The princess roused herself. "Both, but neither, really, except that I'm the happiest girl on earth."

"Why," the duchess said?"

"But one word that any one might have dreamed of, and that I never did. And I think he will say some thing before we part."

"There's only one more day of his visit here after tonight."

"One more day is immortal day to me!"

"But, after all, dearest," argued her mother, "what do you expect? If he were your cousin, Miss Hewbery, meetings between you and the emperor would be out of the question. You've never gone into the subject of your relations with him, but I understand with me, and I do wish I knew positively what you hope. Of course, when you will consider the—the happiness of others."

"Only for him to say that he loves me," Virginia confessed. "If I'm right, I know he will say something now that he has something which has shown him that his heart is not his own to give. But, then there will come a moment when he will be sorry he has spoken, when he'll be forced to say, 'I love you, dear, and honour you as my friend,' and each other day is turned into night for me. When that moment comes I shall the tide of my fortune will be at its flood. I shall tell him that I love him, too, and I shall tell him all the truth."

"And what is the truth, my darling?"

"You and why I've been unsympathetic—that I've been unsympathetic when I was a little girl, he'd been the one new to the world for me; because, when our Lyndal deceived him with so many official chances I made up my mind that I would be the first good enough love or love might all my days."

"That if he should be vexed Illinois daughter, you're forgive me," said Lyndal, "but I'm sorry, for you, and I'm sorry for myself, for I've been thinking romeo out as we have made all our friends have used the name of Hewbery. If you remember the night when we did in that our real position in the world was rather higher than that we assumed, and all those in whom we've been so delighted to know as in our own endearment of the end. But Leopold is a man, not a romantic girl, as you say. He has always had a reputation for pride and economy, for being just before he could let himself be generous. And I say that to one of his nature a wild white lie may seem right.

"You think of him as he was before we met, and you can be sure of just how he would be hard with a woman he really loved and Phyllis simply don't forgive me dear! I do not feel of him any more. Tonight I've no fear of anything. He loves me—and I'm unaware of the world."

"Many women would be satisfied with Blanche," was the practical response which jerked into the mind of the grand duchess, but she would thrust no more cold water upon the rose fame of her daughter's exultation. She kissed the girl on the forehead, knowing a few words of mother-wisdom might be lost on a princess so deeply in love as was to draw it all about her discovered crumpled heel dignity

Virginia's face sobered instantly as easy to carry out as to turn a handsome and form a structure for consideration of color, or as to hint sensual while the young rose pined at her when the happy face and radiant eyes no longer illumined the gem that very soon covered death.

To be sure, the princess had no further triumphantly along the hard road to success, but it was not always a good beginning which led to a good end, and the grand duchess felt as she sang for Dresytine that her nerves would be strained to the breaking point until mattery were definitely settled for better or for worse.

Virginia had never been lovelier than she was that night at dinner, and Egon von Rentzatz's adoration for her beauty had in it a fascinating new impudence. Until yesterday he had said no word of feeling, while Egon's face kept the secret and mysterious look of one who loves on her knees, her chin resting between her two hands, with a pink rose rose in its cup.

"You may call it happiness," said the proud duchess to her maid. "I sing when I want pure joy."

The obtainable pressure of trotting and crooning that had been heard in the old Bavarian home to a successful end, and Blanche had just reached a second stair to rise above her forehead, when there was a knock at the door, and out of her table could quit sit entirely was refused.

DOROTHEA TOTE.

"Flinging in a mélange."

He was delighted, however, that he had not been long forbidden to speak of real expression, and his blue was in some as clear it should be ever be. But a pause at one Mowbray's side before any other man showed how time is like it. But, unluckily for the plan, Baron von Lyndal declined that he had few moments with praise of a new remedy which might cure the old mother's grief, and when he emerged from his hard to look for Miss Hewbery in the white drawing room she was not there.

From the music room adjoining, however, came sounds which drew him toward the door. He knew Miss Hewbery's self, coming room on the piano. She was there then, and that was what we did in that our real position in the world was rather higher than that we assumed, and all those in whom we've been so delighted to know as in our own endearment of the end. But Leopold is a man, not a romantic girl, as you say. He has always had a reputation for pride and economy, for being just before he could let himself be generous. now that you going so indeed the other portraits.

Everybody knew of the month intervening between the princess's official meeting, never speaking too loudly to distract the singer, never too cautiously, lest they should seem to flatter. Once again the creamy cameo soprano and the rich tenor duet were blended in harmony, came unconsciously through the verses of "Annie Laurie" from beginning to end. Then a few desultory chords were struck on the piano, and at last there was silence broken only by white insomnia in the music room.

Were the two still there? To have rept such a tete-a-tete seemed out of the question, and so Lyndal was not a little surprised when he found the princess alone, sitting in the middle of a huge sofa, and Lady Mowbray gone as sopertinent as if Paradise had had his spare needs in mind.

To identify it was not a pleasant tete gone, for as she rand it the Dresden china clock struck twelve, and that she was disconcerted. Her pretty face lost its color; her eyes dilated as if she had seen a ghost, and her lips parted as she patted her lips with her love hand and the top of the shaft at the sidewheels threw. The flow were not fresh, and the bosom of her dress was continually being crushed by the hand which pressed over it, as if to still the throbbing of her heart.

King George V. God Save the King.

The news of the death of King Edward VII was received here with feelings of genuine sorrow and has cast a deep gloom over the community. Immediately upon receipt of the message conveying the startling intelligence the flag on the town hall was set at half mast. On Sunday the great national loss sustained was fittingly referred to by the local clergy from their pulpits and in the English church a special memorial service was conducted by the Rev. G. F. Trench. The death of our beloved King Edward VII is being truly mourned throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire to-day.

The Colossus, recently launched at Greenock, is Great Britain's greatest battleship. Its displacement is 22,500 tons or 4,600 tons greater than that of the original dreadnought. It will have turbine machinery of 25,000 h. p. with a speed of 21 knots. The length is 545 feet. The Colossus in addition to ten 12 inch guns which will fire 850 lb. projectiles at unprecedented velocity will have a large number of 25-pounder guns for repelling torpedo-boat attack. The estimated cost is $8,500,000.

THE TERMINAL ELEVATOR INVESTIGATION

Two of the big elevator companies, the Port Arthur Elevator Company and the Empire Elevator Company, have been convicted of sending falsified statements to the warehouse commissioner when submitting their weekly records of grain received and shipped. For these attempts to deliberately hoodwink the government officials, the two companies were fined $6,450. The Consolidated Elevator Company also put in one false report, but claimed that it was on account of a clerical error and was given the benefit of a doubt by the court in being fined only $50. The Canadian Pacific Elevator Company was exhonorated from any attempt at graft in manipulating grades. The railway terminals have been found to be conducted properly as there is no inducement for manipulation where the warehousemen have no financial interest in the grain going through the elevator.

The investigation that was made concerned only the three contract grades of wheat, 1 Northern, 2 Northern and 3 Northern.

According to Mr. Castle's report, the system of manipulation at the terminal elevators explains at once why the best grades of Canadian wheat have not the reputation they should have on the Liverpool market. It appears that a good deal of 1 Northern that goes into the terminal elevators is very nearly 1 Hard. Similarly, 2 Northern is very often nearly 1 Northern. By binning separately the choicest cars of these grades manipulation is made possible. For instance the average of all the 1 Northern in the terminal elevators might be considerably above the minimum requirements for 1 Northern according to law. Now, by taking the choicest of the 2 Northern and dumping it in the choice 1 Northern bin, the whole would pass inspection as 1 Northern. Thus Mr. Castle's report shows that the Port Arthur Elevator Company shipped out 109,— bushels more of 1 Northern than they received. Also that they shipped out 116,645 bushels more of 2 Northern than they received, and 130,205 bushels less of 3 Northern than they received. In case of the Empire Elevator Mr. Castle shows that the amount of 1 Northern shipped out exceeded the receipts by 437,884 bushels and that there was also a discrepancy or shortage in the 2 and 3 Northern grades.

This answers and justifies the charges made by the Grain Growers. There has been a deliberate mixing done in the terminal elevators that has taken thousands of dollars from the pockets of the farmers of the west. This is easily understood when it is seen how 2 Northern is raised to 1 Northern and 3 Northern to 2 Northern, thus cutting the value of wheat by several cents per bushel.

This is the system that has been employed to the great satisfaction of the terminal elevator owners.

All this took place at the terminal elevators despite the fact that the place is swarming with government officials. There are now seventy men in the employ of the Dominion government watching and inspecting the work of the terminal elevator, but the manipulations continue under their very eyes and they are powerless to prevent it.

A study of the figures given in Mr. Castle's report to the Department of Trade and Commerce showed that the manipulations in wheat totaled far over 1,000,000 bushels. This was during a period of less than four months and yet it must have turned over $50,000 illegitimately into the pockets of the elevator men.

Credit is due Dr. Schaffner, M. P., for Souris for the manner in which he handled the terminal elevator investigation at Ottawa. It was due to him that Mr. Castle's report was made public.

The farmers of the west for years have contended that they were not getting a square deal from various of the great "interests". On this account the farmers have been called unfair and accused of misrepresentation. But no investigation was made to prove the truth or otherwise of the farmers' claims. However when the terminal elevators were looked into carefully, it was found that the farmers had been getting a dirty deal. By standing to their guns the farmers of the west will sooner or later drive special privileges from the field.

With this issue the Standard completes one year of publication. Vol. 1, No. 52.

Wellsdale Doings

After enjoying this beautiful spring weather who can say that Alberta is not "Sunny".

Seeding is now well advanced and much of the grain is up. Owing to the early spring a large percentage of the crop is wheat.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinch and family lately of England have settled on a homestead in this vicinity.

Mr. E. Kempton of Vermilion has been on his homestead during the past month. Next fall Mr. Kempton expects to have his duties completed and will have earned his patent.

The Rev. H. Coulthurst, Church of England missionary who has been with us during the winter, has returned to college.

An event of interest to the people of this district occurred on Wednesday April 6th when Miss Lilian, daughter of R. J. King and Mr. W. Elliott, a prosperous young farmer of this township, were united in marriage by the Rev. W. Simons of Vermilion. The ceremony took place at the Manse. Miss Bessie Elliott, sister of the groom assisted the bride while the groom was supported by Mr. Arthur Cameron of Wellsdale. The bride wore a pretty dress of white mull trimmed with lace and insertion, and the bridesmaid was becomingly dressed in pink. Upon the return of the party the bride's mother had ready a wedding supper for the immediate families. The happy couple have the best wishes of their many friends in Wellsdale. This is the second marriage in this three-year old neighborhood. Who will be the next?

The Knipe Bros. had the misfortune to lose a tent, clothing, gun and other articles in a recent prairie fire. Some weeks ago their shack was burned so this is a second misfortune.

The ladies of the Wellsdale first Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. C. A. Parker last Tuesday when the new officers were installed as follows:

Mrs. W. E. Smith, President.
" F. Lawes, V.-Pres.
" G. J. Stockwell, Treasurer.
" C. A. Hodgins, Secretary.

The supply of medicines, &c, which belong to the society are kept at the Wellsdale post-office. The ladies are making a quilt which may be donated to a Vermilion hospital, if there should be one there in the near future.

Not in the West

A press report states that a police magistrate at Ivybridge, in Devonshire, England, has decided that the word "dammit" is obscene and that its use may be punished as a crime. It appears that the Honorable Francis Lascelles, son of the Earl of Harewood, was bicycling through the country when he was capsized by a carriage driven by a woman. In the accident the Hon. Francis lost one ear and his collar bone was broken. Under this slight provocation he said dammit, and the woman had him arrested and arraigned for using obscene language. The horrified magistrate fined him $5 and costs.

Mrs. Simons and children returned on Monday from a two week's visit with relatives at Edmonton.

Change of Management

A change in the management of the old popular house, the Alberta Hotel, took place Monday last, T. B. Smith who has been manager for the past three months withdrawing and C. N. Davidson who has been connected with the house since August last, assuming the management. During the short period here Mr. Smith won the esteem of all with whom he came in contact. The new manager is an old resident of the district, having come here from Illinois three years ago in March and located at Cummings. Mr. Davidson owns a half-section in that district which is in an advanced stage of cultivation, consequently he is well and favorably known and under his management the Alberta will no doubt continue to enjoy the large patronage as in the past.

A Bad Fire Near Islay

Jas. Gilchrist Loses Stallion and Other Stock - Settlers Still Coming In

Fire broke out on the farm of Mr. Jas. Gilchrist on May 3rd doing some serious damage. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is thought to have been from a haystack near the barn. On seeing smoke coming from the barn, Mr. Gilchrist made an effort to get the horses out but was unable to do so owing to the intense heat and smoke. Many people were on the scene in a very short time but were unable to save either buildings or horses; the fire having got well ahead was kept in continual blaze by the strong wind which was blowing all the time. The loss is a heavy one as Mr. Gilchrist's stallion, Prince Arthur, was one of the horses burned; besides this there was a mare, a cow, several pigs and a quantity of hay, and harness. We understand there was no insurance.

The new post-office was opened on May 2nd and is a great improvement on the old one.

The ladies aid of the Presbyterian church held an ice-cream social on the 6th in the church. There was a good attendance and a very good time was spent. Musical selections, recitations, &c were rendered at intervals. Ice cream and other refreshments were served during the evening and as a result the ladies were well rewarded for their efforts by the substantial sum which was made.

At the office of D. H. Moore, J. P., on May 6th, three persons were charged with starting prairie fires. Two of the offenders were each fined $25 and costs, while the third was fined $15. The number of prairie fires in this district has been greater this spring than previously. Probably the fines which are being imposed will help to lessen the danger of a repetition in the fall.

The news of the death of King Edward VII was received here on Saturday. Suitable reference was made to the sad event in the churches on Sunday.

Mr. A. W. Fiske conducted service in the Church of England on May 8th and will be in charge of Islay and Pleasant Valley churches until Mr. Edwards' return. On May 15th a special memorial service for our late King Edward VII will be conducted by Mr. Fiske.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Elliott left on Saturday for the south.

Dr. Cunningham of Vermilion was in town Saturday and Sunday.

Several families have located south of town recently.

CALISTHENICS for MOTHER and CHILD

Mother's horizontal bar

The knee should be raised at right angles.

To encourage deep breathing.

REGULAR and systematic exercise cannot be instituted too early in the training of little children, and the results will be doubly beneficial if the enjoyment of play can be associated with the daily drill. There will never be any difficulty in securing the child's enthusiastic co-operation, for it is natural for the little one to be active, and when mother joins in the gymnastics the result is foreseen.

I advise these light gymnastics, or calisthenics, to be taken in the early morning hours for about ten minutes each day. The clothing should be comfortably loose and there should be paid strict attention to the order and work. Do not allow any foolishness to enter into the exercise and insist upon a concentration of the mind, which is always beneficial in this kind of action.

The first exercise should be taken after the command of "[illegible] bend" is given. Over the strong arm of the mother the little child should bend until the hands touch the floor. This is not difficult for the soft flexible bones of a little one. Have this movement repeated four or five times.

The balancing movement should then be taken. With hands on hips, a backward movement should be taken. Be sure to support the body at the waist line, as this will prevent any straining of the muscles of the child, and will also give the little gymnast a feeling of security.

A leg movement is the next in order. With the knee straight it must be raised at right angles with the body, then slowly lowered. This should be repeated slowly and carefully, and the other limb given the like exercise in the same way.

The next exercise is especially delightful to a little child. Upon mother's horizontal bar the girl or boy can take a firm grip and be lifted from the ground; the head must be kept well raised, and there must never be any overtaxing of the arm muscles.

Last and very important [illegible] exercise to encourage deep breathing. The arms should be straight [illegible] the body [illegible] a deep breath [illegible] I advise [illegible] emphasize this step in the day's [illegible]

RALPH CONNOR

The Story of the Man and His Books

In the Highland settlement of Glengarry, in the heart of a Canadian forest, Rev. Charles W. Gordon, better known to the reading world as Ralph Connor, was born in 1860. In his career, the markings of heredity and environment are more manifest than in most men, as some hands show the [illegible] more strongly than others.

To the virility, keenness, individuality and friend-making genius of his father, Rev. Daniel Gordon, a Scotch preacher and teller of stories in the primitive pioneer days of Canada's backwoods forty years ago, was united in him the sympathy, mental keenness, literary temperament, spiritual insight and hunger for helpfulness that distinguished his mother.

In the woods through which he went to school, and where his early childhood days were spent, he grew into that close reverent love and communion with Nature that has become part of his very life, and pulsates through all his pages. At eleven, the removal of his family to another section gave him better school advantages, and prepared him for his course at Toronto University. He earned money in the fields to pay for his education; he was not a hard student, but passed his examinations seemingly by instinct. After a three years' course at Knox College, where prizes and scholarships dropped into his hands when he was not looking, he spent a year in Edinburgh and on the Continent to gain back his fleeting health.

On his return he went to Banff, the National Park of Canada, inhaling the pure, clear air of the mountains and the spiritual atmosphere that seemed nearer to God because nearer to unspoiled Nature. On Sundays he preached in the little Presbyterian Church to an audience of villagers and tourists, and it was while a home missionary in the Northwest that he grew discouraged over the small appropriation made for the work among the miners. His friend, the editor of "The Westminster" of Toronto, invited him to wage his war for funds through the pages of his paper, and, in accepting, Mr Gordon decided that a strongly human story might win its way to the hearts and purses of the people.

The story was "Black Rock," that virile, crisp series of pictures of life in the mining camps, that made their author famous. Then came "The Sky Pilot," "The Man From Glengarry," "Beyond the Marshes" and "The Prospector," all tingling with vitality—stories tender, humorous, picturesque, pathetic, strenuous in action and simple in thought

Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Secretary In Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

Some like winged thing of the night brought a lodging in a hall shaded from the moon. Like many the moon had drawn, and soon stopped stooped to be one of those it drew to stay.

He remembered now how he had gone to the window, and looked down into the garden, and seen the girl as a moonquit of the lane and their fingers met. Indeed, he had seen it all, except the agony of the sorrowful on the earth's bosom, and never here.

Her great moment had come yet whether it was to be a moment of ecstasy or one of despair, he could not tell. But the knowledge that he had not yet reached the end of his journey, that he had yet to go, and how much further, filled him with a strange sense of disappointment. When he had left Virginia, and seized upon the opportunity of the embassy, he had thought that he was doing the best thing for her and for himself, but had pledged himself to nothing.

Now he knew that he had said and done all that was possible, and that he had left her free to act as she thought best. Yet he was not free. He was bound to her by the strongest of all ties, and he could not be happy himself, or give her happiness, until he had seen her safe.

How was the one fiercest power of all the world, he remembered, it checked every wrestling effort to hold back against its tremendous sweep? But the moment of surrender had come, and he was conscious of a strange relief, as if he had ceased to struggle against the inevitable. He was sure that Virginia would be willing to go with him now, and he was sure that he could make her happy. He was free as if he had never been married.

He realized that two months spent with Virginia in the Tyrol would be two months of heaven, and he longed for them with a passionate longing. That is a mere sentence, a hyperbole; I know that a man and woman can't live on love, but I know my life. You have made it, dear, and you cannot throw it away. I will not allow you to do it. I will not! And I will tell you why. I will be selfish. I confess it. I am selfish blatantly so. I arrange the lives of those I love to suit my own comfort without a fuss, unless, when you refuse, I am free as if I had never seen you.

I know that you should spend your next year, the first year of your life, with me. Then when she did not draw it away, because he was to have all the experience, he held it between both his own as he looked on.

Deepest one," he said, "how I feel that I have loved you long as I did when I dreamt I stood here a woman—for your sake and my own, I would have avoided meeting you too often. I do love you frankly. I didn't see how I could, when I was only loved as a friend. But I am not content to stay. I want you to be my wife, and I cannot leave you. Will you come with me? Will you be my wife?"

"I do now," Virginia whispered. She had prayed for this, lived for this, and she was dreaming it happened. She had pictured a different scene, a scene of passion, of wild love, of heart to fancy broken words of entreaty and pleading reproach, but instead in anticipating his suffering she had felt that for her devotion it was right. "It came—so much more than I ever hard it will be with you."

"If you come, then, we shall not be parted," he answered.

The princess looked up at him in wonder, holding back as he spoke, as if she have caught her in his arms. What could he mean? Surely he knew that, believing her to be free, she could not be his wife. Surely, yet made it possible for him to remember?

"I don't understand," she faltered. "You are the emperor, and I am not even then—"

"You are my wife if you love me."

In the shock of her ecstatic surprise she was hopelessly at his mercy. Hunger, and he held her close and passionately. He felt that her fair face crushed against his heart. She could hear it beating. And if his mother had chosen this wife? Then he loved her enough for that. Yet how was it possible for him to stand ready for the sacrifice, to override the wishes of his own blood?

"My darling!" he said to her again. "To think that you are free."

"I have loved you from the first," the princess confessed, "but I was afraid you would not, even if you cared, that we must say goodbye here." And in that moment the truth would have been told, but the word "goodbye" stuck in her throat, and would not let it pass.

"We shall not part goodbye, not for an hour," he cried. After this I could not part from you. There's nothing to prevent my being your husband, my wife, it would be your own wish of royal blood, and you should be top of princes—the finest supreme first of hitherto ever—for such and such are of fate, you and I. We must take the goods the gods provide. My god does you will always—as the emperor of Rhodria the effects of the powerful enough to make you. If I am to you may I not be your husband? Am I not to be your wife?"

"Yes, yes," she answered, and now that she had given him the first time my heart was full of sweetness. It was as if the whole world were changed. It was as if the whole world were changed. It was as if the whole world were changed

GEORGE P. REMINISCENT.

Minister of Railways Tells of Early Days in Ottawa.

One of several interesting articles in the fortieth anniversary number of The Ottawa Free Press was a column of reminiscences by Hon. George P. Graham, sometime temporary editor and political reporter of that newspaper. One portion of the recollections of the Minister of Railways has particular value as a sidelight on the [illegible] an energetic man has made [illegible]. Mr. Graham relates how, a green country lad, he went up to [illegible] Cabinet conclave in the Eastern Block to get news for his paper concerning the swearing-in of some new Cabinet Ministers. He writes: "At [illegible] time I was able to own a horse [illegible], and enjoyed the comforts of a [illegible] coat, a fur cap and driving [illegible] of the mother-made-them' [illegible] that really keep out cold. [illegible] day several new Ministers were [illegible] be sworn in. It was my duty to [illegible] and I wanted it fresh. [illegible] the [illegible] coat, Persian [illegible] cap with [illegible]-turned peak, and [illegible] mittens hanging out of [illegible] pocket, as green a scribe as [illegible] approached the portals of the [illegible] than her had him to the second [illegible] of the East Block, anxious for [illegible] and not averse to having a [illegible] fun.

[illegible] climbed the stairs, turned to the right, and caused no little consternation among the messengers. In a whispery voice I was told to breathe lightly, tread softly, and on no account to go near a certain door, [illegible] I have found is the [illegible] the [illegible] where are [illegible] orders in council, etc.

[illegible]

We [illegible] wonder if some of the same [illegible] are still there, and as they stand with bated breath and [illegible] to allow Mr. Graham and other Ministers to pass, they [illegible] to remember the trepidation they sought to instill into the breast of a green young newspaperman twenty years ago.

Roblin's Opponent.

When Hon. C. J. Mickle, the leader of the Opposition in the Manitoba House, was elevated to the Bench last fall, Tobias Crawford Norris, member for [illegible], was selected as his successor. It was considered by some a [illegible] experiment at the time, but Mr. Norris has taken hold of the meagre Opposition with sure [illegible] and energy this session, and has proved such a hard fighter and careful Parliamentarian that there are no longer any doubting Thomases in the ranks of the party.

Like the majority of the Manitoba members, Mr. Norris claims Ontario as his home. He was born at Brampton, Sept. 5, 1861. He migrated westward when a young man and has made his mark in his adopted province. He homesteaded and farmed for many years. Later he went into the auctioneering business, and at present is considered the best auctioneer in the province.

He first essayed politics in 1896, when he was elected to the Legislature for [illegible]. He was again returned in 1899, but was defeated by 11 votes at the general elections of 1903. He stood again in 1907, when he carried the seat by a hundred majority.

[illegible]

Another for Hamilton.

The supplementary estimates frequently contain some curious items, and those for the current fiscal year just brought down by Mr. Fielding make an appropriation of $1,750 to provide for the expenditure involved in the removal of an insane Indian from [illegible] to the Hamilton Asylum, and his maintenance there to March 31. If it costs that much to bring an insane Indian all that distance, goodness only knows what it would have cost to bring a sane one. The item, however, will give an opportunity to some irrepressible Toronto member to ask the Government why it was deemed necessary to add to the ordinary population of Hamilton in that way.

Miss Ella Muriel Wood, of [illegible], Ont., says: "Two years ago I was going into a decline. I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I could not [illegible] the carpet. If I went for a drive, [illegible] to lie down when I came back; if I went for a mile on my wheel I was too weak to lift it through the gateway, and last time I came in from having a spin I dropped utterly helpless from [illegible]. My father would give me no peace until I secured PSYCHINE, knowing it was excellent for decline or weakness. I must say the results are wonderful and people remarked my improvement. Instead of a little, pale, hollow-cheeked, listless, melancholy girl, I am to-day full of life, ready for a sleigh-ride, a skating match, or an evening party with anyone, and a few months ago I could not struggle to church, 60 rods from my home. I have never had the slightest cause to fear any return of the disease."

TO INCREASE YOUR HEIGHT

A General Stretching Exercise

Touch the Toes with the Finger-Tips

I THINK that nearly all women have in their heart's the wish to be "divinely tall." Grace is generally associated with height that does not border on the extreme, and to those who wish to increase their height I am giving a few exercises that will make the ideal a little more attainable.

It is possible to stretch the muscles through exercise, and the fact is indubitable that through continuous movement the different portions of the body can be perceptibly lengthened. If the faithful drill be given every day, morning and evening, if you possibly can manage it, there will be a gratifying proof of the efficacy of this method.

The free and easy movement of all parts of the body is important. Therefore I advise a special [illegible]. If this be impossible, divest yourself of all tight clothing as [illegible].

Now bend the body [illegible] forward with arms extended, and touch the toes with the finger-tips. At least try to do this, for you will find that this is not a feat easily performed. However, do not despair, for by constant practice a flexibility of the trunk muscles will be attained, and you will find that each few days will bring you nearer the goal.

With hands on the hips to insure easy balance, rise on the toes just as high as possible. This stretches the leg muscles. Repeat ten or twenty times, and it will surprise you to notice how strong [illegible].

Head backward bend! [illegible] the throat and the muscles of the [illegible] proper [illegible]. A very simple exercise, but it is necessary for the complete stretching of the body.

Now mark a point [illegible] wall [illegible] arms [illegible] touch the point [illegible] always a little beyond [illegible] benefit desired.

As a final exercise raise [illegible] from the floor by means of a [illegible] [illegible] other [illegible].

I know [illegible] the following [illegible] increased their height in [illegible] months. [illegible] is required to add a few inches to your stature. It is worth a trial, and I promise you the most satisfactory results.

Head Backward Bend

This Stretches the Leg Muscles

Sunday School Day

Union S. S. Service Programme Held in Morning Union S.S. in Afternoon and Exchange of Pulpits in Evening A Busy Day

Sunday was Sunday School Day for the Protestant churches all over the world. Among the local churches it was observed in union. In the morning at 11 o'clock all interested in S. S. work met in the Methodist church, where a special childrens day programme was given by the scholars. H. N. Stephens took charge of the meeting.

An interesting address on the present state, growth and prospects of the work was given by F. H. Barber.

In the afternoon a union S. S. service was held in the Presbyterian church. On account of the epidemic of measles only 65 were present, but even under these conditions, the possibility of a union school were clearly demonstrated.

In the evening the annual exchange of pulpits took place: Mr. Simons at the Methodist church, Mr. Kempton at the Presbyterian, and Mr. Hodgins at the Church of Christ.

Alberta Masons Annual Session

Record Gathering of Members of the Order in Attending Meeting at Calgary

Two hundred members of the Masonic order, representing 53 Masonic Lodges from all over Alberta, are attending the annual session of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Alberta in Calgary.

Special Service Held

In common with every place throughout the British Empire a memorial service was held in the Victoria school, Friday afternoon last at 1 o'clock, the hour of the funeral of our late lamented sovereign, King Edward VII.

Mayor Stephens presided over the service and opened by reading a portion of scripture. The following hymns were sung during the service: "Lead Kindly Light," "A Few More Years Shall Roll," and "Nearer My God to Thee."

Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Hodgins, after which most fitting and able addresses bearing upon the life and influence of the late King and the great national loss sustained, were delivered by Mr. C. V. Caesar, Rev. Mr. Kempton, Rev. Mr. Simons, Rev. Mr. Hodgins and Dr. Lyan.

All through the service was of a most solemn character, but rung with that true spirit of loyalty and patriotism. All that the late King [illegible] the life of his people as well as his mighty influence in the preservation of the peace of the world was more forcibly realized by those assembled to do honor, in that solemn hour, to the memory of him who was beloved by all his subjects and whose name will go down in history as "King Edward the Peacemaker."

Miss Plant presided at the organ for the occasion.

ASPECT OF

ZAM BUK

Zam Buk was a saving to A. Sap-ton—indeed, when a new member of the family contracted a cut or a bad sore it was known as "coming under the Zam Buk spell." Even the most obstinate sores, ulcers or wounds would be healed by Zam Buk. Many of these had been pronounced incurable by doctors, but Zam Buk healed them.

"I found it's value!"

There is another aspect of Zam Buk's power to which we must call attention. It is the way in which Zam Buk's soothing, healing influence allays pain. Many of the cases in which Zam Buk has been used were accompanied with the most terrible pain. This pain was relieved by Zam Buk almost as soon as the balm was applied. Zam Buk is the only remedy we know of which has this power.

Mr. A. J. Brook, of Wellington Place, Hamilton, Ont., says: "I may I add that Zam Buk is fine. It is not only healed me crowds of dollars as well as hours of pain, but it has also healed several of mother. Hence my work, almost daily, have covered with the terrible diseases. The itching, burning and smarting I suffered from were but just gone through it as well! Doctors, friends, and relatives all said I would die as a lot of good; and from one of them I received the cold shoulder. Then Zam Buk came to my rescue, and I am glad to say that I have been cured. I have had no return of the trouble, and I am sure that a few years' freedom from it proves that the cure is permanent. I am sure that a few words from me concerning Zam Buk will be of use to others who are suffering from skin diseases, and without going through it as I have

THE REFERENDUM

The necessity of a check [illegible] hasty legislation by the pr[illegible] parliaments in Canada has from time to time been appa[illegible] the Winnipeg Free Press [illegible] opinion that a strong mov[illegible] likely to develop [illegible] the adoption of the referendum [illegible] a check upon the extensive powers of the legislature. These powers are often used rashly and without due consideration of the consequences. One serious defect in the working of all the provincial legislatures, it says, is the rarity among them of an effective and aggressive opposition. In most of the provinces at present the governments are much too strong. Continuing along the line the Press says: "Governments which are supreme in the legislative bodies which support them often put through legislation which they know to be unpopular. To do this it is only necessary for them to secure the support of their party following in the caucus, and this is usually a comparatively easy thing to do. Once this support is obtained the legislation is railroaded through the legislature in defiance of the protests of the opposition, whose criticisms and objections are treated as of no account whatever. In cases of this kind the government counts upon the capacity of the electorate to forget, and, in many cases, their confidence in the apathy of the voters is justified. ...."

"The referendum, when adopted as a general principal of government by a province will put both the government and the opposition upon a new footing. The government will be obliged to consider its legislation more carefully, since it may have to face not only the criticism of the opposition in the house, but a possibility of a test by the electors. A protest by the opposition against legislation proposed by the government will, under these conditions, receive a degree of consideration now lacking. It will not be a case of treating the opposition arguments with contempt and summoning the members to vote them down; but the government will always see behind the opposition the large body of electors whom they represent, and, with the fear of an appeal to the people upon them, there will be an end to the insolent indifference with which it, at present, treats every suggestion or criticism from the opposite side of the house.

"In short, when the referendum can be resorted to, the government will take pains to assure itself that public opinion is behind any legislation it may propose, since it will not care to risk the possibilities of a reverse if the issues are referred to the people. It is not probable that a government could survive a reversal of its policy on any important subject. The referendum will undoubtedly put an end to reckless partisanship and wasteful administration on the part of provincial governments."

BRANCH LINES

For four years settlement into [illegible] districts tributary to Vermilion has been going on at [illegible] practically all the [illegible] thirty and forty [illegible] have become peopled [illegible] industrious class [illegible] Eighty out of [illegible] of these can be classed [illegible] men, who came in to [illegible] to farm for the profits to be derived from intelligent efforts [illegible] the farm. Conditions from year to year have necessitated locating on lands twenty-five, thirty and forty miles and in some instances even farther from the nearest railroad market. In the earlier stages of settlement the remoteness from market does not impress itself upon settlers as a hardship. In the pioneering days the returns from the farm are necessarily limited, but as cultivation advances and the farmer is looking to the returns from the farm running up to a thousand, two thousand or more bushels of grain, then it is forcibly impressed upon him that he is up against a real and ever present hardship, and one which brings home to him the fact that the conditions which surround him deprive the grain raising business of all semblance of profit. For him there is no choice in the matter but to rest on his oars until sufficient agitation of a vigorous nature, brings about the required relief in the form of a railroad, or in the event of failure in this respect and continued indifference to his crying need, he has no alternative but to pull up his stakes and get out.

Socially, these people are not isolated. They have and are acquiring everything but the one thing essential to enable them to produce at a living profit and make them a happy and contented people. As far out as you go local improvement districts are organized as well as school districts with their pretty and substantial schoolhouses, and numerous mission churches. Progress is the evidence on all sides, and the settlers are dipping down into their pockets to afford their children an elementary education, and to build good trafficable roads towards developing and opening up the country. But as year follows year the glamor wears off and when the returns are expected for his labors he suddenly realizes he is up against conditions which make it impossible to conduct the farm on a profitable basis. This has the one result and the best settlers get discouraged.

It is a poor policy to encourage a settlement that peopled the land on all sides with a class buoyed up by the brilliance of the future, only to have all their hopes and ambitions deadened by an isolation from markets year after year, till the staunchest loses hope.

Vermilion has had enough railroad charters floating around it—but the great trouble is that they are still floating. We have in the past heard of the Vermilion-Calgary line, the Vermilion-Wetaskiwin line, the Vermilion-Cold Lake line and finally at the last election we got the Vermilion-Whitford Lake line. Up to the present no branch lines have been undertaken and the need and demands of the Vermilion district lie right there.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR INDIGESTION

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more. It decays, and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, bad breath which disgusts your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that does not digest, but ferments and oftimes rots in the stomach.

And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

MI-O-NA is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact it is such a positive cure for indigestion and all stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by Fred C Lang to cure or money back. The price of a large box of Mi-o-na tablets is 50 cents, and they are sure to promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

MARGARET ANGLIN
Canada's Successful Young Actress

Miss Margaret Anglin, the popular young Canadian actress, has manifested her individuality on many occasions—and in her portrayal of Camille in Dumas' play she defied the conventions by creating the rôle on new lines, making the heroine a sweet, simple, sincere ingénue, uncontaminated by the atmosphere in which she lived. The actress made a strong defence for her conception of the character and gave chapter and verse from the writer of the play to prove her contention.

Miss Anglin was born in Ottawa in 1876 and here first asserted her individuality by choosing as the scene of her début on earth the hallowed precincts of the House of Parliament, her father at that time being Speaker of the House of Commons. Her early education was at Loretto Abbey, Toronto, and the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Montreal. At the age of seventeen she determined to go on the stage, and went to New York to study at the Empire School of Dramatic Acting, and began to show her ability by her clever character work in two matinées given by the students.

In 1894 she made her professional début at the Academy of Music in New York in Bronson Howard's successful play "Shenandoah." A season of barnstorming and the cares, trials and troubles incident to one-night stands proved of value in giving her a deeper insight into certain phases of life, in increasing her repertoire and in preparing her for her later successes.

In 1896-7 Miss Anglin, as the leading lady of James O'Neill's company, made a tour of the United States and Canada and did splendid work as Ophelia in "Hamlet," Virginia in "Virginius," Julie de Mortimar in "Richelieu" and Mercedes in "Monte Cristo." The ease and simplicity of her acting and her versatility were again shown in her clever portrayal of Meg in "Lord Chumley" and she rendered even more absolute and secure her place in the hearts of Canadians during her tour through the provinces.

Her brilliant acting in "Mrs. Dane's Defence" and her later work in Mr. Mansfield's company revealed the [illegible] of her powers and the broadening of her genius. Through all [illegible] the golden thread of personality and the natural [illegible] sweetness and strength of character of the woman merely [illegible] in the work of the actress. FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE
The Angel of the Crimea

In her home in the West End of London passing the days of the late autumn of her life in an invalid chair, lives a white-haired, sweet-faced, kindly-voiced noble woman, whom the world knows as Florence Nightingale. Born in 1820 in Florence, Italy, the daughter of a wealthy Englishman, under his loving tutorship she mastered the classics and literature, became a good musician and learned several languages.

She had a genius for helpfulness, a consecration to humanity that found expression in sweet ministrations of love and care of the sick and suffering. In nursing she saw a noble career for women and in 1849 went to a Protestant school for nurses, on the Rhine. On her return to England she assumed management of a sanitarium for invalid governesses. In 1854 England was roused to a white heat of indignation by the revelations of the horrors of the hospital service of the Crimea. Government incompetency, imbecile red tape, rascally dishonor and criminal neglect in treating the sick and wounded soldiers made mere war itself a paradise of mercy by contrast. Dante's Inferno seemed a mild bit of imagination in the face of the real horrors at Scutari, with four miles of beds huddled in one three-story house.

Florence Nightingale volunteered to lead a band of women to transform the hospitals in the name of humanity, and in November, 1854, with thirty-eight nurses she reached Scutari. Her magic touch brought order out of chaos: the sunshine, sweetness and soothing peace of woman's work filled the rooms; the ghastly mortality was reduced to a minimum; soldiers wounded and dying kissed the shadow of the angel of the Crimea as it fell across their counterpanes or reverently touched the hem of her garment as she passed near them. Often for twenty hours at a stretch she stood giving her orders—the noble leader of her little army of peace; and her kindness, wisdom, sweetness, energy, influence and inspiration seemed inexhaustible.

For two years she kept up the fight and with health impaired returned to England, shunning all publicity. The £50,000 testimonial tendered her by the people, she refused, but finally accepted to found a training school for nurses. By penny subscriptions the soldiers secured enough to erect a statue to her memory, but this, too, she rejected. For nearly fifty years she has been an invalid, and yet this "Grand Old Woman of England" at the age of eighty-five is still serene, sweet, helpful and contented with a name that will be hallowed as long as the British army and the British nation shall endure.

The Princess Virginia

By C.N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

S

"Lemme shell beep one to pay for the ride!" he said fortunately he himself, too eager to search over lost hope, lost opportunities. "He will know how to punish her. And between us she shall suffer!"

CHAPTER TWELVE

It was for refuge that the princess fled to her own room.

A boudoir shared by the grand duchess and joined it, and exactly there, to her dismay the girl saw that the door was ajar, extended it. Ernestine, the Rhinelander.

The princess had not been observed the chief duchess to be in the room, and the latter guests of the house were not likely to intrude there, so she felt a new and unpermitted. And the girl had been in a panic.

At last she entered a light maid, who had been sent to her mistress' room to wait for her. The princess stayed, for dazed, to give to test her mind from her private grief, to be alone, to be undisturbed. Had you sent for me—

I never very best friend to the dear young princess," the girl answered. "Ernestine, you may leave us."

The Frenchwoman went out noiselessly.

Miss Virginia did not speak. Could she? She had been cruel and unjust to tender Klaus von Brentzein and that hurt her more than all the rest. The pain of cards had fallen! Was it the news of defeat which had overwhelmed her?

"Have you—did any one tell you?" the girl faltered.

"I've had a telegram—a horrible telegram, Virginia. I am not young, as you are! I am too old to endure all this. I have been ill, and they have packed me to it."

The grand duchess' voice was plain tive and pitched among the girl's sick nerves like the wind.

"What do you mean, dear? I do not understand. But I am sure that the worst you are ill. If it's my fault to any way I—"

Her mother pointed toward a writing table. "The telegram is there," she murmured. "It is too distressing—too humiliating."

Virginia picked up a monogrammed telegram form and began to read the message. It was from Count Leopold and ran:

"Have been compelled to abandon my journey here owing to serious illness. Am confined to my bed. Regret extremely that I cannot have the honor of visiting the court of Rhoelin from Great Britain.

"LEOPOLD."

Lady Lambert blushed in silence.

"Isn't it hideous?" asked the grand duchess bitterly. "Isn't it cruel? He should have deliberately planned our destruction. He knew that I, the Queen's own way like deserted adventuresses, taken him over—he knew I was ready to sell the emperor kit."

"No," said Virginia hopelessly.

"What! Not yet? Oh, my dear, the poor boy is suffering in a crisis—probably—tonight even. It's evident that his home sympathies are with his own person, has been at work behind our backs. It is for Paris to turn his brave upon him, and there isn't an hour to waste. From the first you seemed to have no influence over him. Now the time has come."

Ah, I deserve that," said Virginia, with a sob breaking the ice in her throat. "But I did my best, and I am not to blame. You were right, dear; I was a fool to think that he and I could be more than friends. I was a fool to come to Rhoelin."

The grand duchess grew paler than before. She had been vaguely disappointed, but not at all surprised, if Virginia admitted that this unfortunate affair should never have been undertaken, then indeed the earth would be too small to hide the girl from her wrath.

"Oughtn't not—to have rooms?" she repeated grimly.

"Have you understood?"

The princess stood with bent head, as if in the dock. She had never felt almost than anything I ever had to do, but she must do some. Surprises at an end, dear."

"What!—you've told him, and he has refused to forgive?"

"It bears nothing."

"For heaven's sake, don't keep me in suspense!"

Virginia's lips were dry. "He sent me a message by his wife"—she had to wait—wait! Don't look happy. You will be sorry for me when I tell you."

Virginia's face was very white. "He sent me a message by his wife"—she had to wait—wait! Don't look happy. You will be sorry for me when I tell you."

The duchess looked as if he might keep up the suspense. Surprises at an end, dear."

A. F. ARMSTRONG,
THE CEMENT MAN

A correspondent writes, "The season for prairie fires is practically over. During the past spring these fires have been unusually bad owing to the very dry spring, and farmers have had to turn out and fight fire two or three days at a time in order to save their property when they should have been doing their seeding. Now I think it is not asking too much where local improvement districts exist, for them to plow up or make fire-guards on township or range lines and thus save the settlers many hours of hard work fighting fire for which there is no pay and no thanks. We pay our taxes, fence and break up the land—in short we are making the country and I think we have a right to have protection from fire."

Five members of the Alberta Legislature have offered to resign their seats to the new Premier and it it is more than likely—as an effort is being made to have the Premier represent a northern constituency—that the resignation of Archie Campbell, member for Vermilion, will be the one accepted, and Premier Sifton will sit for Vermilion.

FORECASTS BY POLITICAL PROPHETS

C. W. Cross Not Likely to be in New Cabinet—Marshall Stays

Edmonton, May, 30—That Mr. Cross will not be a member of the new cabinet seems now pretty nearly certain. Mr. Cross admitted as much to a Capital reporter this morning.

"I'm out of politics for good now. I'm practising law once more," was the way he put it.

Of course Premier Sifton may have decided to spring Mr. Cross' appointment as a nice little surprise, but this is unlikely.

The new cabinet, it is stated on good but unofficial authority, will be composed as follows:

Premier and Minister of Education, Hon. A. L. Sifton.

Attorney General, Judge C. H. Mitchell, Medicine Hat.

Minister of Public Works, A. J. McLean, Lethbridge district.

Minister of Agriculture, Duncan Marshall, Olds.

Everything points to the fact that this will be the cabinet of which Premier Sifton will be president. A. J. McLean, who was an insurgent, it is believed, is chosen because he is one of the most moderate of the insurgents. Dr. Warnock, Pincher Creek, had a very good chance of being chosen, but it was felt that his stand had been too bitter against the government, and that he would not be very acceptable to supporters of the late government.

That Judge Mitchell will be one of the members of the cabinet may now be taken as a positive fact. Everything points to his selection. He is a strong personal friend of the premier.

Another thing that indicates that he will be sworn in on Wednesday is the fact that he is arriving in town this evening.

Duncan Marshall is evidently picked as the only member of the old government to sit in the new cabinet. He did not take any prominent part in the A. & G. W. controversy, and this is believed to be the reason that he retains his portfolio.

When asked this morning as to whether he had announcement to make, Premier Sifton replied that the new cabinet would be announced at the office of the Lieutenant Governor a few minutes after 11 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Evidently this means that no announcement will be made until after the new ministers are sworn in, which ceremony will take place at Government House Wednesday morning.

It is expected that Premier Sifton will also announce his policy on Wednesday morning. Until then, nothing official will be given out.

Later. The cabinet as named above has been confirmed.

Geo. C. Powell Disposes of 95 Head from Ranch to Manitoba Live Stock Co. of Winnipeg

Geo. C. Powell, the well known rancher, of "Island Hill Ranch" two and a half miles east of town, completed a big sale of horses, comprising 95 head of horses and colts, the end of the week to Geo. Brett, of the Manitoba Live Stock Co. of Winnipeg. Mr. Powell obtained a good price for the bunch the amount being in excess of what he had been holding them at this spring. The shipment went out Monday in three cars and were destined for Saskatoon.

Mr. Powell still has some 25 head of good brood mares left on the ranch and intends to remain in the horse raising business.

WATERWAY FROM EDMONTON TO WINNIPEG

Navigable Route via North Saskatchewan River Survey Being Made

OTTAWA, May 30.—A survey is to be immediately commenced to ascertain the possibility of making a navigable route between Edmonton and Winnipeg by way of North Saskatchewan river and Lake Winnipeg. Explorers have reported that a six or eight foot waterway can be established on the route at comparatively low cost with a few locks as the river has a deep and a broad channel for nearly the whole distance. A vote of ten thousand dollars was made by Parliament last session to defray the cost of the survey. The survey will be made under the direction of F. R. Hodgins [illegible] of the [illegible] Canal survey. Five parties will go in and carry on surveying operations on as many sections of the route. It is expected that the work will be finished this summer.

SING-SONG AT SEA.

How the Sailors Amuse Themselves in the Navy.

It might astonish a landsman suddenly to find, on that holy of holies, the quarter-deck of one of His Majesty's battleships, a stage with wings, curtains, footlights, and orchestra complete, as he might have done on a certain evening a few months ago.

For a tip-top variety concert has been arranged by the ship's company, and it is advertised to begin at the orthodox hour of 8 p.m. We are at sea, steam is down, and we have only to lie passively in mid-ocean, in accordance with orders. It is the time of the annual manoeuvres, hostilities are even now in progress; but we are far away from the scene of action, and so—we get up a concert.

It is eight o'clock, and the captain and officers have taken their seats in the stalls, while the audience and chorus combined, consisting of some 700 British tars, crowd close behind. The sea, the air, even the men, are still as the band opens with a popular selection from one of the musical comedies. Loud applause follows, and without loss of time a cheery-faced able seaman steps forward and hurls at us a patriotic song entitled "The British Navy." There is no need to call on the chorus: everyone is ready, and the refrain, "We 'ave a Navy, the British Navy," is taken up and sent rolling over the waste of waters, perhaps as far as the flagship, a couple of miles away on our starboard beam.

But there is no time for encores. The next turn is a comic song called "A Mouth Like Mine," by the funny man of the lower deck, also an able seaman. He has discarded the King's uniform for burnt cork, a silk hat, and a wonderful coat and trousers worked with the broad arrow and with a flowing pattern of rats in full cry. His selection is hardly of the drawing-room type, but it is funnily and cleverly rendered, and compares favorably with many professional turns in the hall. Following, we have the evergreen "Larboard Watch," very well sung by two sergeants of Marines; and, after that, another bluejacket sings us that taking song from "The Lady Slavey," called "In Friendship's Name." The captain of Marines is acting as accompanist, but his intentions are better than his capabilities, and the singer looks at him with an aggrieved air. But we are not critical, and the same thundering acclamations are dealt out as before.

An instrumental duet by two stokers comes next. One of them happens to be nearly bald, and his appearance on the stage is signalized by an overwhelming shout of "There's 'air!" from all parts of the quarter-deck. After the duet, a fine rendering of "The Village Blacksmith" by another sergeant of Marines is following ... [illegible] ... London Tit-Bits.

CONCERNING the CORSET

Sewing in a Hip Pad

A Shield for the Front.

Adjusted a Crooked Line at the Back

The Well-fitted Corset

A CORSET nowadays should stand for comfort and beauty, and if your own particular possession be defeating these ends, then I wish to claim a little of your time today in talking over a few salient facts concerning this very important article.

In the first place, there should be absolute cleanliness in the corset. Nothing is quite so suggestive of a lack of care as the corset stained with perspiration. This, in the summer time especially, can be obviated by the expedient so well known to all of us, the addition of a dress shield. The front is the portion that seems to be most frequently ruined, so you will sew in a shield on one side of the inner surface. This can be attached on the other side when the corsets are adjusted, by pinning with a tiny pin that comes just for this purpose.

Very often the fault of an ill-fitting corset lies in the first step of the adjustment. Many women carelessly throw the form around the body without a glance at the line of the back. Of course, the crooked line at the back will produce the wrong appearance at [illegible] and sides. So a careful inspection in a glass of the important back line will often solve the whole difficulty of an unattractive figure.

A corset is often too high on the top line. If any interference with the breathing or arm movements be felt, look carefully at this portion. We are living in an age when a good figure need not be secured at the expense of comfort. There is no remedy for this defect, other than a change of the model.

It is not unusual for one hip to be more developed than the other. ... [illegible] ... Attach a pad to the inside of the corset, the size and thickness of the wadding to be determined by the needs of the individual. When sewn on the corset, there must be no doubt about the well-balanced hip lines in the appearance.

There is shown a well-fitted corset, by the points of which I wish that you would judge your own. Sufficiently low in the bust for the ordinary-sized woman, it insures comfort and easy movements of the muscles of the arms and chest.

The hip line is the well-balanced natural one of a good figure, and let me explain that there is no constriction at the waist ... [illegible]

A [illegible] request of the settlers [illegible] 27 and 28-14-7 [illegible] John [illegible] homestead. The work [illegible] this week. Good grades have been secured on both sides and with very little difficulty an [illegible] wagon crossing can be made at this point. This is a point that should have been seen to years ago by the government. Up to this time there has been no reasonably passable crossing for a load between [illegible] 39-49-6 and section 2-53-8, or over a stretch of nine miles. All the best land in 49-7, has been taken for some time and in 49-8 there is only one homestead open. The settlers in these two townships are for the most part capable Anglo-Saxons. In that part of the country so far, all good roads have led to Mannville, not on account of the superior trading facilities of that town, but simply as a result of the poor chances for crossing the coulee towards Vermilion. In this way a large and profitable trade which by right belonged to Vermilion has been lost.

An exchange sums up Halley's comet as follows: "Halley's comet seems to be much after the nature of a delusion and a snare. A few weeks ago the "fiery monster" was to have been an awe-inspiring sight in the morning sky, but those who left their comfortable beds at the unearthly hour of 3 and 4 a. m. to gaze on the wondrous spectacle, invariably found that the comet was conspicuous by its absence from the ethereal blue. On May 18th this old earth of ours was to have passed through the comet's "great luminous tail" at which eventful time we were to behold some beautifully brilliant auroral displays, (providing we were not poisoned by cyanogen gas during the process,) the displays occurred not, however, and most of us are alive unto this day. After May 20 the comet was to have been the wonder and the sight of the century in the western sky each night soon after sundown, with its majestic tail stretching almost over to the eastern horizon. The comet may, of course be now in the western sky, but we havent seen it yet, and after all that has been written and said by scientific men as to what we were going to see of this flaming wonder of the universe we are now almost tempted to say: Astronomy! Thy name is humbugs."

Constable McPhail of Vermilion was in this part of the country recently.

King Edward Jots

Our school received a visit from the inspector recently who reported favorably upon the work of the teacher: Mrs. J. Harris Speer.

The faces of our farmers which had been drawn out to an abnormal length, almost verging on contortion, have regained their normal rotundity, and now carry the smile that wont come off. This transformation was brought about almost magically, by the recent seasonable rains, which have made the hard acres, now under cultivation to wear the green, which fills the farmer with hope for an ingathering at a later date. We must add that the same facial evidence of satisfaction, is worn by the business men of the town whose revenues largely depend upon the purchasing powers of the tillers of the soil.

The King Edward Comedy Company (Limited) recently took a voyage in a prairie schooner. They had lunch on the hurricane deck, which consisted of Boston Overthrow, Overland Trout, and Comet Tail Soup, usual side dishes.

The season has now arrived when the judgment of the road overseers, will be shown by the way in which they handle the road work at their disposal. The average man will not be disposed to kill himself with hard work on the road, hence the greater necessity for his work being well directed in order to make a real improvement to the farmer's highways.

We are sorry to state that our neighbor Jake Pearson is about to take his departure from among us. Mr. Pearson is well known as an honest, obliging and enterprising citizen. He will be greatly missed by [illegible] old and young. He will leave with our best wishes for his future health and prosperity.

Your correspondent along with others recently passed through the tail of the comet, with no visible marks of violence.

We learn from one of your citizens of Vermilion, who is counted an infallible authority, that the comet's tail split (went bust) and that we passed the right the crack thereof.

We have heard that in the north the comet's tail must have been of greater density as it knocked down Peary's pole and did other acts of damage to flags etc. planted there.

CHARLES M. HAYS
President of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

One of the railroad men of the times who has mastered all the intricacies of railway work in his thirty-two years of continuous service, is Charles Melville Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and second vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway. Born in 1856 at Rock Island, Ill., at the age of seventeen he began to learn the a-b-c of railroading, as clerk in the passenger department of the Atlantic and Pacific road at St. Louis. Then after a year of this schooling had proved his fitness he was promoted to the auditing department and later to the general superintendent's office. From 1878-86 he was secretary to the general manager of [illegible] roads, then general manager, later attaining the dignity of general manager of the Wabash system and in 1894 was elected vice-president.

In the two latter positions Mr. Hays represented his company as director on the boards of the various companies in which the road was interested. In January, 1896, through the efforts of Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, he was made general manager of the Grand Trunk at $25,000 a year with a five years' contract. The road was in a debilitated state of health; it needed heroic treatment—strong tonics quickly and properly administered, and deft surgery work in the way of cutting expenses and amputating useless members of the staff.

Mr. Hays made it clear that, as he was to be responsible for results, he must be free to select his own means to produce them. He was not to be a puppet nor a figure-head. He must have the support of the Board of Directors in carrying out what he decided the road needed. As the Grand Trunk had to meet American competition it must win its way by [illegible]. WOMEN'S WOES

Vermilion Women are Finding Relief at Last

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up" must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains: they must stoop over when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys.

Mrs. Edward Colored of 123 S. Harold street, Fort William, Ont., says "I suffered with dull miserable pains, soreness across my back and in my sides, for months. They would catch me so badly at times that I could scarcely move around. The kidney secretions had also been of a heavy color and contained a sediment. Then I would have dizzy spells and altogether, felt generally run down. After using a number of remedies without finding relief, I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and am pleased to say, found them an excellent remedy. They have relieved me of the miserable pains and soreness in my back, and have also cured me of my other kidney trouble." For sale in Vermilion by F. C. Long.

Manitoba Elections in July

Rumors in Circulation to That Effect

Winnipeg, June 1. —It is rumored here that the provincial government has decided to appeal to the country on Wednesday, July 20th. The government has so far made no official announcement, but it is expected that notice of dissolution of the present legislature will be made public in the course of a few weeks. It is expected that the government has decided on a short and sharp campaign so that business, etc., will not be interfered with only as little as possible.

Dates for the registration of voters in Winnipeg and Brandon are expected to be announced at the end of this week or early next week when the actual campaign may be considered to be on, as both sides are making preparations to have as complete lists as possible.

PREMIER SIFTON UNANIMOUS CHOICE

At Enthusiastic and Largely Attended Convention of Vermilion Constituency, Hon. Mr. Sifton Was Heartily Endorsed as the Liberal Candidate

Although no public notices were posted for the Liberal Convention Wednesday night the town hall was packed to the doors at the evening meeting, by delegates from all points of the constituency and a host of others all anxious to hear the Premier.

Mr Gully, president of the Liberal Association occupied the chair and called upon the committee on credentials to select same and report thereon

During their absence the annual meeting of the association was held and the following officers elected

Pres.—Arch. Campbell Ex. M. P. P

V Pres.—Dr. Ryan

Secry.—A. W Bowborough

The credential committee having reported, Premier Sifton was unanimously chosen as the Liberal candidate for the constituency.

On entering the meeting the Premier was received with round after round of cheers and applause and on being tendered the unanimous nomination of the convention briefly accepted in apt and suitable terms.

Arch. Campbell, the retiring member was first called upon and he spoke briefly and to the point. His resignation as their representative had come voluntary and he was more than delighted when the Premier had consented to represent the [illegible] constituency [illegible] During [illegible] period as their representative he had done the best he could under the circumstances. Roads were needed, the demands exceeding the appropriations and some had to go without. He felt sure that in Premier Sifton they would have a representative who would do his utmost for the constituency.

Premier Sifton on being called upon was heartily received and during his short and clear cut address made a strong and favorable impression upon the audience. The premier possesses a pleasing and striking personality and conveyed the impression that whatever the policy adopted by his government there would be no vacillating or weakness in its carrying out. Another feature worthy of remark was the entire absence of all party abuse from the Premier's speech, the Province, not party was the keynote of his address. Balance of report next week.

NA-DRU-CO

Toilet and Medicinal Preparations Are Compounded by Expert Chemists

Who Compounds Your Medicines?

When your physician gives you a prescription you would scarcely risk having it compounded by a grocer or a baker even if you were sure that all the right drugs in the right amounts were on hand. Why not? You did not protect yourself in this way the last time you had a prescription filled. You simply demand that physicians' prescriptions be dispensed by physicians or qualified druggists only.

It is of equally importance to know that the household preparations sold as laxatives, cough syrups and the like are compounded by experts and contain the best possible ingredients.

When you use NA-DRU-CO medicinal or toilet preparations you have the positive guarantee of one of the largest wholesale druggists in the Dominion and Chemical Laboratories, Limited, Lachine, Que., that they have been compounded by expert chemists.

Then purchase NA-DRU-CO Cosmos Laxatives, NA-DRU-CO Liquorice, Linseed, and Chloradyne Cough Syrup, NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound and everything else on the NA-DRU-CO List are pre-eminently better than mixtures at present flooding the market. They are compounded by men who know.

NA-DRU-CO Formulas, Ingredients and Compounding Are Best

Your own druggist could not be more careful or more scientific in compounding one of your physician's prescriptions than are our chemists in compounding every NA-DRU-CO preparation. Add to this the fact that only the best and purest materials that money can buy are used in NA-DRU-CO Preparations and you have the reason why NA-DRU-CO formulas have become standard in so short a time, and you have the solid grounds for the implicit confidence we want you to feel in NA-DRU-CO preparations.

We are prepared to furnish to any physician or druggist in Canada, on request, a full list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO article. Ask those who are now at standing in your community, and feel special to use them, and about NA-DRU-CO preparations.

If any NA-DRU-CO article you buy does not prove entirely satisfactory return it to your druggist. He knows he is authority to refund the full purchase price and charge it to us.

You can get any NA-DRU-CO preparations anywhere in Canada, for if your druggist should not have it in stock he can get it within two days from our nearest wholesale house's

E. H. RILEY RESIGNS SEAT IN GLEICHEN

His Resignation a Protest Against Lieutenant Governor's Action In Calling on Sifton to Form [illegible]

Calgary, June 3.— E. H. Riley, M. L. A. for Gleichen, has resigned, giving as his reason that he is dissatisfied with Lieutenant Governor Bulyea's action in calling on Sifton to form a government and also with the elimination of W. H. Cushing from the Cabinet.

It is understood that he will run again.

Riley's name was one of those contained in the premature announcement of the Cushing cabinet.

Mr. Cushing wires from Red Deer that he approves of Riley's action.

Riley was elected in the bye-election of 1907 when Mr. Justice Stuart resigned, and was again elected at the general elections of 1909. He was one of the foremost insurgents at the last session of the Legislature.

The following is the open letter he has addressed to his constituents:

"To the electors of the electoral division of Gleichen:

"Gentlemen —I respectfully and reluctantly beg to hand you herewith my resignation as your member in the Legislature Assembly of the Province of Alberta. In taking this step I deem it my duty to place my reasons for doing so before you and then I am prepared to leave the matter in your hands, conscious of the fact that the same spirit of friendship that has characterized our past association will continue.

"On the 9th day of November, 1904, at the largest and most enthusiastic political convention that has ever been held in a provincial riding in the province of Alberta, you conferred upon me an honor that any man may justly feel proud to accept that of a parliamentary nomination. That nomination was the more appreciated by virtue of the fact that it came from a body of men representing that shade of political thought that has been accepted, endorsed and fought for by some of the Empire's greatest statesmen.

"As a young Albertan who for twenty years previous had watched with pride and satisfaction the province's triumphant march to greatness, I say it was with a feeling of justifiable pride that I accepted the responsibility of assisting the moulding of her future course. For three years past I have attempted, to the best of my limited ability, to serve you, gentlemen, and the Province of Alberta as a whole according to my conception of what was in the truest and highest interest of this great province and in returning to you the trust which you placed in my hands, I do so only when I feel that I can no longer ally myself with those who are temporarily in authority.

"On February 10th last a session of the legislature was convened at Edmonton. For some time prior to the assembling of the House rumors had gained currency throughout the Province that everything was not right in government circles, and a feeling of grave mistrust was plainly evident. Immediately after the assembling of the House a number of the members, including myself, who had been elected as supporters of the Rutherford administration, approached the members of the cabinet with a view to procuring, if possible, some satisfactory explanation of the terms of the contract which had been entered into between the Government and the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway Company; and it was because no satisfactory explanation was, or has yet, been given concerning that contract that the trouble arose which has led to the downfall of the Rutherford administration. I believe that those former supporters of the government who took exception to the autocratic attitude of the government had no other alternative, if they placed manly principles and their country's welfare before party, than to act as they did.

"A contract in which the credit of the province has been pledged to the stupendous extent of seven and a half millions of dollars had been entered into on behalf of the people by their servants and when the people's representatives asked for information respecting it, that information was denied them. That, gentlemen, is not liberalism, as I understand it, nor is it liberalism as it is understood by fourteen other Liberal members of the Legislature.

"The members of the Legislature (not the government) appointed a Judicial Committee to investigate the entire Alberta and Great Waterways contract, and pending the taking of the evidence and the reception of the Commission's report the House agreed to an adjournment. From the very moment adjournment took place certain influences began to work with a view of frustrating the will and wishes of the people, and it [illegible] be a stain on the province [illegible] to the lasting disgrace of the individuals concerned when posterity is informed that two of [illegible] supposedly highest dignitaries of [illegible] province, a Chief Justice and [illegible] Lieutenant-Governor, [illegible] prime instigators in [illegible] work.

"At the expiration [illegible] adjournment the Commission had not completed its labors, but instead of permitting the members [illegible] that right and privilege [illegible] undoubtedly constitutionally [illegible] of moving a further adjournment his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor took upon himself the responsibility of prorogueing the House and calling upon his assistant in the work of political jugglery to form a ministry.

"I protest, gentlemen, against these tactics. Liberalism does not gain in honor, or strength by the elimination from its ranks of such men as the Hon. W. H. Cushing and the calling in of men who are absolutely without any political standing or following in the province [illegible] and tends to discourage honesty and straightforwardness in public life.

"Indeed!" was the emperor's only answer.

"Your majesty, I have served you and your father before you well, I hope—faithfully, I know. I think you trust me."

"No man more. But this sounds a portentous preface. Is it possible you imagine it necessary to 'lead up' to a subject if I can please myself by doing you a favor?"

"If I have seemed to lead up to what I wish to say, your majesty, it is only for the sake of explanation. You are wondering, no doubt, how I knew you would travel today and in this train, also why I have ventured to follow. Your intention I learned by accident." The chancellor did not explain by what diplomacy that "accident" had been brought about. "Wishing much to talk over with you a pressing matter that should not be delayed, I took this liberty and seized this opportunity."

"Some men [illegible] in my place pretend that business of their own had brought them [illegible] that the train had been chosen by chance. But your majesty knows me as a blunt man when I serve him not as diplomat, but as friend. I'm not one to work in the dark with those who trust me, and I want your majesty to know the truth," (which perhaps he did, but not the whole truth.)

"You raise my curiosity," said Leopold.

"Then have I your indulgence to speak frankly ... subject ... [illegible]

"I'd have ... a friend," said Leopold ... hardened ... for something ...

"I've had a letter from the crown prince of Hungaria ... sure that there is a certain ... your majesty's ... the first overtures for a [illegible] his ... whispered that your majesty's affections are otherwise engaged, and the young Adalbert has addressed me in a friendly way, begging that the rumor may be contradicted or confirmed."

"I'm not sure that negotiations had gone far enough to give him the right to be inquisitive," returned Leopold, flushing.

The chancellor spread out his ... veined hands in a gesture of appeal. "I fear," he said, "that in my anxiety for your majesty's welfare and the good of Rhaetia I may have exceeded my instructions. My one excuse is that I believed your mind to be definitely made up. I still believe it to be so. I would listen to no one who should try to persuade me of the contrary, and I will write Adalbert"—

"You must get yourself ... out of the scrape as best you can, since you admit you got me into it," broke in the emperor, with an uneasy laugh. "If Princess Virginia of Baumenberg-Drippe is as charming as she is said to be, her difficulty will be in choosing a husband, not in getting one. For once, my dear chancellor, gossip has told the truth, and I wouldn't pay the princess so poor a compliment as to ask for her hand when I've no heart left to give her in exchange for it. There's some one else"—

"It is of that some one else I would venture to speak, your majesty. Gossip has named her. May I?"

"I'll save you the trouble, for I'm not ashamed that the common fate [illegible] every man loves once before he dies, and yet uncommon because no man ever loved a woman so worthy. Chancellor, there's no woman in the world like Miss Helen Mowbray, the lady to whom I owe my life."

"It's natural you should be grateful, your majesty, but"—

"It's natural I should be in love."

"Natural that a young man inexperienced in affairs of the heart should mistake warm gratitude for love, impossible that the mistake should be allowed to continue."

Leopold's eyes grew dark. "In such a connection," he said, "it would be better not to mention the word 'mistake.' I'm glad you are here, for now you can learn from me my intentions toward that lady."

"Intentions, did you say, your majesty? I fear I grow hard of hearing."

"At least you will never grow slow of understanding. I did speak of my intentions toward Miss Mowbray."

"You would give the lady some magnificent estate, some splendid acknowledgment"—

"Whether splendid or not would be a matter of opinion," laughed the emperor. "I shall offer her a present of myself."

The old man had been sitting with his chin sunk into his short neck, peering out from under his brows in a way he had, but he lifted his head suddenly, with a look in his eyes like that of an animal who scents danger from an unexpected quarter.

"Your majesty," he exclaimed, "you are your father's son, you are Rhaetian, and your standard of honor"—

"I hope to marry Miss Mowbray," Leopold cut him short.

The chancellor's jaw dropped, and he grew pale. "I had dreamed of nothing so bad as this," he blurted out, with no thought or wish to sugar the truth. "I feared a young man's rashness. I dreaded scandal. But, forgive me, your majesty. For you a morganatic marriage would be madness"—

"A morganatic marriage I did think of at first, but on second thoughts I saw it would be ungrateful."

"Ah, yes, to the country which expects so much of you."

"No, to the woman who has the right to all or nothing. I will make her empress of Rhaetia."

With a cry the chancellor sprang up. His eyes glared like the eyes of a bull who receives the death stroke. His working lips and the hollow sound in his throat alarmed the emperor.

"No, your majesty, no!" he panted.

"But I say yes," Leopold answered, "and let no man give me nay. I've thought it all out. I will make her a countess first. Then she shall be made my empress."

"Your majesty, it is not possible."

"Take care, chancellor."

"She has been deceiving you. She has neither [illegible] birth, the position nor the name [illegible] claims to have, and I can prove it."

"You are mad, Von Breitenstein," the emperor flung at him. "That can be your only excuse for such words."

"I am not mad, but I am old and wise, your majesty. Today you have made me feel that I am very old. Punish me as you will for my frankness. My work for you and yours is nearly done. Cheerfully will I submit to my dismissal if only this last effort in your service may save the ship of state from wreck. I would not make an accusation which I could not prove. And I can prove that the two English ladies who have been staying at Schloss Lyndalberg are not the persons they pretend to be."

"Who has been lying to you?" cried Leopold, who held between clinched hands the temper he vowed not to lose with this old man.

"To me, no one. To your majesty, to society in Kronburg, two adventuresses have lied."

The emperor caught his breath. "If you were a young man I would kill you for [illegible]," he said.

"I know you would. As it is, my life is yours. But before you take it, for God's sake, for your father's sake, hear me out!"

Leopold did not speak for a moment, but stared at the vanishing landscape, which he saw through a red haze. "Very well," he said at last, "I will hear you, because I fear nothing you can say."

"When I heard of your majesty's admiration for a certain lady," the chancellor began quickly lest the emperor should change his mind, "I looked for her name and her mother's in Burke's Peerage. There I found Lady Mowbray, widow of a dead baron of that ilk, mother of a son with a child and of one daughter, a young woman with many names and twenty-eight years.

"This surprised me, as the Miss Mowbray I had seen at the birthday ball looked no more than eighteen and, I was told, confessed to twenty. The Mowbrays, I learned by a little further research in Burke, were distantly connected by marriage with the family of Baumenberg-Drippe. This seemed an odd coincidence in the circumstances. But, acting as duty bade me act, I wired to two persons—Baron von Sark, your majesty's ambassador to Great Britain, and the crown prince of Hungaria, the brother of Princess Virginia."

"What did you telegraph?" asked the emperor ...

"Nothing compromising to your majesty, you may well believe. I inquired of Adalbert if he had English relations, a Lady Mowbray and daughter, Helen, traveling in Rhaetia, and I begged that if so he would describe their appearance by telegram. To Von Sark I said that particulars by wire concerning the widow of Lord Mowbray and daughter, Helen, would put me under personal obligation. Both these messages I sent off night before last. Yesterday I received Adalbert's answer, this morning Von Sark's. They are here." And the chancellor tapped the breast of his gray coat. "Will your majesty read them?"

"If you wish," replied Leopold at his haughtiest and coldest.

The old man unbuttoned his coat and produced a coroneted pocketbook, a souvenir of friendship on his last birthday from the emperor. Leopold saw it and remembered, as the chancellor hoped he would.

"Here are the telegrams, your majesty," he said. "The first one is from the crown prince of Hungaria."

"Have no idea where Lady Mowbray and daughter are traveling; may be Rhaetia or north pole," Adalbert had written, with characteristic flippancy. "Have seen neither for eight years and scarcely know them. But Lady M. tall, brown old party, with nose like hobbyhorse. Helen dark, nose like mother's, wears glasses."

With no betrayal of feeling, Leopold laid the telegram on the red plush seat and unfolded the other.

"Pardon delay," the Rhaetian ambassador's message began. "Have been making inquiries. Lady Mowbray has been widow for ten years. Not rich. During son's minority has let her town and country houses. Lives much abroad. Very high church. Intellectual, at present in Calcutta, where daughter Helen, twenty-eight, not pretty, is lately engaged to marry middle aged judge of some distinction."

"So"—and the emperor threw aside the second bit of paper—"it is on such slight grounds as these that a man of the world can label two ladies 'adventuresses.'"

The chancellor was bitterly disappointed. He had counted on the impression which these telegrams must make, and unless Leopold were acting it was now certain that love had driven him out of his senses.

But if the emperor were mad he must be treated accordingly, and the old statesman condescended to "bluff."

"There is still more to tell," he said, "if your majesty has not heard enough, but I think when you have reflected you will not wish for more. It is clear that the women calling themselves Mowbrays have had the audacity to present themselves here under false colors. They have either deceived Lady Lambert, who introduced them to Rhaetian society, or, still more likely, they have cleverly forged their letters of introduction."

"Why didn't you telegraph to Lady Lambert while your hand was in?" sneered Leopold.

"I did, your majesty, or, rather, not knowing her present address, I wired a friend of mine, an acquaintance of hers, begging him to make inquiries without using my name, but I have not yet received an answer to that telegram."

"Until you do I should think that even a cynic like yourself might give two defenseless, inoffensive ladies the benefit of the doubt."

"Inoffensive," echoed Von Breitenstein—"inoffensive when they came to this country to ensnare your majesty through the girl's beauty! But, great heaven, it is true that I am growing old! I have forgotten to ask your majesty whether you have gone so far as to mention the word marriage to Miss Mowbray?"

"I'll answer that question by another. Do you really believe that Miss Mowbray came to Rhaetia to 'entrap' me?"

"I do, though I scarcely think that even her ambition flew as high as you are encouraging it to soar."

"In case you're right she would have been overjoyed with an offer of morganatic marriage."

"Overjoyed is a poor word. Overwhelmed might be nearer."

"Yet I tell you she refused me last night and is leaving Rhaetia today rather than listen to further entreaties."

Milady's Mirror

... from motives of economy or convenience prefers to do her own shampooing will save herself much time and weariness if she invests in several appliances used by professionals.

One of these is a spray with a long rubber tubing and fine nozzle. This can be bought to fasten to any spigot and is a great convenience in rinsing the hair. It is almost impossible to get the hair entirely clean by oneself. With the greatest care, some of the soap or shampoo mixture will cling unless forced out by the strong current of a spray.

Another convenience is an electrical drier. These can be found in a number of different styles—some that can be attached to any electric fixture in the house, others that are not dependent upon an electrically lighted room, but have their own storage batteries.

Where the hair is heavy enough time is saved in drying to more than make the drier an advisable purchase. Where one is sensitive to draft and usually catches cold after a shampoo the drier is invaluable, as the current of air can be regulated to any desired temperature. The shorter time that damp hair hangs around shoulders is also a preventive of colds.

A drier that sends the current out into the room is better for the hair than those on which the hair rests to dry.

The Falling Hair of Convalescents.

When hair falls after a fever or other weakening disease it is for the reason that the parts near the roots have undergone decay. It is always a mistake to arrest any such fall. One should rather try to quicken it and so give the roots a chance of sending out new, healthy hair. [illegible] brushing and scalp massaging will soon get rid of the diseased hair. When the patient's strength allows the head must be washed and rinsed. Now comes the time for nourishing and stimulating the growth. If money is not very scarce it is intense folly to sacrifice utility to economy. In these cases one should always make an effort to purchase the best things obtainable—preparations ordered to meet the special needs of the patient. However, some excellent results have followed this simple treatment: Make a mixture of tincture of capsicum, ten parts; liquefied phenol, four parts; glycerin, ten parts, and water to complete the hundred parts. Shake and repeat the shaking before pouring out. Apply a dessertspoonful daily, thoroughly combing the hair both before and after the application. After treating the hair thus during seven days use the lotion only four times weekly and on the other days apply a small quantity of oil of rosemary mixed with three times its bulk of olive oil. As the weeks go by lessen the frequency of the capsicum mixture and weaken the rosemary mixture by adding more olive oil.

To Make Arms Pretty.

Girls whose arms are not round and smooth should begin at once to use a bath [illegible] constant daily application of such a toilet article scatters many a group of pimples and other skin disfigurements, while it stimulates circulation and clears the skin.

After scrubbing the arms with a bath brush and any pure soap for a week the roughness should disappear. The unevenness of the flesh is simply old skin that a cloth is too smooth to remove. But when there is irritation, such as sometimes appears on the face, more treatment will be needed.

Before using the formula about to be given the skin should be brushed with green soap, washing it off and drying carefully afterward. Then apply the ointment made from one dram of sublimed sulphur, five drops of oil of eucalyptus and one ounce each of [illegible] of rosewater. These should be smoothly blended. This mixture should be put on daily or at night. Twice a week only should scrubbing with green soap be given. The bath brush is to be used daily, however, with simple soap.

Finger Nails.

The nails should be cared for every day. If you follow this practice it will take but a few minutes at any one time. Soak your nails in warm water in which there is a little tincture of benzoin or aromatic vinegar. Lather them well with soap and then file the ends to the same shape as the little half moon at the base. Trim off all rough edges. Press the skin away from the half moon so that it will show distinctly. This ought to be done with the towel every time you wash your hands. Do not use a nail file for this purpose, but an orange wood stick. After the nails are shaped by this treatment at both ends polish them with a chamois polisher, being careful not to heat them by too brisk rubbing. Before polishing you may rub a little vaseline or olive oil on them, with a little nail powder dusted over. This will give a high polish which will last longer than the simple friction with the chamois. Be careful to wash the powder all off. The finishing touch is given by rubbing with a [illegible]

CARE OF PARROTS.

The Proper Way to Feed, Cage and Teach the Birds.

As few people who own parrots really know how to care for them, a few good rules may be of interest.

As to their food, it should be canary seed, hemp (but not too much), millet, boiled maize, linseed, rape and the like. Bread soaked in hot water is good, given twice a day, and fruit in moderation and in variety is wholesome, such as grapes, apples and pears, an occasional raisin and lettuce.

Gray parrots are very fond of rice, and almost all parrots appreciate rice pudding and have a taste, too, for bread and butter. Meat is bad for them. Clean, fresh wood should be given them to gnaw—bits of elm, birch, larch and chestnut. Fresh dry gravel must be sprinkled at the bottom of the cage every day and fresh water be put in the glass.

It is important that parrots should have the opportunity to stand flat footed, so if the cage has wires at the bottom it is well to remove them. Always to have his claws clasping a round perch is injurious to any bird, and two perches of different size are advisable, so that he may change his posture at will.

When a parrot continues to scream he wants water or food or feels ill and uncomfortable or maybe is merely dull. Music, which he loves, will cheer him up at all [illegible]

A parrot learns to talk only from one who speaks very slowly and distinctly to him and preferably when he is about to fall asleep. Last, but not least, a parrot should be carefully covered at night.—London Mail.

THE PYGMIES.

Curious Mode of Life of the Dwarfs of Rhodesia.

Of the pygmies of northwestern Rhodesia a modern traveler writes: "The natives stand about four feet high and are long armed, short legged and ugly, being unusually prognathous. The legs are disproportionately short, the feet large, and the body is covered with a sort of down. Both sexes affect a state of complete nudity. They have their own tongue, [illegible] usually know a little of the language of their big neighbors. No attempt is made to till the open forest glades. They depend for food on game and what they steal from the fields and plantations of the surrounding tribes.

"Though there are seven different tribes of pygmies, they appear to have no tribal organization. It is the custom for a group of families to attach themselves to a negro chief and in return for food to assist him to [illegible] enemies. The standard of morality of these little people is high and, strange to say, they are remarkably intelligent.

"The wild beasts living in this forest are killed for food, even the elephant. Pitfalls, snares and heavily weighted spears are used, but their favorite way of hunting an elephant appears to be with bow and arrow. Poisoned arrows are shot into him, and the great beast is followed until he falls, when the little hunters camp around the body and feast on the carcass until it is finished."

Catch as catch-can.

She gave him a playful pinch on the cheek.

"New suit!" she exclaimed. [illegible] what a beauty!"

"Rather nice, isn't it?" he agreed, surveying himself proudly in the glass. It was a spring suiting of the very latest style. Even the editor of the Tailor and Cutter could have found no fault.

"And doesn't it fit well?" she cried. "Turn round. To a T! Lovely! It must have been expensive!"

He put his fingers on his lips.

His other hand wandered affectionately down a very pronounced crease, and his eyes filled with a look of pride.

"Hush!" he whispered. "Not so very! Five bob down and five bob every time the collector can me first!"—London Answers.

Hoar and Evarts.

On one of his later birthday anniversaries Senator Hoar wrote to William M. Evarts and congratulated him upon his length of years. In his reply the aged lawyer said it brought to mind an old lady in New England who had occasion to write to a friend about some matter of trifling importance and when she had reached the end of the thirteenth page awakened to the fact that she had been rather diffuse and added, "Please excuse my longevity."

Mrs. Lionel Marks Victor In Shakespeare Theater Contest.

MRS. MARKS, WINNER OF $1,500 PRIZE.

Josephine Preston Peabody, who is Mrs. Lionel Marks of Cambridge, Mass., is the winner of the prize of $1,500 offered by one of the governors of the Shakespeare Memorial theater at Stratford-on-Avon for the best play submitted for production at the theater.

Six hundred and fifteen plays were sent to the reading committee, which selected two, which were submitted to the Duke of Argyll, whose decision is in favor of Mrs. Marks' play, entitled "The Piper." It deals with the old story of the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

The play is to be produced on May 5, when, according to [illegible] of the competition, the prize is to be presented to the successful authoress on the stage of the Memorial theater.

"The Piper" deals mainly with the wanderings of that quaint character and his little charges after the poet Browning had consigned them into the [illegible]. The Pied Piper is made a gay, glad stranger with mountebank companions. He comes to Hamelin and offers to clear that rat infested town for a thousand guilders, employing his musical pipe to do so. The town snaps up his offer. With apparent ease he accomplishes the feat which has baffled the local officials. The contract payment, however, is not forthcoming, and the frugal townspeople offer him instead 15 guilders.

When he protests they threaten to slit his ears and taunt him with an unknown parentage. Maddened, he pipes the kinderspell. The little ones scamper to him right and left, some of them in their "nighties." In the midst of them all the Piper marches out of the town triumphant. The party then goes to a cave. The second act shows the cave. Michael, one of the mountebank's followers, a sword swallower, has fallen desperately in love with Barbara, the burgomaster's daughter, who was not enticed into the Piper's train.

The Piper and his assistants do their utmost to amuse their little followers, and the Pied Piper himself makes Jan, the crippled son of Kurt, a pair of winged shoes, which the little fellow wants the Lonely Man to see. The Lonely Man is a statue of Christ outside the Hamelin church. Michael, the sword swallower, hears his sweetheart Barbara is to be consigned to a nunnery by the townspeople at the behest of public opinion. Citizens swear that the burgomaster cannot have his little girl while the rest go childless.

The Piper meets the chanting procession on the way to the nunnery and commences furious playing. The hymn wavers and the marchers commence to dance. They whirl off like leaves in a tempest. Barbara is taken away from them, herself bewitched, and given to Michael, who loves her fondly.

The bewitched Barbara, however, lavishes her affections on the Piper himself, who immediately casts away the spell from her, and she becomes Michael's mate. What all the burghers of Hamelin could not accomplish Veronika, mother of the crippled Jan, does. She alone beards the Piper in his den, and he is touched by her spiritual passion. He fights his battle out before the Lonely Man, is humbled and gives Hamelin back her children and goes his way, a wanderer over the [illegible].

Wedding Invitations.

They need not be answered unless the recipient is an intimate friend.

Then a congratulatory note may be sent.

An announcement demands no reply.

The matter of wedding gifts is, of course, an unsettled question.

There are a number of well bred persons who do not respond to an invitation with a gift, believing that it is poor taste to send gifts to those whom they scarcely know, but to whose wedding they may have been invited for some reason of courtesy.

Of course the fact that one knows the groom rather than the bride makes no difference one way or the other. It is to the bride that the gift is sent.

Mr. G. D. Colwell, of Walkerville, Ont., was stricken down with La Grippe in 1906 and it left him in a very bad condition. He says: I was all run down and bordering on Consumption. It did marvels for me and brought me back to health in no time, making a new man of me. It fortifies the body against the attacks of La Grippe and is a sure preventative. "PROVIDENCE, INCORPORATED"

Appropriate Nickname Bestowed Upon the C.P.R.—A New Chapter in Immigration.

(World's Work for April.)

"Providence Incorporated" is the new nickname of Canada's greatest railroad. A Danish immigrant agent of the road invented the phrase and it ought to stick. The occasion was the inauguration of a new method of bringing farmers into the Northwest, and the method itself is so radical that it deserves some free advertising.

many thousands of farmers. It wants The road owns much land. It needs the best men. It is not satisfied with the man who lands at Ellis Island with $25 in his pocket. It goes after the very best class of farmers in Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and the mid-Continental areas. Its agents, who swarm everywhere, found much trouble in persuading satisfied and prosperous farmers on well-tilled farms to leave those farms and take to the back places with the hardships of the pioneer's life before them. That problem was put before the Canadian Pacific officials. They set to work to solve it.

So, today, pioneering is going out of fashion. Instead of selling raw land to raw settlers, the railroad itself has gone into the pioneering business. It sells the land, builds the house and the barn, breaks the fields, plants the first crop, puts all the necessary tools under cover on the farm—and hands over the farm ready-made. The new settler comes from a finished farm to a finished farm.

Two years ago this was an experiment; now it is a policy. As a result, the cream of the industrial farmers of central Europe and of our own Middle West is drifting into Canada by train-loads.

Again, while our own Government went slowly at the task of reclaiming arid lands in the West, the railroad went into the irrigation business itself. It could not afford to wait for government methods or for the wasteful selections of private capital. Five years ago the financial papers announced that the railroad was going to reclaim some millions of acres of land in the Bow River country, Alberta. Now, a million acres are watered, sold to farmers—settled. The railroad's ditch-diggers are moving on to the second million.

No ordinary farmer is wanted on these new acres. The railroad's agents are instructed to call for and demand the best irrigation farmers on earth to till these fields. Some of his boys were taking but little interest in the lesson, and the teacher grew desperate.

"William Smith," he suddenly demanded, "are you listening?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then perhaps you can tell me where Nelson was killed?"

"Trafalgar Square," was the reply.

"Indeed!" sarcastically ejaculated the teacher, when he had recovered his breath. "Then I suppose Wellington was killed at Waterloo Station?"

"No, sir," responded William, "that was Napoleon!"

A Pleasant Purgative.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so compounded as to operate on both the stomach and the bowels, so that they act along the whole alimentary and excretory passage. They are not drastic in their work, but mildly purgative, and the pleasure of taking them is only equalled by the gratifying effect they produce. Compounded only by vegetable substances the curative qualities of which were fully tested, they afford relief without chance of injury.

Leopold bent forward to launch this thunderbolt, his brown hands on his knees ...

"She has won," said Leopold ...

"You speak of impossibilities."

"But if they were not impossibilities?"

"In such a case I should do no other thing than spend the rest of my life in trying to forget a sweet blot."

"I thank your majesty. That is all I ask. I suppose you will continue your journey?"

"Yes, as far as Felgarde, where I hope to find Lady Mowbray and her daughter."

"Then, your majesty, when I've expressed my gratitude for your forbearance, even though I've failed to be convincing, I ... trouble you no longer."

The chancellor rose painfully, with a reminiscence of gout, and Leopold stared at him in surprise. "What do you mean?" he asked.

"Only that, as I can do no further good here with your permission I will get out at the station we are coming to and go back home again."

The emperor realized what he had ...

Lyndalberg, or had they chosen to vanish mysteriously through some back door out of Rhaetia, leaving no trace which even a lover could find?

Leopold could not help recalling the chancellor's revelations ... told himself that it was not in any act of which Helen Mowbray need be ashamed.

There was a telephone in the railway station at Felgarde, and Leopold himself called up the chancellor at Kronburg.

"My friends are not here. I'm starting for Kronburg as soon as possible, either by the next train or by special," he announced ...

"I have a—curious—piece of—news for you," came over the wire in the chancellor's voice. "It's—about the— ..."

"What is it?" asked Leopold.

"I hinted that I had more information which I could not give you then. But I am in a different position now. You did not find your friends in the Orient express."

"No," said the emperor.

"They gave out that they were leaving Rhaetia, but they haven't crossed the frontier."

"Thanks. That's exactly what I wanted to know."

"You remember a certain person whose name can't be mentioned over the telephone buying a hunting lodge ..."

Could Hardly Walk For Pains in Back

Kidneys Were in Bad Shape But Cure Was Effected and All Credit Given to DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS.

So many suffer from lame, sore, aching back and do not realize the seriousness of their condition because they do not know that this is an unmistakable symptom of diseased kidneys.

When it is so easy to get relief and cure by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills you would wonder why anyone should take such a terrible risk.

You can be sure of relief by using this medicine because of its direct and combined action on both liver and kidneys. Ordinary kidney medicines often fail because they do not awaken the action of the liver and bowels and do not give the kidneys any chance to get well.

Mr. Fred Gummer, Lillies, Leeds Co., Ont., writes: "I can honestly say that Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills are a wonderful medicine. For six weeks last fall I could hardly walk for pains in the back resulting from a bad case of kidney disease. I tried several remedies but got no better.

"Seeing Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills advertised I decided to try them. By the time I had used three boxes, I felt better and kept on until I used five boxes when I felt as well as I ever did. So satisfactory was this medicine that it is a pleasure to tell others about it."

Almost anybody can tell you about cures brought about by Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. Their action is so direct and certain that you will not be using them long without feeling the benefit.

Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills cure kidney disease, biliousness, indigestion and constipation. One pill a dose, 25 cts. a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

CUMMINGS

C. Johnson has had the misfortune to lose his team of mares while away from home they got into the granary and when he returned he found them dead.

J. A. Merrick, is forging in the S. E. 5-48-7 which he purchased from the Isaac Trout Co. a short time ago.

Wm. Bradshaw is progressing breaking up 50 acres for Wm. Cummings on his homestead near here, with his engine as a gang.

There are upwards of 2,000 acres under crop in township 47-6 this year. Without doubt there would have been more under crop, if means of transportation had been better. However compared to even under crop five years ago, it looks good and there were then only 6 acres in the whole district to 1908 there were about 700 acres in the township, in 1909 it had risen to nearly 1400, and in 1910 to upwards of 2000 acres. Manners are around again that the line from Lashburn to Edmonton will be started in the near future and if such proves correct the acreage brought under crop each year will be large.

The Premier said he deeply appreciated the honor done him by Mr. Campbell and by the delegates to the convention. When the former member had offered to retire he had at first felt that it was not right for a new party to accept the resignation of a veteran and real worker, and one to whom large interests in the Province were due. But when the Liberals of Vermilion had represented a Conservative constituency. He was glad that they represent an agricultural constituency on the Legislature of the Province. He regarded it one of the highest honors possible to be placed in such a position at the head of the affairs of the Province. The new government would have many difficulties to face, particularly the first few years of its life, but difficulties were what they were there to face.

The delegates, he was sure, realized what was the duty under interests of the Province, which it was the business of the government to safeguard. They were present not because they wanted something for themselves or their locality, but because they were interested in the progress of the general welfare of the Province and each part of it proportionately. He was confident they would perform such duties as were necessary to the best interests of the Province.

The Premier's speech was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic applause, and at its conclusion long and vigorous cheering demonstrated that it met with the hearty assent and approval of the hearers.

Mr. J. R. H. Sifton, M. P. P. for Vegreville, and a former representative of the riding, was in the audience and the chairman called on him for a few words. He said he had expected to hear something more of the policy the new government would pursue. He had taken a stand in the House during the last session on certain principles and he expected the new government to respect them. The premier and his colleagues would have his hearty support in doing so. He regretted that the Premier on the issue that had been done was to bring machine at Vermilion and assured him that he had in the riding a band of fighters as could be found in any constituency in the province. As regarding a constituency along the C. N. R. he showed for the people of the whole district above to the dominion which particularly belonged to Vermilion.

Mr. W. H. Thompson, president of the Vermilion District Conservative Association, thought the constituency, as well as the Premier, should be congratulated. He would, if necessary, do what he could to assure his electors should there be opposition, which he thought unprobable.

Mr. J. Part, of Minburn, said he was greatly pleased at the appointment of the representative of the riding. He was satisfied to leave the matter of detailed policy to be carried out by the ministers in connection with the members of the House and the public.

Dr. Ryan of Vermilion said that the Premier had said as much as he either expected or desired as to the policy he would pursue. He did not think anyone with political interests could say more, and he could do so. The real question was a pressing one in that part of the country and he hoped for decided improvement in the character of those. That notice had been promised early and he had been very much pleased to hear it.

Dr Ryan then read the resolutions which the convention adopted and appointed. One thanked the late member for his services to the riding and for the splendid manner in which he had led the party in the House and spoke in great the confidence in the Premier.

Ed. Better, who is working on the King Edward placing outfit, returned home to spend Sunday. He reports good progress being made with the placing.

The Baseball game at the King Edward School which was played by the Vermilion Juniors against the country lads, resulted in a tie.

The farmers in this vicinity are fencing to quite an extent, and this, with improvements of the roads gives the place more of the appearance of an old settled country.

The power plowing outfits which are increasing in number so rapidly in the Vermilion district, will make the acreage under cultivation next year far in excess of the present year's showing, thus lessening the time when the output from the farms will stimulate improvements to the town, and thus make a good town with a good country behind it.

Mr. Simmet who has recently moved on to the Waterfield homestead, has already started to make improvements, having dug two wells etc. He brought with him five horses, besides other stock, implements and machinery. His brother-in-law, G. Hewitt, of Minneapolis, is now here, with a view to purchasing an improved quarter section, when he will return to the U. S. and bring such a car of horses and settlers efforts.

The annual picnic at the King Edward School will be held on June 24th. The afternoon will be dedicated to a ball, baseball game and other sports, followed by supper. Good grub and lots of it. At night there will be a dance and midnight lunch.

Good once the King.

Advice on Social Customs

Mrs. Chester Adams would appreciate the thanks of friends in being in her Mrs. Adams Stationery and Wedding Invitations by Letter at any time.

WEDDING INVITATIONS

Now that spring is here and the season of the wedding bells is sure upon being heard — to the minds of many the wedding invitations. There are certain points that must be heed when writing these engraved forms.

In the first place, they should be chosen and sent in such sufficient time for invitations to have been received before the ceremony.

The latest style and best known should make a test of the two or three styles of each. Added to these are the names of the hostess of the happiest occasion and the groom. This is a matter of importance and should be carefully attended to. Do not make the mistake of sending out invitations with the name of the groom left out.

Never send invitations there are certain details to be observed in the matter of the bride's name or address a satisfaction to the groom. Do not send out invitations with the name of the groom left out. Do not send out invitations with the name of the groom left out. Do not send out invitations with the name of the groom left out.

The council are to be congratulated on the policy they have pursued in this connection, and though the expenditure in bringing the park into its present finished condition has been considerable it has been money well spent. CHAPTER SIXTEEN

"I'LL tell the truth when do—to Ginot, before with yourself, rather when necessary and don't you part with the whole truth at one time.

"More wants to say!" was one of the sayings by which the character prided its own actions. Though he did not utter it aloud for the benefit of others, and he had made the most of that resolved policy today.

"I'll be composer on him, even through the telephone," he forgot Princess may be punishment but he had arranged to see her privately as he arranged his interview with Gaudalard.

It was well that he had prepared, as he knew that Count von Rentzsaus had been in Janet's office; but as that he might. It was certain that when he had a pass to see him did not part his business. Janet knew that there was more to it than met the eye.

Supposing the Count had come to propose for his possession of pinch-pearls big. "Time money's journey today is a wild goose chase. I happen to know that those pearls are now out of Janet's hand in Kronberg. When I heard from my brother Ernst they were here in the big Arthur Lyndsbury embassy and secretly I went immediately to Kronberg, and I'm sure that the Princess Ida-beau was to frighten them away by telling them that the said to be found out and they had better disappear instantly at once, and so—as they wished to be assisted over the frontier. They certainly dared refuse to me me, alleging as an excuse the sudden and quite reasonable wish to be reunited from their having Kronberg on their journey. Whilst I was awaiting the answer I learned that those passengers were hurrying from the railway station to the hotel manager knowing if the Secretary had been there. I guessed this person to your enquiry and resolved to use my influence cleverly with the customs, successfully that I was permitted to examine the luggage which the princess let that the matter should be strictly confidential. I judged that your majesty had meant to take the Orient express, and, having failed, to put you disappeared from the station. I had no doubt that you intended to follow either by the next train or by a special train because you were married have ordered by any one. I ascertained the time of the next train and thought your majesty in it. Had my assurance been rewarded with your I should have sent your servants with me, and then you would have been spared the useless journey to Kronberg. As it was I arrived immediately fateful, however, I considered myself justified in going out of the way, as that I could hurry back, and, remembering it, not put you antagonised

THE STANDARD

VERMILION, ALTA., JUNE 2, 1910

THE Vermilion constituency is now in the throes of a political campaign which is being waged with particular vigor on both sides. Today Premier Sifton and J. G. Clark were formally nominated. Mr. Clark holds a meeting here to-night to-morrow (Thursday) night Premier Sifton will also have been seen either Thursday night or Friday night. For the next week the district will be the centre of the most interesting and energetic campaign in the history of our province. A meeting will be held at every town, village and schoolhouse throughout the riding before polling day, June 29th., and the indications are that the vote will be a heavy one. Both sides have a perfect organization and an army of able speakers and it is safe to predict that almost every elector of the district will have an opportunity of having the issues on which the campaign is being conducted placed before him, and will exercise his franchise in the manner in which he considers to be the best interests of the province at large.

That the election is the centre of attraction of the entire province tends to add to the evident interest being shown in its results in all parts of the country. The Standard has kept its readers pretty well posted in regard to the political developments of the past few months and feels entitled to refrain from an more pertinent comments on the situation.

For The Electors of Vermilion

Mr. Clarks' Six Whys

Mr. Clark has issued a leaflet asking six questions, which he no doubt considers pertinent to the present contest. We trust the electors of the constituency will not vote upon such shallow pretexts as put forward by Mr. Clark in his handbills headed "A few Whys." We will answer them for Mr. Clark's benefit, as he seems to be entirely deficient of late a constitutional government should be familiar.

First—Why was Premier Rutherford deposed as leader of the government? Mr Rutherford was not deposed but resigned. Surely the intelligent electors know the difference between Mr. Rutherford's voluntary action and the unanimous act of Mr. Clark that he was forced by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor to resign.

Second Why was Mr. Cross rejected by the Sifton Government? Mr. Cross could not have been rejected as he did not offer his services for voluntary went out with Rutherford.

Third Why was Duncan Marshall taken into the cabinet? Because he had nothing to do with the contract which caused the split among the members of the house and he had been and will be a capable minister of agriculture.

Fourth—When did Mr. Clark organize the heart of the people selecting a premier? If Mr. Asquith should resign the premiership of England today, who, I would ask, would select his successor. Most certainly not the people, but the King. His Honor, as the representative of His Majesty acting in the King's place follow of the same precedure which all history tells us is the correct one.

Fifth—Mr. Sifton was not thrust upon this constituency by Mr. Campbell, but was selected at a convention held in this town at which representatives from every portion of the riding were present consisting of both Liberals and Conservatives.

Sixth—The people of the province have had an election within little over a year and the people of Vermilion are having one now and surely that is enough in that time and should satisfy Mr. Clark as far as elections are concerned. The fact that Mr. Sifton left the most honorable position in the province and accepted the premiership at a lesser salary shows he is a man who has the interests of the province at heart. His marked ability, his integrity and his experience as a legislator, his high reputation as a lawyer and a judge and his support of a majority of members of the legislature behind him, could, and no doubt did influence the Lieut.-Gov. in calling him to carry on the affairs of the country in a conservative and progressive manner. The electors of Vermilion will do themselves credit by returning the Premier and Minister of Public Works as their representative on Wednesday the 29th inst.

A VOTER

SCHOOL NOTES

I give below an account of some recent examinations, I have held for Standards 5 and 8.

Vi. 1st E. Johnston, 2nd L. Hay, 3rd E. V. Armstrong, 4th L. Howe, 5th I. M. Craig.

In the standard all the marks are low only two of the class attended the full year

V. 1st Thomas Wilson, 2nd Kenneth Jay, 3rd Lily Cauley, 4th Gladys Patton, 5th Harry Stephens, 6th Frank Pilkie. Both Henderson Creek and Lake Lenore but her marks are fairly good.

IV. Standard. Most of the year in standard 5 has been good generally, and the results fairly satisfactory.

Only persistent hard study can lead to success in higher standards in school. Those who fail are generally those who work least.

The Departmental Examinations for the above two standards for the district will be held here, in Alexandra school, on June 27th., 28th., 29th., and 30th. The presiding examiner will be Inspector H. B. Parker and myself.

In former years standard V. pupils wrote at their own schools. This year they will write only at certain centres. Standard VI will write at the same time.

The trustees have now installed modern Physical Science apparatus. Some chemical and apparatus is also to hand, so that after holidays, if students wish to take up standard VII. work we will be in a position to do it, the principal of the school being a University graduate in arts.

A FEW WHYS

WHY was Premier Rutherford deposed as leader of the Government?

WHY was Mr. Cross rejected by the Sifton Government?

WHY was Duncan Marshall taken into the Cabinet?

WHY was Mr. Sifton selected by the Lieutenant-Governor for the Premiership without the consent of the people?

WHY should Vermilion constituency have an outsider thrust upon them by the late member, Archie Campbell?

WHY should the people not have a general election to decide for themselves who is to govern this province?

VOTE For Mr. J. G. CLARK and Honest and Responsible Government

Sifton Liberal Committee Rooms

Mr. SIFTON has made a genuine sacrifice in assuming the responsibilities of the premier ship at this particular time and is entitled to something different from the abuse that he is being subjected to. No one who knows him can be in any doubt but he will prove a strong, safe leader and a most capable and far-sighted administrator.

The people of Vermilion have an opportunity of doing the province as a whole the most genuine service in returning him by such a majority as will materially strengthen his hands in the great task that he is undertaking.

Fainting Also Alarmed Her — New Strength and Energy Are Restored by DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was in a terrible condition; dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting. My nervous system was all run down.

"Doctors failed to help me, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I soon felt that it was a God-send to me because I could feel that it was restoring my system. I can now wash and do the housework without difficulty and give all credit for the cure to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

NA-DRU-CO

Formulae Have Been Well Tried Out

Though the NA-DRU-CO line of Medicinal and Toilet Preparations have been on sale for a few months only, don't think for minute that in buying NA-DRU-CO goods you are experimenting with new or untried preparations.

Their Origin

The twenty-one wholesale drug firms now united in the "National" had all of them lengthy careers, some for fifty to one hundred years, prior to the union. Each firm had acquired or developed a number of valuable formulae for medicinal and toilet preparations, all of which became the property of the "National".

Since the union our expert chemists have carefully gone over these formulae and selected the best for the NA-DRU-CO line. Every formula has been carefully studied by these experts, improved if possible, and then thoroughly tested again, in actual use, before we consider it good enough to bear the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

An Example

A good example of what we mean is NA-DRU-CO Nervozone for Brain Fag or nervous breakdown. The formula was pronounced the best we know for combination of nerve medicines, but that was enough for us; we had it tried out with a dozen different kind of Brain workers — School Teachers, Lawyers, Bookkeepers — as well as Society leaders and home workers, and everywhere the result was so good that we adopted it as one of the best of the NA-DRU-CO line.

There are therefore no experiments among NA-DRU-CO preparations. We have invested altogether too much time, work and money in the NA-DRU-CO line to take any chances of discrediting it with preparations that might not prove satisfactory. We make absolutely certain that each preparation is satisfactory before we endorse it with the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

Ask your physician or your druggist about the firm back of NA-DRU-CO preparations and about the NA-DRU-CO line. They can tell you, for we will furnish them, on request, a full list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO article.

"Money Back"

If by any chance you should not be entirely satisfied with any NA-DRU-CO article you try, return the unused portion to the druggist from whom you bought it and we will refund your money—willingly, too, because we return to him every cent he gives back to you.

If your druggist should not have the particular NA-DRU-CO article you ask for in stock he can get it for you within two days from our nearest wholesale branch.

Some NA-DRU-CO Preparations You'll Find Most Satisfactory.

EXPERIMENT IN JUSTICE.

Even Charlemagne Was Unable to Shorten Legal Processes.

"The law's delay," which Hamlet thought was one of the things which made life not worth living, has been a subject of raillery on the part of satirists and of serious concern on the part of statesmen in all ages. The poor man, who, at the present time, has gone into court, and who fears that justice will never be done him there, may assure himself, at any rate, that his troubles are nothing new.

Chronicles of the time of the Emperor Charlemagne, who was the master, and to a great extent, the lawgiver of Europe in the latter part of the eighth and the beginning of the ninth century, record an interesting attempt on this monarch's part to prevent the delays of justice.

He could not deny that the excuses made by the judges were plausible, but he was convinced that they could decide cases more promptly if they would.

He decreed, therefore, that when a judge had failed to render a decision within a reasonable time the complainant in the case should have the right to take up his residence in the judge's house, to eat at his table, and to lodge at his expense until the decision should be made.

The decree was promptly taken advantage of by various litigants, who praised the wisdom and righteousness of their sovereign as they feasted the fare and slept on the beds of their dilatory judges.

They found, however, that there was another side to the picture. They succeeded in hastening the decision of the judge, but when it was reached ...

The Perfect Silence.

There is no sensation in the world like that which comes over you when walking through a dense grove of redwoods. Their trunks rise hundreds of feet into the air and are lost in the dense roof of foliage like the columns of an Egyptian temple grown to superhuman height. On the ground there is no underbrush, but only ferns of a size and shape that suggest a prehistoric period and fallen trunks that have lain unrotting for 3,000 years. There is no sunlight and no birds sing. If a storm arises, it is an hour before a drop reaches the ground. Here all is as it was since creation and there is no time. It is the perfect silence.

A Question of Hearing.

The burly farmer strode anxiously into the postoffice.

"Have you got any letter for Mike Howe?" he asked.

The new postmaster looked him up and down.

"Mike Howe!" repeated the farmer.

The postmaster turned aside.

"I don't understand," he returned stiffly.

"Don't understand!" roared the applicant. "Can't you understand plain English? I asked if you've got any letter for Mike Howe."

"Well, I haven't!" snorted the postmaster. "Neither have I a letter for anybody else's cow. Get out!"—London Scraps.

A Bachelor's Confession

He Told How He Had Been Forced Into Matrimony.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

The Bachelors' club came to order, the president in the chair.

"Fellow bachelors," he said, "one of our number has committed matrimony. Edward Hammerton has taken to himself a wife. I will read article 7 from our constitution, applying to the case:

"When any member shall become engaged or has been married he shall pay a fine, and his membership in the club shall cease. He shall state the arts by which he was snared. If there are palliating circumstances in his case he shall not pay the whole fine, but such portion of it as the club may consider a just amount in his case.

"Mr. Hammerton will now make his statement."

"I assure you, gentlemen," said the retiring member, "that no intention ...

... cut me dead. The same day I met several others and received the cut direct from all. Here was, indeed, a boycott. You must remember, gentlemen, that, although we do not wish to surrender our independence to these creatures, to be ostracized by them is a serious matter. In time I was cut by every unmarried woman in town. Besides, the most attractive married women were honorary members of the club and joined the boycott.

"And then, gentlemen, appeared the most alluring feature of this malignant scheme. Last of all my feminine acquaintances I met the girl into whose toils it was intended that I should fall. A seductive blush overspread her features, a bewildering smile parted her vermilion lips and showed two rows of pearls beneath, then a modest dropping of the eyes ...

... were groans and cries of "Poor boy!" "Innocent bird!" "Where's his mother?" "He's going to cry!" and the like.

"Here, fel—I was going to say fellow bachelors; alas, I can call you such no longer!—I took that first step which leads to the final inevitable fall. I turned and joined her. Like the ...

IN PAIN FOR YEARS

MRS. FRANK EATON

Frankville, Ont., Sept. 27, 1909.

"I suffered for years from headaches and pain in the back, and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit juice tablets, and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. I took several boxes altogether, and now I am entirely well of all my dreadful headaches and backaches".

Knew Wife and Dog

A man's voice, husky with anxiety, called up police headquarters the other night at about 2.30 a.m. It was a distraught husband begging the police to help him find his wife, who had been missing since 6 o'clock in the evening.

"What's her description?" asked the official at 'phone. "Her height?"

To Correct Excessive Perspiration

MANY women suffer from excessive perspiration of the hands, armpits or neck, but whether the affliction be local or general, the cause is the same—poor circulation. By improving this, a normal condition of the skin will be attained.

Now a certain amount of perspiration, both insensible and sensible, must be excreted every day or a general derangement of the system will result. Any unnatural condition should be corrected before it becomes chronic.

These exercises may not seem at first germane to the subject, but if you keep clearly in mind the end in view, namely, the betterment of the condition of circulation, you will be able to realize the advantage of the home treatment.

With comfortable clothing to insure an easy movement of all muscles, follow these directions carefully and faithfully: With hands on the hips bend the trunk forward slowly, holding the head erect, and then rise to a standing position. There must be a conservative repetition to give any beneficial results, but do not overdo it.

[illegible]

With a sponge apply cold water at the base of the head, and allow the spine also to come under the cold-water influence. Any overheated condition of the blood is thus remedied and the controlling nerve centers are calmed.

The last exercise is a brisk rubbing of the back with a coarse towel.

[illegible]

These are suggested as temporary relief from the trouble, the treatment [illegible] will correct it, and if faithfully carried out will eventually cure it.

HOPKINS

A. McGinnis was at Vermilion last week.

Leonard Ashworth, of the Ashworth ranch, left Vermilion last week for England where he goes on an extended visit. He is undecided as to whether or not he will return to Sunny Alberta, however we hope to see him back with us again.

The little son of Fred Green has been on the sick list the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Smith were at the Ashworth ranch, southwest of here, Saturday.

Oh' say did you hear that steamboat whistle last Thursday and Saturday?

Mr. Austin of Elk Point was doing business in Hopkins Tuesday.

The government survey yacht which is plying the Saskatchewan river from Edmonton to Winnipeg passed here Sunday. We presume however it will be some time before the river will be navigable for large steamboats, but we are all eager for that time to come.

We always understood it was the custom in Missouri riding horses [illegible] to ride double but we did not know it was the [illegible] [illegible] ago, two of our fash[illegible] [illegible] went a few [illegible] [illegible] river to visit and on [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] buggy and only way to [illegible] was to [illegible] [illegible] horse. The horse was equal to the occasion and the [illegible] reached the ferry at eleven o'clock p.m. and man got to get on, ferryman up from his slumbers and he crossed them over; the last seen of them, they and their trusty horse were going north.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hood of Elk Point, and Ray Howard of Moose Ranch, were guests at the P. J. Kettges home Sunday.

And now the trustees of the Richland School are disagreeing as to the school-site but the centre of the district which is the site the Inspector picked out is the place for the school-house, and there is the place it should be.

Mr. Duncan had the misfortune to have one of his fine sorrel horses badly cut in the barb wire fence, Sunday.

Yes! we are all going to St. Paul to the picnic to-morrow (Thursday)

King Edward Jots

Miss Flex, teacher at the Campbell Lake school, spent Saturday with Mrs. Speer, who is teaching at the King Edward school.

Messrs Jones and Eckford have successfully launched their boat, the "Midnight Wanderer" on the lake on the west side of 12-52-7. Another boat is to be placed on the same route in the near future and new boats will be added to the fleet as fast as the traffic will warrant.

The young man rode westward
Each sunday at Line
And turkey bones picked
With unholy design
But now he goes northward
New pastures to find
With feathers and turkey bones

The inevitable mosquito has again asserted itself and the freshman consults the druggist to ascertain the most effective dope with which to conduct his unequal contest with the little but mighty insect.

The Gadfly on hot days pursues the cattle with relentless persistence striking terror to the helpless animals, which rush frantically to the nearest stable to avoid the pain which these insects inflict by boring through the skin, where they deposit their eggs. There the eggs develop into a large grub which the following spring develops into a gadfly, thus perpetuating the nuisance.

Say! Mr. Editor how are you selling those pups?

TO HAIR DRESSERS

A Splendid Hair Tonic that Makes Beautiful Hair

Every hair dresser should know about Parisian Sage, the quick-acting hair dressing, that does just what this paper tells you it will do.

Parisian Sage is a most delightful and different hair dressing, a fact that will be recognized the moment it is applied to the scalp. There is not a particle of stickiness to it; it is not greasy, it has a delicate and refined odor, and is a truly invigorating tonic that will make hair grow, if the hair root still shows the least sign of life.

Try a bottle of Parisian Sage. It will brighten up the hair in two days.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by F. C. Long, to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and scalp itch in two weeks or money back. It is particularly in demand by women of refinement, who desire soft luxurious hair, that compels admiration. Price 50 cents a large bottle by F. C. Long, or direct, all charges prepaid, from the Canadian makers, the Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

Advertising Methods Adopted by an Enterprising House

That Vermilion is fast becoming metropolitan in the methods of advertising used by our merchants to call the buying public's attention to the many splendid values which they are offering, also that the wide-a-wake firm of Craig Bros. are keeping up with and just a little ahead of the times in an advertising respect is a gain practically demonstrated by what is perhaps the most elaborate system of advertising ever attempted by any business house in this section, namely the giving away of the beautiful Upton Parlor Grand piano which is now upon exhibition at their store.

This piano retails at $450.00 each, guarantee for ten years. The principal points of superiority of the celebrated Upton piano over any other of this class of instruments lie in the three strings in unison with overstrung bass, the splendidly patented scale and true sounding board which give the Upton that rich, deep, even tone so much admired.

In a recent interview with the Messrs. Craig regarding this decided innovation in advertising, they stated "We have been enjoying the patronage and confidence of the buyers of this community for some time now and by always trying to keep our stock complete the saying that "You can get it at Craig Brothers" has become a household expression. In giving away this piano we are actuated by a double purpose, to show our appreciation of the patronage of our friends during the past, and to encourage new trade and to bring the many splendid values we are now showing in all lines to the attention of every buyer in this territory. The plan we are using in giving away this piano is equitable and fair to all, simply this, every person buying one dollar's worth of any thing in our store will receive a coupon good for a 100 votes. The person returning to us on December 31 the largest number of votes will be given the piano absolutely free of all cost. No favors will be shown." Our reputation for 'square dealing' assure our customers of that fact.

This $450.00 dollar Upton Parlor Grand piano is surely a present worth having and we predict a very "merry race" for coupon votes during the next few months.

Craig Brothers are surely to be congratulated upon their broad minded methods and "Trade getter" advertising system.

NOT A KNOCKER, BUT A BOOSTER

Put the hammer in the locker,
Hide the sounding board likewise.
Any one can be a knocker.
Any one can criticise
Cultivate a manner winning
Tho' it hurts your face to smile.
And seems awkward in beginning
Be a booster for a while.

Let the blacksmith do the pounding.
That' the one that draws his pay
You don't get a cent for pounding.
Saint and sinner night and day.
Just for solid satisfaction.
Drop a kind word in the slot.
And I'll warrant you'll get action.
For your effort on the spot.

Kindness every time beats knocking.
Mirth is better than a frown
Do not waste your time in picking
Flaws with brothers who are down.
And it isn't so distressing
If you give a little boost
To the man the fates are pressing
When the chicks come home to roost.

Yes, the old world would be brighter
If you'd kindle friendship's flame.
And thus make the trouble lighter.
Of the man against the game
Send your grouch on a vacation
Give your grumbling tones the shake
And with grim determination
Throw your hammer in the lake.

Entries Have Closed For Fair

Comparison of Entries With Last Year's List

The entries for the Provincial Exhibition to be held at Calgary, June 30th, have closed, and are going to keep the management extremely busy in providing the necessary accommodation. Following is a comparison of some of the most important entries with those of last year:—

	1910	1909	P.C increase
Cattle	431	2[illegible]	60. 36
Horses	7.5	616	25. 00
Sheep and Swine	294	177	66 71
Agric. Products	169	45	275. 5

These figures do not include any championship entries.

It will be noticed that the increase is very large in each department. In the acre yield competition there are 44 entries. This will undoubtedly be one of the most interesting agricultural features ever seen at an exhibition.

The exhibition offices and the exhibition grounds are now hives of industry, and everything will be ready for the official opening on Dominion Day, July 1st.

A large list of rooms has been secured from residents all over the city to assist the hotels in providing accommodation for exhibition visitors. Everything points to the exhibition being a grand success.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Vermilion People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Mrs. M. E. Parr, of 266 John street, Stratton, Ont., says:

"I have found more actual results after using Booth's Kidney Pills than I did from any other remedy ever used. I had suffered for several years with kidney and bladder trouble and after a short course of treatment with this medicine I have been cured. Miserable pains across my back which would extend up my spine and into the back of my head, frequent headaches and dizziness and kidney secretions that were scanty and contained a heavy sediment had me all run down. These troubles have all left me and I am pleased to give Booth's Kidney Pills my best wishes for success and my hearty endorsement." For sale in Vermilion by F. C. Long.

31 Days Without Food

Capt. Walpole Roland, who was lost on Manitou Lake, Ont., on May 18, was found on June 18, after being thirty-one days without food, living chiefly on water. The captain, who is 84 years of age, was discovered by a chance party of surveyor's who came across notices he had placed on trees in the vicinity.

Speaking of his experience he said: "On May 18th I deliberately left the trail to take observations but evidently went to far. I was always aware of my approximate location but dreaded to play a waiting game. I kept making observations daily and also entries in my diary.

"On June 18 I noted that it was the 95th anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo and my one particular wish was that my exceptional sustaining powers might keep up till I could get the details of the [illegible] battle on July 4th, Jeffries vs Johnson, in which I hoped to see [illegible] victory for the former. [illegible] would that I can take [illegible] to a spot in the Manitou region where he can pull off his fight without the slightest fear of interference.

"Water was my principal refreshment. I injured my knee a couple of days before I was found, which caused my inability to walk. I could see Dr. Parson's and party through the branches reading the notices I had put up. The flies were unusually active. June 18 and there was a thunder storm that day. I thank all for the interest displayed during my isolation and I expect my being lost is known on two hemispheres. I will answer all personal inquiries. Walpole Roland.

...THE... Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

The prince was amused. "No, she wouldn't stick at a mother if she wanted one," he chuckled. "And, while she was about it, she has apparently annexed a whole family tree. The black mole and the scar dimple—you're sure of them, chancellor? Because, if you are—"

"Oh, I am practically certain."

"Then the more I seem in the puzzle which I fit together the more clearly does it seem that our Leopold's Miss Helen Mowbray and the Miss Jenny Brett are one and the same."

[illegible]

"You are right. It may well be that she's been having a game with us—a game that we can prevent now, thank heaven, from ending in earnest."

"Oh, yes, we can prevent that."

"Your royal highness met the lady in your own country?"

"No. It was in Paris at first, but ...

... gift of a woman. Out of this came a card, with a crown over the name in the fashion of his country and some others. An equerry waiting in an adjoining room was summoned, the card given to him, passed on to a hotel servant, and then for five minutes, ten minutes, the old man and the young one waited, talking of a subject very near to both their hearts.

At last, when they had no more to say, word came that Lady Mowbray and Miss Mowbray would see his royal highness.

"The value of a well regulated mother!" laughed the young man, who had not troubled to inquire for Lady Mowbray. "Well, whatever comes of this interview, chancellor, I shall presently have something to tell you."

"The suspense will be hard to bear," said Count von Breitstein, "but I have perfect faith in you. We understand each other completely now, but I'm growing old, and the past few days have tired me sorely. Remember, I pray you, all that's at stake and do not hesitate for an instant. Have no false scruple with such a person as this. The emperor will soon arrive in Kronburg. He'll lose no time in trying to find the girl, and once they've had another meeting all our plans, all our precautions, may be in vain. He searches for her to offer his crown."

... two."

"I also will send a telephone message," said the chancellor.

"To Leopold?"

"Yes, your royal highness. This time there will be no uncertainty in my words to him. They will strike home and even if he should not be intending to come to Kronburg tonight they will bring him."

"You are sure you know where to catch the emperor?"

"He'll telephone me from Feldau when he has found those he sought are not there, as he will, and I must be at my house to receive and answer his message. It will soon be time now."

"Very well; all that seems to arrange itself satisfactorily," said the prince. "The motor drive can be stretched out for an hour and a half. The lady will then [illegible] to dress. Dinner can be kept back till half past 8, if it would suit your book to break in upon us at the table. My dining room isn't very grand, but it has plenty of light and color and wouldn't make a bad background for the last act of this little drama. What do you say, chancellor? I've always thought that your success as a stage manager of the theater of nations was partly due to your eye for dramatic effects."

"Such effects are not to be despised, considering the audience we cater for in that theater."

"Well, I promise you that for our little amateur play tonight in my private theater the footlights shall be lit, the stage set and two of the principal puppets dressed and painted for the show before 9. I suppose you can introduce the leading man by that time or a little later?"

The bristling brows drew together involuntarily. Count von Breitstein was working without scruple against the emperor for the emperor's good, yet he winced at his accomplice's light jest, and it was by an effort that he kept a note of disapproval out of his voice.

Cookery Points

Rhubarb is at its best at this time of the year, and this product of the garden has many uses not only for the table, but for medicinal purposes, says Marion Neil Harris. The part used the most is the foot stalk of the leaves. The roots take up many acids and are astringent; hence the value of the dried roots as a medicine. Rhubarb is a powerful zest giver. When merely placed in the mouth and left unmasticated there is a rush of the saliva from the glands to deal with the quantity of acid in the mouth. This is excellent in cases where the digestive fluids need stimulation. Any food taken will be absorbed through the pouring out of digestive fluids. Though a vegetable, rhubarb is used in every respect as a fruit. Eaten stewed, so that the acids are tart in it, the stalk acts as a foe to gout and to rheumatism, for it neutralizes the uric acid that causes these things. It is also a specific for the complexion. There are many ways of preparing it for the table, and the following recipes ought to be pleasing:

SAW THE BRIGHT SIDE.

He Made the Most of an Unpleasant Situation.

A group of men were discussing human nature and the difficulty of looking always on the bright and glittering side of things when the dingy, dark brown side is uppermost and seems destined to remain uppermost.

"It's a great thing to cultivate a disposition to make the most of things in this life," remarked a man who used to drive trotting horses for a living. "The most striking illustration I ever had of that was in a big horse race at a county fair down the state about ten years ago. The man driving [illegible] side of me let his horse swerve on the back stretch, and my sulky was upset. That caused a general mixup, and a colored driver right behind me got unloaded and his sulky broken to pieces. Well, I lay there for a minute, and then, as I didn't seem to be much hurt, I started to get up.

"'Hey, boss, don' yo' go gittin' up!' yelled the colored driver at me excitedly.

"'Why?' I asked him, some puzzled.

"'Cause,' he answered, 'yo' all lay right whar yo' is, and in a minute they'll sen' roun' hyah and haul us back pas' the gran' stan' in a cabbage.'

"Sure enough, they did, and when we drove up that home stretch in the open hack they sent for us that colored man was the happiest person I ever saw. Now, that's what I call making the most of things."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Top Spinning One of the Most Ancient Sports.

SOME TOP DESIGNS.

Top spinning is one of the oldest games in the world. It has been played for thousands of years, and there are few even of the savage nations of Asia and Africa who don't play the game with some sort of top. Long before Columbus sailed for America the Indians knew a good deal about tops and top spinning. The Sioux whittled them out of bits of wood something like those shown in the picture. In Ceylon, Siam and China nearly all the tops are so fixed that they whistle or sing when they spin. The ordinary top used by the American boy is probably the most popular in the world. It is extensively used in England and in all of her colonies. The German top is larger and more ... [illegible]

Just Going to Say That

A son of Erin who had the misfortune to get mixed up in an accident was immediately conveyed to a hospital, where it was found that his only injury was a slight wound. The house surgeon carefully examined him, after which he thus stated the case to the nurse:—

"A [illegible] abrasion [illegible] not observable. I think there is little reason to apprehend [illegible] cicatrization of the wound. What do you think yourself?" he asked Pat, with a mischievous smile.

"Sure, doctor," replied Pat, "you're a wonderful thought-reader. You took the very words out of my mouth. I was just going to say that."

SORE FEET AND CHAFED PLACES.

"Zam-Buk" is best for chafed places, sore feet, or inflamed patches caused by friction. For babies' sensitive skins it is especially adapted, because it is of pure herbal composition. Don't apply to the delicate skin of your children, either for cuts, sores or skin diseases, the crude salves made up from rancid animal oils or fats, with mineral coloring and scented matter to hide their unpleasant appearance and odor! Remember that whatever gets into the pores, gets in to the blood. Stick to nature, and pure natural products. Zam-Buk is nature's own healer, and is, therefore, not only superior in purity, but also in strength. Cures where other things fail. Use it for also, for piles, festering sores, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns, and every-day injuries. Every home needs it!

"Did you ever have appendicitis?" said the insurance man. "I never felt sure whether it was a case of appendicitis or a case of professional curiosity."

Every small boy—the right kind, anyhow—thinks his own mother the symbol of all perfection. Few, however, have the ability to express their admiration as prettily as the little hero of the following anecdote.

Richard's mother was putting him to bed, and as she kissed him goodnight, she said, "Do you know you are the whole world to mamma?"

"Am I?" he answered, quickly. "Well, then, you're heaven and the north pole to me!"

TOBACCO IN CANADA.

Its Culture Dates Back to America's Discovery.

Tobacco has been grown for centuries in Canada. The discoverers of Canada received from the aborigines, amongst other presents, tobacco grown on the shores of the St. Lawrence. From Central America, where the tobacco plant probably originated, its culture had spread to Canada long before the discovery of the New World. It was only at a comparatively recent date, however, hardly more remote than half a century, that tobacco culture in Canada became really worthy of the name.

The aversion of the first manufacturers to the use of the home grown product long delayed the adoption of protective measures, but, at last, these measures were adopted and under their protection the Canadian growers were soon in a position to compel the manufacturers to accept their product. The present protective law, which is but a readjustment of the preceding one, gives to the Canadian tobacco leaf a protection of $0.[illegible] per pound. This duty seems sufficient to enable home-grown tobaccos to compete with fair advantage against similar American products, their most formidable rivals.

Some ten years ago certain manufacturers took the initiative and endeavored to develop in certain parts of Canada the culture of those varieties which seemed best adapted to the climatic conditions and the nature of the soil. This movement, sometimes ill-understood, met with a comparative failure in the province of Quebec and resulted in the creation of a new centre (Counties of Essex and Kent), where the growing of the Burley made very rapid progress. Since then tobacco culture may be considered as established in Canada.

In the production of tobacco the province of Quebec deserves first mention. In fact it was the first part of Canada really settled, and it was in ... [illegible]

A HEAVY TAX DEPOSIT

Secy-Treas of Vermilion Banks $4,725 Saturday to Town's Credit

That the decision of the town Council, to grant a rebate on all taxes paid by a certain date, was a commendable move on their part is being proven by the large per centage of taxes already paid for the current year. The heaviest single deposit in the history of the town was that made Saturday last by the Secy-Treas., C. V. Caesar, when he placed the handsome sum of $4,725 with the Bank of Commerce to the credit of the town's account.

Mr. Caesar is naturally pleased with the "rolling in of the taxes" and the rapidity with which the financial position of the town is adjusting itself. Under these conditions together with the rapid growth Vermilion is undergoing this year, it is not at all improbable that the Council may be in a position to make a substantial reduction in the tax rate for 1911.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

LEOPOLD thought it [illegible] than [illegible] the [illegible] Kronburg [illegible] [illegible] the purpose to visit [illegible] hunting lodge as he had seen [illegible] a few hours before.

"He [illegible] though [illegible] "He [illegible] for his suspicions [illegible] and sales. Nothing else can satisfy the [illegible]"

Thinking thus, Leopold looked sharply from the window as he steamed into the central station at Kronburg along the track which had been kept clear for its arrival. No other train was due at the moment, therefore few persons were on the platform, and a figure in a long gray coat, with its face shadowed by a slouch hat, was conspicuous.

The emperor had expected to see that figure, but vaguely he wished there were not so much briskness and self confidence in the set of the massive head and shoulders. The young man believed absolutely in his love, but he would have been gratified to detect a something of depression in the enemy's air which he might translate as a foreknowledge of failure.

"I hope your majesty will forgive the liberty I have taken in coming to the station without a distinct invitation to do so," were the chancellor's first words as he met the emperor. "Knowing that you would almost certainly arrive by special train, I came down from my house some time ago that I might be on hand without fail when you arrived to place my electric carriage at your service. I thought it probable that you would not have sent to the palace and therefore it might save you some slight inconvenience if I were on the spot. If you will honor my poor conveyance"—

"Don't let us delay our business for explanations or compliments, if you please, chancellor." The emperor cut him short brusquely. "I counted on your being here with your carriage. Now for the hunting lodge in the woods."

As he spoke his eyes were on the old man's face, which he hoped to see fall or change, but there was no visible sign of discomfiture, and Von Breitstein made no attempt to excuse himself from making the proposed visit. Evidently nothing had happened during the hours since the message by telephone to change the chancellor's mind.

"Yes, your majesty," came the prompt response. "Now for the hunting lodge in the woods. I am ready to go with you there, as I always have been and always shall be ready to serve you when I am needed."

It was on Leopold's tongue to say that it would be well if his chancellor's readiness could be confined to those occasions when it was needed, but he shut his lips upon the words and walked by the old man's side in frozen silence.

The carriage was waiting just outside the station, and the moment the two men were seated the chauffeur started noiselessly and swiftly.

Both windows were closed to keep out the chill of the night air, but soon Leopold impatiently lowered one, forgetting the chancellor's old fashioned hatred of drafts, and stared into the night. Already they were approaching the outskirts of the great town, and, flying past the dark warehouses and factories of the neighborhood, they sped toward the open country.

The weather still warm the evening before that evening of moonlight not to be forgotten had turned cold with morning, and tonight there was a pungent scent of dying leaves in the air. It smote Leopold in the face with the wind of [illegible] and it seemed to him the [illegible] of sadness. Never again would he inhale that fragrance of the falling year without recalling this hour.

He was half mad with impatience to reach the end of the journey and confound the chancellor once for all, yet as the swift electric carriage sped smoothly along the white road and landmark after landmark vanished behind tree branches laced with stars something within him would at last have stayed the flying moments had that been possible. He turned to ask questions of Von Breitstein, yet would have died rather than utter them.

It was a relief to the emperor when after a long silence his companion spoke, though a relief which carried with it a prick of resentment. Even the chancellor had no right to speak first without permission from his sovereign.

"Forgive me, your majesty," the old man said. "Your anger is hard to bear, yet I bear it uncomplainingly because of my confidence that the reward is not far off. I look for it no further in the future than tonight."

"I, too, believe that you won't miss your reward," returned the emperor sharply.

"I shall have it, I am sure, sir, and in your majesty's forgiveness, but in your thanks."

"I forgive you when you've asked me pardon for your suspicions and when you've found Miss Mowbray for me."

"I have already found her and am taking you to her now."

"Then you actually believe in your own story? You imagine that this sweet and [illegible] young girl is a fast actress, a schemer, a friend of your infamous gallant friend and willing to risk her reputation by paying a late visit unchaperoned to him at his hunting lodge in the woods? You are, after all, a very poor judge of character if you dream that we shall see her there."

"I shall see her, your majesty, and you will see her unless the madness you call love has blinded the eyes of your body as well as the eyes of your mind. That she is now at the lodge I know, for the prince assured me with his own lips that she had promised to motor out alone with him and dine."

"You mean he told you that his friend the actress had promised. I'd stake my life even he didn't dare to say Miss Mowbray."

"He said Miss Brett, the actress, it's true, but when he called upon her at her hotel, where he and I met to discuss a matter which is no secret to your majesty, he asked for Miss Mowbray. And the message that came down I heard. It was that Miss Mowbray would be delighted to see his royal highness. This left no doubt in my mind that after giving out that she would leave today the lady had remained in Kronburg for the express purpose of meeting her dear friend the prince, the handsomest and best dressed young man in Europe—after your majesty, of course. And it was quite natural for her to hope that, as she was supposed to be gone and you were following her, this evening's escapade would never be discovered."

"Please spare me your deductions, chancellor," said the emperor curtly, "and pray understand now, if you have not understood before, that I am with you in this expedition not to prove you right, but wrong, and nothing you can say will convince me that the prince's actress and Miss Mowbray are one. If we find a woman at the hunting lodge it will not be the lady we seek unless she has been kidnaped, and as you will presently be obliged to eat every word you've spoken the fewer such bitter pills you provide for yourself to swallow the better."

Thus snubbed by the young man whom he had held in his arms, an imperious as well as an imperial infant, the old statesman sought sanctuary in silence. But he had said that which had been in his mind to say, and he was satisfied. Meekness was not his métier, yet he could play the part of the faithful servant, humbly loyal through injustice and misunderstanding, and he played it now, because he knew it to be the one effective rôle. He sat beside the emperor with bowed head and stooping shoulders which suggested the weakness of old age, his hands clasped before him, and from time to time he sighed patiently.

As they glided under the dark arch of the Buchenwald Leopold spoke again.

"You have led me to suppose that our call at the hunting lodge will be a surprise visit to the prince. That is the case, isn't it?"

Count von Breitstein would have preferred that the question had not been asked. He had intended to convey the impression which the emperor had received, but he had not clothed it in actual statement. Luckily the prince was no cleverer as he was good looking and he [illegible] he trusted as an actor, otherwise the old man would have been still more reluctant to commit himself.

"Were our visit expected we should not be likely to find the lady," said he. "The prince and I are on such friendly terms, your majesty, that he didn't mind confessing he was to have a pretty actress as his guest. He also answered a few questions I asked concerning her freely and frankly, for to do so he had to tell me only what the world knows. How could he dream that the flirtations or the visits of a Miss Jenny Brett could be of the slightest importance to the emperor of Rhaetia? Had he guessed, however, that the entertainment he meant to offer her might be interrupted naturally he would have taken some means to protect her from annoyance."

"This night's work will give him cause to pick a private quarrel with me if he likes," said the emperor, convinced of the chancellor's good faith.

"I don't think he will choose, your majesty. You are in a mood to be glad if he did, I fear. But, no; I need not fear. You will always remember Rhaetia and put her interests before your own wishes."

"You weren't so confident of that a few hours ago."

"Even then I knew that when the real test should be applied your majesty's cool head would triumph over the hot impulse of youth. But, see, we're passing through the village of [illegible], fast asleep already, every window dark. In six or seven minutes at this speed we shall be at the lodge."

The emperor laughed shortly. "Add another seven minutes to your faith and we shall be out of the lodge again, with Chancellor von Breitstein a sadder and a wiser man than he went in."

Meekness was once more the part for the old man to play, and, raising his hands palm upward, in a gesture of generous indulgence for his young sovereign, he denied himself the pleasure of retort.

The hunting lodge in the wood, now the property of the chancellor's accommodating young friend, had until recently belonged to a Rhaetian and [illegible] prince who had been compelled by lack of sympathy among his creditors to sell something and had promptly sold the thing he cared for least. The present owner was a keen sportsman and, though he came seldom to the place, had spent a good deal of money in repairing the quaint rustic house.

Years had passed since the emperor had done more than pass the lodge gates, and now the outlines of the low rambling structure looked strange to him, a beautiful ogre [illegible] a spangled sky. He was glad of this, for he had spent some happy days here as a boy and he wished to separate the old impressions and the new.

Twisted chimneys stood up like the pricked ears of some evil crouching monster. The path to the lodge gleamed white and straight in the darkness as a parting in the rough black hair of a giant. The trees whispered gossip to each other in the wind, and it seemed to Leopold that they were evil things telling lies and slandering his love. He hated them and their rustling, which once he had loved; he hated the yellow eyes of the animal with the pricked ears, glittering eyes which were lighted windows; he hated the young prince who owned the place, and he would have hated the chancellor more than all had not the old man limped as he walked up the path, showing how heavy was the burden of his years as he had never shown it to his emperor before.

The path led to a hooded entrance, and, ascending the two stone steps, the chancellor lifted the mailed glove which did duty as a knocker. Twice he brought it down on the oak panel underneath, and the sound of metal smiting against wood went echoing through the house with an effect of emptiness and desolation.

Nobody came to answer the summons, and Leopold smiled in the dark-ness. He thought it likely that even the prince was not at home. A practical joke had been played on the chancellor.

Again the mailed fist struck the panel. An echo alone replied. Count von Breitstein began to be alarmed for the success of his plan. He thanked the night which hid from the keen eyes of the emperor—cynical now, no doubt—the telltale vein beating hard in his forehead.

"Don't you think, chancellor, that after all, you'd better [illegible] to take me to some more probable as well as more suitable place to look for Miss Mowbray?" he suggested, with a drawl intended to be as aggravating as it actually was. "There doesn't appear to be any one about. Even the caretakers are out courting perhaps."

"But listen, your majesty," said Von Breitstein when he knocked again.

Leopold did listen and heard the ring of a heel on a floor of stone or marble.

Settin'.

A farmer was sawing wood when it occurred to him that he ought to have the help of one or more of his five boys. Lifting up his voice, he called, but not a boy appeared.

At dinner, of course, they all appeared, and it was not necessary to call them.

"Where were you all about two hours ago, when I wanted you and shouted for you?"

"I was in the shop settin' the saw," said one.

"And I was in the barn settin' a hen," said the second.

"I was in gran'ma's room settin' the clock," said the third.

"I was in the garret settin' the trap," said the fourth.

"You are a remarkable set," remarked the farmer. "And where were you?" he continued, turning to the youngest.

"I was on the doorstep settin' still."—Judge.

Trapping the Comet For Gas.

With a wild look in his eyes the man with the square satchel dashed down the street.

"It's coming!" he shouted. "Be prepared! It's coming!" And the crowd was close at his heels.

"What's coming?" demanded an excited citizen. "Earthquake?"

"Cyclone?" asked another.

"Tidal wave?" chimed a third.

But the man with the wild eyes shook his head and opened his satchel.

"Nay, friends," he responded solemnly. "Halley's comet is coming. Before it arrives you want to buy this celebrated volume entitled 'Comets and Their Origin.' It tells how the tail of the comet may be captured, turned into natural gas and supplied at 2 cents a thousand feet, and"—

But the crowd was gone.—Chicago News.

Jailer of [illegible] Men.

After twenty-six years' service, Sergeant George Bush, the jailer at Bow Street Police Court, London, has retired from the Metropolitan Police. It was on March 17, 1884, that he entered the Metropolitan police force, and was at once drafted to Bow Street. As nearly as can be estimated, Sergeant Bush has had 170,000 ordinary prisoners under his charge, and at least 1,000 who have been extradited to almost every part of the world. His prisoners included Dr. Neill Cream; [illegible], who murdered William Terriss, the actor, and some of the most notorious swindlers of modern times.

HERE IT IS AGAIN.

The Chanticleer Headdress is the Latest.

A FETCHING COIFFURE

The chanticleer idea has now reached hair ornaments. The fetching arrangement illustrated is the latest expression of this French vogue. This dainty and becoming hair decoration is made of silver gauze ribbon in a very open design. The ribbon encircles the head and at the side is fastened with a miniature white cog tail, which stands up in stiff aigret fashion. It is said that Paris has exhausted the modish possibilities of the chanticleer notion, but here in America we are using the rooster in one form or another all through the world of dress. Parasols show the exultant bird at the top of their handles. And even chanticleer appliqué figures are to be purchased for use on children's clothes. But the most attractive chanticleer style seen so far is this charming hair decoration.

A Tailored Hat.

The tailor made girl will rejoice in this stunning big hat to wear with her serge walking suit, for you must know that French serge makes the smartest of the strictly tailored suits this season. The hat is of brown chip, with a brim that rolls severely at the front and sides. A rosette of tan velvet catches the shape at the indentation and is the sole trimming, save a wing in tan and brown shades that is placed over the crown in a knowing fashion.

Curious Collecting.

A nerve specialist has advised the collector's fad as a cure for sick nerves. He is not particular what is collected, so long as his patient has the habit hard enough to take her mind from herself.

A new and curious form of collecting is pot lids. The lids generally collected belong to receptacles that contained potted meat, which were interestingly decorated in the early Victorian era with landscapes, views of historical places or copies of paintings.

Lids of pomade pots are also included and the tops of ginger jars. The coloring of these antiques is good, and the prints are interesting.

This collecting is so new that so far it is not especially costly. The lids are mounted in circular frames of wood or velvet and form an effective decoration to a plate rail.

A Good Cold Cure.

A trained nurse says she finds a remedy that is almost infallible for a cold when taken soon enough is a half teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda, a half teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia and a half cupful of boiling water.

Take this when the first creepy sensations are felt, if possible just before going to bed.

Mended Thread.

One bleached linen thread on the sewing machine for mending table linen. Sew back and forth over the torn part, passing the material evenly under the presser foot. Then recross, but not so closely. If the work is done by hand, often a torn place may be darned with the strong linen threads drawn from the hemstitched line.

Opposed Early Marriages.

A woman died in Vienna recently who left $300,000 to her three nephews with the understanding that any one of them who married before the age of forty was to forfeit his share. Three nieces who also were mentioned in the will were not to marry before thirty.

Be Cheerful.

Life is so short and its trials are so many that we should strive with all our might not to make it harder for one another by being bad tempered or sulky.

AN ARCTIC CAMP.

Peary's Canvas Tents, Which Were Absolutely Snow Proof.

"A man's first night in a canvas tent in the arctic is likely to be rather wakeful," says Commander Peary in Hampton's. "The ice makes mysterious noises, the dogs bark and fight outside the tent, where they are tethered, and as three Eskimos and one white man usually occupy a small tent and the oil stove is left burning all night the air, notwithstanding the cold, is not overpure, and sometimes the Eskimos begin chanting to the spirits of their ancestors in the middle of the night. Sometimes, too, the new man's nerves are tried by hearing wolves howl in the distance.

"The tents are specially made. They are of lightweight canvas, and the floor of the tent is sewed directly into it. The fly is sewed up, a circular opening in it just large enough to admit a man, and that opening fitted with a circular flap, which is closed by a drawstring, making the tent absolutely snow proof. An ordinary tent when the snow is flying would be filled in no time.

"The tent is pyramidal, with one pole in the center, and the edges are usually held down by the sledge runners or by snowshoes used as tent pegs. The men sleep on the floor in their clothes with a musk ox skin or a couple of deerskins wrapped around them.

"The kitchen box for our sledge journeys is simply a wooden box containing two double burner oil stoves with four inch wicks. The two cooking pots are the bottoms of five gallon coal oil tins fitted with covers. When packed they are turned bottom side up over each stove, and the hinged cover of the wooden box is closed.

"On reaching camp, whether tent or snow igloo, the kitchen box is set down inside. The top of the box is turned up and keeps the heat of the stove from melting the wall of the igloo or burning the tent. The hinged front of the box is turned down and forms a table. The two cooking pots are filled with pounded ice and put on the stove. When the ice melts one pot is used for tea and the other may be used to warm beans or to boil meat if there is any.

"Each man has a quart cup for tea and a hunting knife which serves many purposes. He does not carry a fork, and one teaspoon is considered quite enough for a party of four. Each man helps himself from the pot—sticks in his knife and fishes out a piece of meat.

"The theory of field work is that there shall be two meals a day, one in the morning and one at night. As the days grow short the meals are taken before light and after dark, leaving the period of light entirely for work. Sometimes it is necessary to travel twenty-four hours without stopping for food."

The Difference.

"Mistah Walkah, kin yo' tell me de diff'unce 'tween a cold in de head an' a chicken coop wit' a hole in de rufe?"

"No, Sam, that's a hard one. What is the difference between a cold in the head and a chicken coop with a hole in the roof?"

"De one am a case o' influenza, an' de uddah am a case o' out flew hens, suh."

"Ladies and gentlemen, the vocal wonder Professor Wabble Brown will now sing the popular ballad entitled 'The Lips That Caress a Stogy Shall Never Touch Mine.'"—Chicago Tribune.

The Cobra of India.

Among the true cobras of India the naja is found all over India and Ceylon, Burma, the Andaman islands, southern China and the Malay peninsula and archipelago. It ascends the Himalayas to an altitude of 8,000 feet. It extends also over Afghanistan and through Persia to the eastern shore of the Caspian. It may attain a length of nearly seven and a half feet, but it is usually not more than a little over five and a half feet long. Najas vary much in color and markings, but have generally the spectacle mark on the back of the neck, which they always distend before making an attack.

Fish In Former Times.

Men of former ages, unless they lived near the sea or a river, had great difficulties in gratifying their taste for fish. The great houses had their fish ponds or stews, but sea fish, such as cod, bream, sturgeon, herring and sprats, were salted, and the excessive consumption of highly salted fish in the middle ages is said to have produced leprosy. Fish was also baked in pies to enable it to be carried for great distances.

Art Dealer—Do you believe what their dramatic critic says about your plays? Actor-Playwright—I never thought of that! What have you to show me today?—Smart Set.

Fineness.

"When my wife makes up her mind," said Mr. Meekton, "there is no use of arguing with her."

"But every woman changes her opinion sometimes."

"Yes. And Henrietta is particularly resolute when she makes up her mind to change her opinion."—Washington Star.

Half love is at once the most delicate and the most vigorous of our defects. Nothing wounds it, but nothing kills it.

Woman's World

Mrs. LeRoy Signs President's Name 5,000 Times a Month.

MRS. JAMES A. LEROY

Mrs. James A. LeRoy holds the unique position of having the authority to affix the signature of President Taft to patents issued by the land office at Washington. Of these there are some 5,000 a month. This is Mrs. LeRoy's sole duty, and when it is finished she may darn the stockings of her children or perform any other task that her personal desire may dictate.

There is in this post the element of great trust, but back of it there is more. There is an insight into the intimate side of the character of the chief executive and his loyalty to his friends.

When Mr. Taft first went to the Philippines there crossed over on the same boat James A. LeRoy and his young wife. Mr. Taft came to know them very well. Later on Mr. LeRoy became secretary to one of the Philippine commissioners. But before leaving the States he had been a newspaper man, and because of this it devolved upon him to hand out the news of the administration of the islands. For some years he was known as the Associated Press of the Philippines.

Later Mr. LeRoy's health failed, and he finally died of tuberculosis. Mrs. LeRoy and her three little children returned to their home in Michigan. Yet the chief executive never lost sight of them, and ever since he became president he has been quietly looking out for a cozy post in which he might install the widow of his former associate. Recently the vacancy referred to occurred in the land office which not only served the purpose, but lent a particular significance to the appointment because of the intimacy of the service to be performed. Mrs. LeRoy accepted the position and is now performing the tasks in hand.

When the Business Girl Marries.

What the business girl wife has learned from the experience of others and association with them is impossible to the home body who has never taken an interest in the business affairs of her father or brothers.

The business girl wife has learned the valuable lesson of being silent when silence is golden. She should be a success because she knows the worries that beset a man in business.

Having had to work for money herself, the business girl knows the value of it. This working for money and often trying to dress neatly on a small salary have made her content to be economical, especially if her husband's salary be small.

This girl knows by experience that the workman needs the quiet, restful home when the day's work is ended. She has learned in her business career the necessity for system in all kinds of work. She knows the unfairness of asking her busy husband to execute household commissions. Her own experience in business has taught her this lesson.

If her husband should fail to make his appearance promptly at the dinner hour she will not grumble, for she has experienced the necessity of sometimes staying at the office when business demanded it. She knows, too, that the little bickerings between herself and her women friends are not pleasant for her husband to hear. She seems to be fitted by training to make him a happy, cheerful home.

Neckwear For Stout Women.

Choosing suitable neckwear, especially in warm weather, is a difficult task for elderly women.

Stout women, for instance, often experience much discomfort with only the slightest covering or pressure about the neck, and frequently the necessarily high collar worn by the thin type brings the same annoyance.

If the stout woman, however, would look her best she must eschew those soft fluffy effects and finish the neckpiece with a pretty brooch, a single [illegible] of lace, a tiny bow of silk in a delicate color or an equally small bow of dainty lingerie, choosing whichever she considers is "her style," and of course with the thought of how it will harmonize with the waist it is to adorn.

For instance, a waist that is buttoned in the back should not be decorated with a jabot that hangs down the front, but instead a small bow or tab should be worn.

Mary Said No

An old couple took the train to Dublin not very long ago to do some shopping. They especially desired a clock. "Now," said the obliging salesman who came to answer their wants, "here is something most attractive in the way of clocks. When the hour begins a bird comes out from the top and sings 'Cuckoo' four times." "Well, well, doesn't that beat all!" exclaimed the husband admiringly. "Mary, let's take one." "Indeed then we won't!" objected Mary, decidedly. "Them clocks are all right for folks that's got lots o' time on their hands, but it'd take me half the day taking care o' that bird."

MINISTER WHO TESTED ZAM-BUK.

Read His Deliberate Opinion

Rev. P. F. Langill, "The Manse," Carp, Ont., writes: "Some considerable time ago I began using Zam-Buk with a view to testing it thoroughly. I am troubled with eczema, which is always worse in the early part of winter, and seems to leave me about spring. I tried Zam-Buk immediately my hands started to break out, and am pleased to say that it checked the disease, which is more than I can say of anything I have ever before tried. We now have Zam-Buk in the house continuously, and I carry a small sample box in my pocket. One evening I happened to look in where an old man had met with an accident a week before, and had lost a finger nail. I dressed the wound with Zam-Buk and left the sample box with them. I have seen the old gentleman since, and the injury is cured."

"On another occasion a farmer called at 'The Manse' and I noticed a rag on his finger. Enquiring about the injury I learned that he had somehow taken a piece of flesh off, and the wound had started to fester. He was afraid it would turn to blood-poisoning. I gave him about a third of a box of Zam-Buk and he applied it. A few days after I saw him, and he said 'That's great salve of yours, my finger is now doing fine.'"

This is exactly the kind of testimony we most appreciate. Test Zam-Buk! Don't go by hearsay! You will find it gives best results in all cases of eczema, ringworm, festering sores, piles, cuts, burns, face sores, eruptions, and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores, 50c box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, but refuse cheap and harmful substitutes and imitations.

Washington's Fame

The incumbent of an old church in Wales asked a party of Americans to visit his parochial school. They did, and, after a recitation he invited them to question the scholars, one of the party accepted the invitation. "Little boy," said he to the rosy-cheeked lad, "can you tell me who George Washington was?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. "'E was a 'Merican g'neral." "Quite right," remarked the visitor. "And now tell me what George Washington was famous for?" "'E was the only 'Merican that ever told the truth."

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is compounded specially to combat dysentery, cholera morbus and all inflammatory disorders that change of food or water may set up in the stomach and intestines. These complaints are more common in summer than in winter, but they are not confined to the warm months, as undue looseness of the bowels may seize a man at any time. Such a sufferer will find speedy relief in this Cordial.

I'm really not surprised at that.

No liners speeding o'er the seas,
No yellow journals and no flats,

We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

VERMILION, ALTA, JULY [illegible]

An order in council has been passed at Ottawa fixing June 1st, next as the day when the census will be taken throughout Canada. The schedules, which have been approved [illegible] are practically the same as those of other years. It is expected that the figures will be tabulated in time to make it possible for the government to introduce redistribution during the session of 1912, which will probably be the last session of the present parliament before dissolution.

The terrible suddenness with which one of Vermilion's foremost citizens has passed from amongst us has caused genuine sorrow and cast a gloom over the community. A man of robust constitution, energetic and active in his own business affairs as well as in the discharging of his duties as town engineer,—it is indeed hard to realize, that in the short period of only five days all that vigor and cheeriness would be eased in the cold pall of death. In the death of Mr. G. B. Waugh the town has lost a true and valued citizen, one, who since coming to Vermilion less than two years ago, has evinced an earnest and genuine interest in everything that effected the welfare and general advancement of the town, he has stood for all embodied in good citizenship. A short time ago the Council, feeling that the expenditures of monies in and about the town should be placed under expert advice, and that the work under the public works department should be done on a permanent basis, engaged Mr. Waugh as town engineer. His valued advice was worth much to the board and the evidences of his work as town engineer are already taking shape. Much important public work was in his hands at the time of his regretted demise. The sorrowing family have the sincere sympathy of all, and many of us who have come to know his sterling worth and the nobility of his personality feel that in the passing of the late Mr. Waugh we have suffered a personal loss which fills our [illegible].

DAY WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Vermilion's Annual Sports Day Favored With Ideal Weather Over 1200 Attended Everything Went with a Swing

Standard Cup Again Won By Miller

The directors and managing [illegible] were satisfied with [illegible] attending Vermilion's big sports day Monday and the crowd thronging the town that day certainly had the time of their lives. All the events went off without a hitch with the exception of a slight mishap in the 3 minute trot, when J. A. M. Craig's horse cast a shoe and went down. Mr. Craig was thrown from the sulky but beyond the sudden stop on striking terra firma was unhurt; the horse was unhurt but withdrawn from the race.

The weather was ideal, a few scattered clouds and a light breeze tempering the rays of Old Sol to an enjoyable degree, making it pleasant for spectators and racers alike. The crowds arrived in the town during the morning and when the first event at the track was called it is estimated that fully 1,200 people were on the grounds. Throughout the afternoon the Citizen's Band discoursed sweet refrains in front of the grand stand, under the direction of Bandmaster Jack Collins, and remarks in their praise were heard on all sides.

The free-for-all was rather a disappointment from the viewpoint of entries only two horses competing the first heat was won by Billsoleau but Lewis took the next three handily. Falkins "Cap" carried off the three minute event in great style and showed great speed and action. Pilkie's "Brown" took second. It was in this race that Craig's horse fell and had to be withdrawn. The open mile run was an easy thing for Randall's "Pat" [illegible] on a splendid race; "Bob" owned by Fraser secured second. The pony race—one of the best of the day was won in 3 straight heats by "Roy" the famous little pony ridden by Frank Pilkie, with Randall's "Joy" a good second. The novelty race which created considerable amusement was won by Miss Bessie Pilkie with Miss Craig second.

In the foot races Zufelt of Mannville won the 220 yds. and half mile events and the 5 mile Standard Road Race was won for the second year by Stewart Miller in 27.50. The time was a little slower than last year but the runners had to face the wind going west. Miller finished strong.

Two great games of ball were played in the tournament. Mannville succeeded in pulling out another victory over Vermilion in a hard and well played game the score being 8—6. Campbell Lake and 52-7 played a most exciting game in the evening the former winning out by 1 run score 9-8.

The various events and results were as follows—

Free for all 1 J. Lewis; Kinney $00.00 2, D. Billsoleau $40.00

3 minute trotter pace—1 W. Falkins "Cap" $40.00 2 W. Pilkie's "Brown" $20.00

Pony race half mile—1 F. Pilkie's "Roy" $15.00 2 A. Randall's "Joy" $10.

Half mile novelty—1 Miss Bessie Pilkie $20.00 2 Miss Craig $0.00

220 yds. foot race—1 F. Zufelt $6.00 2 D. Williams $3.00

Special Competition—1 Campbell Lake (9) $15.00 second, 52-7, (8) $10.00

The day closed with a grand ball in Alexandra hall which was largely attended. Music was furnished by the local three piece orchestra [illegible] J. J. Collins and [illegible] given there will be [illegible] town for music [illegible] occasion. The piano used was the "Upton" which Craig Brothers are giving away for a Xmas present.

This burg was favored with a heavy downpour of rain on Thursday June 30th. The rain fell in torrents for hours saturating the ground and facilitating the work of breaking.

The annual picnic at the King Edward school which was held on May 24th, passed off pleasantly, the baseball match between the Campbell Lake and the home team aroused considerable interest there were present on the grounds people from Campbell Lake, the Ottawa District, Queenie Creek, while quite a number drove out from town.

Now that the elections are over we may settle down to the ordinary routine of business. We shall finish the fences, get the potatoes drilled, and get our teams in readiness to go on the road, that government grant so long deferred appears to be within measureable distance of this corner now.

We notice with satisfaction that Peter Tumbledown has cleaned up his back yard. His wife raked the chips while Peter carried away the heavy stuff. Well done Peter!

The Eastern man from the city came, in a christie black came he, and at Vermilion he left the train at a. m. 2-4-T. At break of day, he went his way he carried a big turkee, in search of a quarter, beyond the big water, away in the north countree. In a week he was back with a much lighter pack, but as pleased as pleased could be, for he filed on a quarter, beyond the big water, the best in the north countree And now in his shack, with no pack on his back, he pulls at his hoe cake free, but he'll soon have a wife to gladden his life, in his home in the north countree.

A Splendid Hair Tonic that Makes Beautiful Hair

Every hair dresser should know about Parisian Sage, the quick-acting hair dressing, that does just what this paper tells you it will do.

Parisian Sage is a most delightful and different hair dressing, a fact that will be recognized the moment it is applied to the scalp. There is not a particle of stickiness in it; it is not greasy, it has a delicate and refined odor, and is a truly invigorating tonic that will make hair grow, if the hair root still shows the least sign of life.

Try a bottle of Parisian Sage. It will brighten up the hair in two days.

BOY HAS LEG BROKEN AT MANNVILLE SPORTS

Day Was Very Fine and Events All Well Contested

Mannville, July 2 — Although the farmers of the district have been praying for lots of rain, and on Thursday their prayers were answered by a regular downpour, yet withal they assembled at the fair grounds on Friday to hold their annual sports meeting.

The grounds were heavy, but the day being fine, they dried off rapidly. The first item was a base ball match between Vermilion and Mannville, who had met on two previous occasions and had each a win to their credit, which lent the necessary interest and excitement to the game. Although the score was very one-sided the game was not lacking in interest. Vermilion was just unfortunate enough to meet Mannville at their very best, the fielding of the home lot was practically errorless, while the pitching of W. Colbert was marvelous, in that only 30 men had the privilege of standing up to bat. The following is the score

Mann'le 2 0 3 3 4 0 0 0 2 14

The horseracing was marred by a rather bad accident, which resulted in W. Tod of Scotstown getting his leg broken in the boy's pony race; it was the best race of the day, the two leading horses were almost neck and neck, about two hundred yards from home, with Tod gradually overhauling the leader, when his pony slipped on the muddy track and the rider was unable to get his leg clear. However he clung to the bridle of the pony and gamely struggled to his feet, only to fall again on the track, willing hands carried him to the doctor and after being attended to and the leg set, he was taken home.

The various athletic events resulted as follows:

Girls under 14—First, Lydia Carlson; second, Nancy Laidlaw, third, Helen Swan, fourth, Jenny Clark

Girls under 10 First, Nancy Laidlaw second, Annie Nichol third, Irene Gilmore fourth, Maggie Stewart, fifth, Grace French.

Boys under 14—First E. Hentcher, second, E. McFadden; third, F. Ebbutt, fourth, J. Summers.

Boys under 10—First, F. Prill, second, T. Chandler third, H. Winters, fourth, J. Cox

Ladies race—First, Miss Summers, second, Miss Ewing.

Open events, 100 yards First, Tufelt second, Williams third Colbert

Half mile—First, Tufelt second, Armstrong third Miller

Putting shot First, J. McLaughlin second, D. McLaughlin third, Clark

Hop, step and jump First, J. McLaughlin, D. McLaughlin second, Hunt, third, D. McLaughlin

High Jump First, Farmer second, Scribner, third, Hunt

Pole vault First, Townsend, second, Farmer third, Summers

Running long jump First, Scribner, second, Hunt third, Summers

Dominion Day At Islay

Was A Huge Success and Big List of Attractions Passed off Well

Islay, July 1 — Notwithstanding the heavy rains that fell here last night the sports today were well attended.

Baseball between Lloydminster and Islay, was the main attraction of the day. The latter put up a plucky game but the outside team proved too strong and won out.

Horse racing, free-for-all running race, 4 entries—1 McFadyen; 2 Fraser.

Farmers' trot—1 Fraser; 2 E. Moore.

Pony race 1 Randall; 2 Atkinson.

Broncho busting—1 Atkinson; 2 Fleming.

In the football game Islay vs C.N.R., Islay won 2 1.

Good meals were provided by the Empire hotel also the church workers, the latter holding a very successful concert at night.

The "C.N.R.B." brass band of Lloydminster furnished good music during the afternoon.

Vermilion's Galician trade has increased remarkably in the last two years. At that time one or two teams a week would be the sole representatives from the settlement. In one average week recently, no less than 28 loads of these people visited Vermilion. This means that in the neighborhood of two hundred Galicians spent their money here that week. Estimating the trading at $15.00 dollars per load, a very moderate allowance, considering the amount of machinery taken out Vermilion's trade was augmented to the extent of $400 in that week from this source. The settlement of these people begins in tp. 53 6 about 20 miles N. W. of town and stretches north and west from that point. A great number of those who come are not naturally tributary to this town, and as they are exceptionally close buyers, their coming here is a significant indication of Vermilion's superior trading facilities.

[illegible] Plante

The marriage of Mr. G. M. Brimacombe to Miss C. E. Plante was solemnized in the presence of a number of the relatives and friends, on Monday evening the 4th inst. at the Presbyterian manse by the Rev. Wm. Simons.

The bride came to Vermilion from Toronto about two years ago and has become deservedly popular through her amiable personality and the wise and generous use of her musical talents. For the past year she has given valuable service to the town as intermediate teacher on the public school staff. The groom has always occupied a favored position on the field of manly sports and was given a royal "send-off" at the close of the baseball game on Monday afternoon.

The number of valuable and useful presents which they received gave tangible expression to their popularity and the esteem in which they are held by their numerous friends. After a dainty repast they were escorted to their new home on First Street amid showers of good wishes and mirth.

QUEENIE CREEK PICNIC

An Enjoyable Affair - Attendance Over 200

The annual picnic of the Queenie Creek School took place on the 1 inst and resulted in a most enjoyable day for the visitors who numbered considerably over 200. After the ball game, which was a well contested one, the horse race was the principal attraction which was won by Patrice Lalomeau, Miss Bird being again unluckily beaten, the other races were all well fought for. The tug of war between Canadians and English was won by the Canucks, the Englishmen must have been asleep.

From the field to the dancing hall where the music was conscientiously excellent, and at this point the committee wish to thank Miss Moore and Mrs Maughan for their kind voluntary services at the piano. E. O. Bird being violinist.

Everybody departed with a smile that wont come off. And last but not least, a vote of thanks to the ladies who brought those dainty cakes and sweetmeats.

A FAMOUS ADMIRAL.

Sir Archibald Douglas is Canada's Senior in the British Navy.

Admiral Sir Archibald Lennox Douglas, upon whom McGill University is about to confer the degree of LL.D., is Canada's senior representative in the Royal Navy, his having served service as will has been a credit to the native country. He was born in Quebec in 1827 as a scion on Grand Pre, Nova Scotia, on the Bay of Minas. Wolfe drew up his army previous to the battle of the Plains of Abraham. His father was George Douglas, who was a member of the Legislative Council. The future admiral was educated at the Quebec High School, and in 1838 being then fourteen years of age, he went to sea as midshipman. Eighty-two years have since elapsed, and Admiral Douglas has seen service in the East and West Indies and on the China station, and has been in command of ships in many parts of the world. He was a very young officer when he was appointed to the Naval Brigade up the Gambia in 1849, and commanded the "Seaplane" during the Russian campaign of 1854-5, for which he received the Crimean medal with clasp.

A Boer Sympathizer.

Mrs. Wilkinson, of Toronto, is a Boer sympathizer. Her husband is in the employment of the Methodist Book Room, and is a son of the late Rev. Dr. Wilkinson, who was for many years one of the most prominent members of the Methodist Church in Canada. Mrs. Wilkinson's sympathies are with the Boers because she has relatives in the Transvaal. Her brother, Mr. Hofmeyr, is a member of the Volksraad, and another brother is a member of the Cape Parliament. Mrs. Wilkinson has been in Toronto for twenty years, but she has not yet become a naturalized British subject.

WHY HE WAS GALLANT

NEARLY LOST FALCONER.

University President Took the Wrong Section at the Train.

President Falconer, of Toronto University, was interviewed at Winnipeg recently by the Manitoba Free Press, and was the guest of the Canadian Club at a luncheon given in honor of the president arrived in Winnipeg he decided, however, that there was time for some mistake in the dates, while the Winnipeg committee, in their turn, who had charge of the various functions, were puzzled to know why the guest had not arrived and the caterers were in a quandary as to the number of their preparations. The train got in at noon, and the president was met by a committee and most of the alumni there endeavoring to locate each other.

In these days of transcontinental travel to the west the C.P.R. express trains generally travel in several sections. President Falconer arrived on the first section and the committee met the second one. While the committee were escorting the C.P.R. guest up the Royal Alexandra Hotel, the doctor, who had given up waiting for a reception committee, was being shaved in the basement. The president was under the impression that eight and a hundred miles of snow at the mountains had called to the office of James Fisher, the secretary of the club, and the reservation that Dr. Falconer could be located, if he desired to go to the Alexandra. In the meantime the well-known Toronto old boy was sent out on a search. "I am Dr. Falconer, the owner is not registered!" he asked the Royal Alexandra head clerk.

"I am Dr Falconer," said a man behind him, "and I am glad to find someone looking for me." Then followed explanations.

A Descendant of "Jack Horner."

Mrs Herbert Gladstone, the wife of the newly appointed Governor-General of the South African Union, is a lineal descendant of one of the most remarkable women of the highest rank in England. In the open grave of the English-speaking people of South Africa will be laid the dust of this intrepid lady's descent to distinction lies in the fact, through her father, the late Right Hon Sir Robert Horner Peel, that is actually a descendant of "Little Jack Horner," of nursery-rhyme memory. The author of the popular nursery rhyme was a steward of Glastonbury Abbey in 1543, and all visitors to the celebrated fane are shown Jack Horner's tomb. Sir Richard Horner Paget, Bart., who is now the head of the family, was for some years in the Diplomatic service, with headquarters in Washington, and is one of the great country squires of England, his seat being Leweston, in the county of Dorset. Mrs Gladstone is a handsome woman of the regal type, tall, fair and commanding appearance. She was a great favorite with her father among the children of the family, and was the only one who ever dared to call him "Pa." Mrs Gladstone is a fine musician, and is a brilliant performer on the piano. She is also a fine horsewoman, and is a familiar figure in the Row in London. She was married in the Salisbury Cathedral, and received a bouquet in the shape of a cathedral from the Salisbury choir. MISERABLE WITH DYSPEPSIA

Another Wonderful Cure By That Wonderful Fruit Medicine "Fruit-a-tives."

Mr. Matthew Gervey of 221 Church street, Toronto, Ont., was treated for years by prominent Physicians for Dyspepsia. He spent so much money for Doctor's medicines without getting much relief that he had almost made up his mind that he never was going to get well.

Seeing "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, however, Mr. Gervey thought he would take it as a last of those wonderful Fruit Juice tablets.

And this famous fruit medicine did for Mr. Gervey what all the doctors could not do—it cured him.

The letter of Mr. Gervey "positively tells of where Dyspepsia, when the proper means are used."

"Fruit-a-tives" makes the stomach sweet, purifies the blood, regulates the liver and regulates bowels, kidneys and skin.

A Polite Inquiry.

A few days after a farmer had sold a cow to a neighbor he counted from the neighbor's place, where he found the little boy sitting on the edge of the pig-pen, watching its new occupant.

"How d'ye do, Johnny?" said he. "How is your mother to-day?"

"Oh, pretty well, thank you, sir. How do you like the cow, sir?" asked the polite little boy.

CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED IN MANITOBA

Standing of Parties Same as Last Legislature – Government 28, Opposition 13

Winnipeg, July 12.—Final results received this morning go to show that the standing of the parties in the new Manitoba Legislature will be practically identical to the last, which was 28 Conservatives to 10 Liberals. When belated polls arrive, which may not be for a day or so, it may make a slight change, but not enough to effect the standing of the government. About the only doubtful polls left are Swan River and Russell, and the former is now practically assured for the Liberal Column and the latter for the Conservatives. Both sides gained five seats.

Premier Roblin was elated over his majority of 472 in Dufferin over Prof. Osborne. R. A. Bonnar, the solicitor of the grain grower's association who ran in Assiniboia as an independent, lost his deposit.

Hon. R. Roblin made the following statement this morning:

"I consider the result of the election a vindication of the attitude the government has assumed on questions of public policy, especially so in regard to the boundary and government elevators. The government feels now that the people are with it in the demand for equality with Saskatchewan and Alberta and will therefore insist on the recognition of that principle in any settlement that may be made as to terms."

ADVISES YOUNG MEN TO HOMESTEAD

Bruce Walker's Recommendations Endorsed by Well Known Winnipeg Business Man

"The recommendation of Immigration Commissioner Bruce Walker, made at a church gathering a few evenings ago, that young Canadians should take up homesteads" is a good one, said W. A. Campbell, whose long residence in different sections of the west, give him special knowledge of the subject. "There are scores of young men in our towns who would be infinitely better off on a farm, with a surer prospect of having their own home and a competence for their old age, and in the meantime enjoying absolute independence, being their own masters, subject and servile to no man.

"Farm life is ideal—the farm is the place where the brawn and the brains of our country are developed. Manual work on a farm to-day, with modern mechanical devices, has been reduced fifty per cent compared with fifteen or twenty years ago, and when a man gets nicely established farming is a real pleasure. No other occupation offers so much interest to the mind and develops intelligence.

"Frequently one hears city folk decry farm life, but if you will take the time to study their reasons you will find, in the great majority of cases, that these people have an inherent dread of the supposed drudgery of the farm. On the other hand one hears lots of people in nearly every walk of life in the city regretting that they did not stick to the farm. And look at the city people who after a few years in the swirl and struggling strife to secure for themselves a [illegible]

DESOLATION AND DEATH

REIGN IN ST. PIERRE, THE CITY OF 40,000 DEAD.

Roofless Houses and Cavernous Windows Strike Terror to the Hearts of Sightseers—Vegetation Now Covering Many Ruins—It Was the Wickedest Spot In the Whole West Indies—Only One Man Escaped.

"It is men ... not walls, that make a city ... the ... are there still ... fewer than 40,000 of its inhabitants are there also. But they have been asleep these eight years ... And it is extraordinarily impressive ... sightless skeleton of a dead city.

... the houses stand as seen from the sea, the streets rising ... well graded tier back ... the hills. But every ... every house roofless, every window cavernous and blind.

... paved street which runs along the ... "And there," says the ... who is my guide ... "was the wickedest spot in the whole West Indies. That row of houses, pink and white, to the left. The French nature, you know, away from the restraints of home, with the ignorance and docility of the blacks. It is a bad combination."

There are legends now of blasphemous rites which were in progress when the "fire from the Lord out of heaven" was rained down — legends which have probably grown up since the event. But there seems to have been good ground for that description, "the wickedest spot in the West Indies." And of ... people who were presumably in the city at the time only one man escaped, prisoner under sentence of death for murder confined in a cell impervious to the flames and fumes, and he only escaped ...

When Nerves Are Overwrought

IT IS a characteristic of women of this country to be conscious of their nerves. I suppose that the great rush of the western world that not only is felt in business circles, but also in the precincts of the home is accountable for the condition that obtains, but just as surely as night follows day there will be a deplorable state of affairs if nerves be allowed to assert themselves.

Possibly shopping is responsible for much nervousness. When women come home from a strenuous bargain-hunting day, I advise that a quieting treatment be given to the nerves. Now it is a well known fact that the ... condition of the blood due to work and excitement reacts upon the nerves. If a calming ... process can be instituted, the results will be beneficial.

Apply ... to the wrists. Rub it gently in ... a very quick action can be gained, for the blood vessels are quite near the surface at this point. A quieting effect results from the slow rubbing. The overwrought nerves will not be so evident.

Massage the back of the head if a nervous headache be your lot. The congested condition must be relieved, and the blood can be pushed upward away from the affected parts, thus relieving the pain.

FOR THE SLEEPLESS

Nervousness frequently evinces itself in an inability to sleep. And then the entire thing moves in revolutionary circles, the loss of sleep producing tired nerves and so on. When nerves are overwrought, do not let the first signs of insomnia get ahead of you. Watch carefully the night time, and induce sleep by the easiest and one of the best agents—a glass of warm milk, not hot, but warm. I need not emphasize the fact that this must be sipped slowly to ...

VERMILION ALTA. JULY 13 1910

Continued rains and bright warm days [illegible] have made crop prospects [illegible] brighter. That grain is [illegible] ahead of former years [illegible] throughout the district [illegible] a large percentage of spring wheat, barley and oats is in head [illegible] heavy appearance. [illegible] the appearance [illegible] growth of the crop during the past two weeks is nothing [illegible] and the entire district is certain to harvest a fine crop. Wheat appears to be the crop this year, many farmers sowing only sufficient of the coarser grains for their own consumption, as a result the prospects are that Vermilion will [illegible] heavy deliveries here this fall.

There is a growing feeling among the women in Western Canada that they should have the same right as the men to the free homestead lands of the prairie. They realize that they are doing as much as the men in the work of creating a vast empire in this new country. Parents with a family of children see their boys go out and secure free land, but their girls are not so fortunate. Suppose two families live side by side. In one family there are four boys but no girls, and in the other family four girls but no boys. The parents of the girls family are not to blame because their children are all girls. The Creator undoubtedly had some good purpose in view when he ordained it. But our law steps in and gives a prize to the parents of the boys and penalizes the parents of the girls. Of course if the four boys married the four girls when they grew up then things would be more equal, but it doesn't seem just right that matrimony should be made a provision of securing a fair share of what the state has for distribution. Under ordinary circumstances the family with the boys would have five homesteads from the government and the family with the girls would have only one. The boy's family becomes wealthy but the girl's family becomes poorer. Until the government of our land is entrusted with the power of ordaining the sex of children it doesn't seem fair that such discrimination should be made [illegible] in the case of our homesteads.—Grain Grower's Guide.

On Monday the Conservative government in the province of Manitoba was again returned to power under the leadership of the Hon. R. P. Roblin. Under the leadership of Hugh John Macdonald the Conservative party gained office in Manitoba in the elections of the fall of 1899 defeating the Greenway government which had held power for twelve years. Shortly after the elections Hugh John Macdonald resigned and was succeeded in the premiership by the Hon. R. P. Roblin who has successfully appealed to the electors of that province on three successive occasions. The campaign just closed is said to have been the hottest contested election ever held in the Dominion. Against the Roblin government was said to be pitted the Liberals, the great bulk of the Grain Growers, the Independents, most of the working men in the cities and a large number of Independent Conservatives. The results, if the above was the case, were practically the same as in the last election, 28 government supporters and 13 opposition members being returned. Five seats changed on both sides. Bonner, who ran as an independent, and who is solicitor for the Grain Growers, lost his deposit. Ed. Brown lost in South Winnipeg. Dr. Thornton went down to defeat in Deloraine. Geo. Walton was also a victim in Emerson and Prof. Osborne was defeated by the Premier in Dufferin. All the ministers were returned by very large majorities. The government fought the campaign on their past record, while the slogan of the opposition was based on the number of years that the Conservative party had been in office and that it was time for a change.

The provincial government yesterday paid the interest due on the $7,400 [illegible] bond issue of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, the company having defaulted payment. The amount paid was $185,000 and was made to the brokerage firm of Morgan and Co., London, on account of the bondholders.

We regret to learn that it was found necessary to remove Mrs Maggs, who was taken ill the beginning of the week, to the Edmonton hospital to undergo an operation. The patient was accompanied by her sister Mrs. Waterfield of Islay, Wednesday night. We trust to hear of her ultimate complete recovery.

Jas. Harrower, [illegible] of Argyle [illegible] town from Baldur, Man. today and is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. R. R. P. Cooper. Mr Harrower is looking over the country with a view of locating and has already expressed himself as pleasantly surprised with the appearance of the country around here.

JUST THINK OF IT

A Four Hundred and Fifty Dollar Piano Absolutely Given Away!

That advertising is now a science is again demonstrated practically to the buying public of this section by the wonderful advertising system now employed by the most enterprising house of Vermilion who are going to give away ABSOLUTELY FREE to some one of their customers on Saturday, December 24 the beautiful UPTON PARLOR GRAND PIANO which is now on exhibition at their Store. The Upton sells at FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS and is a HIGH CLASS instrument in every respect, GUARANTEED by the makers for TEN YEARS. JUST THINK OF IT! A Four Hundred and Fifty Dollar Piano to be GIVEN AWAY! A few years ago if a merchant was to do such a thing he would be considered a fit subject for an asylum, but conditions have changed. [illegible] in advertising the [illegible] of Craig Brothers giving away a $450.00 piano is a stupendous undertaking and it clearly demonstrates their desire to be "always up to date" and a little ahead of the spirit of the times.

Every purchaser of $1.00 worth of goods from any department of their store will receive a coupon good for 100 votes on the piano. The person presenting the largest number of votes to them on Saturday December 24 will receive the piano absolutely free. No favors will be shown and every person will receive an equal chance. The reputation enjoyed by Craig Brothers for "square dealing" insures this fact. We think the buying people will appreciate this extremely liberal offer on the part of Craig Brothers and we predict a lively scramble for votes.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS AND STOCKMEN

The farmer or rancher who wishes to enlarge or improve his herd by securing some of the well bred stuff now being put on the market, because of the crowding out of the big ranchers, will upon application to the Live Stock Commissioner at Edmonton, be put in touch with parties who are offering their stock for sale. Several ranchers have already given notice of their intention to reduce the size of their herds or sell out entirely.

Most of the herds reported are of the Shorthorn or Hereford breeding, or are crosses of these breeds. Practically all are bred for beef production, and being range bred are much better able to take care of themselves than are the farm bred that finds its way out here from the east.

These animals will be of little use to dairymen.

Address all enquires to the undersigned in care of the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

W. F. Stevens,
Live Stock Commissioner.

VERMILION ALTA. JULY 20th [illegible]

It is the intention of the Presbyterians of Alberta to build a College and with the characteristic promptness of the West five towns in the province have made tempting offers in the way of free sites in an effort to secure the College. Vermilion is also going to get into the run and make a strong bid for the location of the College here. We have pre-eminent claims from many points of view and if those who have the matter in hand should be induced to visit the town, Vermilion would have the College cinched.

Boy Has A Narrow Escape

Presence of Mind of Machine Operator [illegible]

What might have been a fatal accident was narrowly avoided at the scene of the well-boring operations on the town school grounds, Saturday evening. Work had just ceased for the day and the heavy drill had been lifted clear and was being swung into place when the operator noticed that it was about to strike a small boy standing in the way. With remarkable presence of mind he applied the brake, stopping the drill instantly, and undoubtedly saved the boy from being crushed to death. The shock of the sudden stoppage to the machine was so great that it was completely overturned, the standard broken and several rods more or less bent. As a consequence it was not till Monday evening that boring was resumed.

Extract From Speech Prepared by Chas. Hood, Elk Point

Fourth of July Celebration

There is a possibility that some of our Canadian friends or cousins may think [illegible] lacking in loyalty, because we [illegible] this day of [illegible] mistaken. We [illegible] loyal Canadians [illegible] Samuel. [illegible] the [illegible] United States. [illegible] but any politician who as much as hints at the possibility of serious trouble between these countries is no king but a cheap imitation of a true statesman.

You [illegible] familiar with the [illegible] King and colonies from the M[illegible] country, but [illegible] England of today [illegible] 150 years ago. [illegible] and her colonial [illegible] is such that we people of Canada enjoy the [illegible] absolutely necessary to the existence of a full grown man. So you see we are all far better off today, and whether you be English, Irish, Scotch or Canadian you can with a perfectly clear conscience join with your [illegible] the line, (who are Canadians in the making) and all enjoy this day together.

As I said before there is no reason why we should forget our Uncle Sam. In fact, I sometimes think that Canada is doing all in her power to keep his memory green, for at every turn we are compelled to think of him. When we haul that load of wool forty-five miles over a rough trail and get the munificent sum of eight cents per pound, the hot salt tears trickle down our weather beaten cheeks in memory of him. When after years of constant care and watchfulness we trail that big three year old steer over that same long winding pathway, and at the end pocket thirty plunks, in fancy we hear that comical old be-whiskered guy giving us the laugh; and when we put the proceeds of the sale into a grub stake, cram the whole thing into a two bushel bag, sling it across our shoulder and hit that same antediluvian trail for the homestead, we again hear him chuckling in the sack, and he is in there, don't you think he isn't, for a good share of the contents of that sack has his brand on it.

So they will not let us forget him if we would. Never-the-less, I am a Canadian, one of those foreign born Canadians that the newspapers of the country are sitting up nights worrying over how they can assimilate. Assimilate, you know means to cause to resemble, to bring to a likeness. Now I do not think there is a person here who came with the intention of being assimilated, or brought to re-semble. The restless pushing American spirit has made that country across the line one of the greatest nations on the earth, and we Yanks and Ex-Yanks are bringing no small portion of it with us. We are also bringing more money than any other class. We have all sacrificed a great deal in coming to Canada. Many a time we have longed for the comforts left behind, but we have no complaint to make but this—had we known what we know now, we would have been here before. The actions of our Canadian cousins sometimes lead us to believe they actually think we came here simply to enjoy the blessings and great advantages of a country already made and perfected. Why bless your dear souls, if I thought for one minute that were true, I would catch the first train for the East to-morrow. No it is because we know that here is a great country just in the making, and we want to be here to the doings. We wanted to help you build it and grow up with it. The most undesirable citizen that Canada has today is the fellow who thinks or at least acts as tho the job was done, and the really valuable man is one who knows that the job is just begun and who keeps [illegible] improvements. To [illegible] splendid [illegible] that they have [illegible] country to be dormant for [illegible] years while [illegible] building a great nation, is a reflection on their energy and enterprise; but [illegible] ahead at last and will surely get there some day. I think to myself sometimes, Great Scott they are so slow, and those of us who have lived out the best half of our alloted span of three score years and ten should be pardoned if we are sometimes impatient, when we think of the things that could be done, that should be done, we chew the bit, for we do not want to die just when we come in sight of the promised land. One of the greatest needs of this country today is men of the Theodore Roosevelt type at the head of the affairs of state. There is not a country on earth that is in greater need of such men, nor that presents greater opportunities to such men. I know there are men holding office in this province, who if they depended on their executive ability to hold a job in any of the up to-date private commercial enterprises would draw but one pay check. Sunny Alberta and black alluvial loam are fetching slogans, but if we would sing "God Save The King" with a fervor that is backed only by a true love of country, then give us some of those advantages, which as faithful citizens we deserve, and which as nation builders we absolutely require. We are all working, no matter in what line there is great work to do, and no country offers better chance to the hustler. The cry is, "Everybody push, but for goodness sake don't climb on and ride just yet. Now I want you to give three cheers for Canada, the first for the Canada of today, the last two and the tooter for the Canada of tomorrow.

Moose Ranch

What will happen next? One day last week a friend of mine, of Sham Rock Valley, walked over to his nearest neighbor, a good old friend of mine, and said to him "Im afraid to stay alone nights" "Why?" says the neighbor. "There is some man or beast prowling about nights." "Come in, stay here tonight" says the neighbor, "And we will investigate."

Next morning the two men went forth well armed with jack knives, pitch forks, axes and a good big chew of tobacco, no guns, they were afraid they might accidently shoot at each other. They would not have been in the slightest danger tho if they had, for boys are always a little nervous and about wild. When they arrived the man found to his sorrow that he had been robbed of all his grub stake during the night.

Several bags of oat meal, one pail butter, 8 or 10 loaves of bread, half bushel cookies, 8 or 10 bushel of oats, sack potatoes and a 100 lbs flour, were litterly strewn for 200 yards up on the side of Moose Mountain.

Well after seeing the whole mess his Irish was up. He said a lot of things, may be you can guess some of them, but he finally turned to his neighbor and says "Dam that Bear."

One day last week three or four of Mr. Garnham's neighbors went over and helped him build up his barn, as he had the misfortune to lose the other one by fire a short time ago. I was sorry for Mrs. Garnham she made a fearful mistake. She had chicken pie for dinner. Jiminy! you should have seen those fellows store that chicken pie inside their skins. Well there was nothing doing in the line of work for a long time after dinner.

The School Board of Elk Point district have now decided to build their school-house on wheels so they can move it once a week, so as to satisfy all parties concerned.

Pleasant Valley

The first annual picnic of the Pleasant Valley Local Union of the United Farmers of Alberta was held on the Vermilion river on Thursday July 7th. A large crowd turned out and everyone apparently had a good time. The next regular meeting of the U. F. A will be held in the Morrison School house Thursday July 21st.

The members of the Church of England will meet his Lordship the Bishop of Saskatchewan on Saturday afternoon July 16th., on the lawn of the Morrison School. Refreshments will be served.

Crops are coming along fine in Pleasant Valley. Lots of rain.

ANNUAL STOCK SHOW AND RACE MEET

Edmonton August 23, 24, 25 and 26.

This year on August 23, 24, 25, and 26, The Edmonton Exhibition Association, Ltd., will hold its annual Stock Show and Race Meet at which over $40,000 will be distributed in Prizes, Purses, and Attractions.

The Exhibition will be held on the new grounds acquired through the City of Edmonton, consisting of 147 acres of land, about 80 of which are being devoted entirely to Exhibition purposes. On these grounds modern stock buildings have been erected, a grand stand which will accomodate 5000 people, besides Poultry and Dog, Dairy and Horticulture Buildings, Race Stables, etc., and an up to date half mile standard race track, the total expenditure on grounds and buildings exceeding $175,000. Another $200,000 will be expended on Exhibition Buildings before 1912, when the Provincial Exhibition complete in all departments, will be held in Edmonton. One feature of the 1912 Exhibition will be the running of the first Edmonton Futurity for 3 year old Trotters and Pacers for which a stake of $3,000 has been guaranteed. A similar futurity has been guaranteed to be run in 1913, guaranteed value of which is $4,500. Entries for both of these stakes close on Sept. 1st. The Edmonton Derby for 3 year old running horses, value $1,000 will also be run in 1913, entries for which close on Nov. 1st. About sixty entries have been already received for the Futurities for harness horses, and by September 1st, it is expected that this number will be increased to one hundred.

Besides encouraging the breeding racing stock, The Edmonton Association have taken steps to promote breeding along the other lines by forming the Alberta Provincial Horse, Cattle, Sheep and Swine Breeders' Associations having their head quarters and registered office in Edmonton.

Chailey Notes

Our young men are taking advantage of the fine summer evenings by an occasional pleasure drive and not always alone.

Our teacher, Mr. Jennings, is spending his summer holidays pursuing horticulture.

R. B. Hanning has purchased Section 28-49-8 from McDougal and Secord and broken one hundred and fifty acres. There is lots more good land lying idle and more investors like Robert Bruce would be welcome.

W. H. Kennedy of Edmonton, is busy breaking on his homestead.

Mr. Fielding with his gasoline, and Mr. Harding with his steam ploughing outfit, have been breaking in the neighborhood for several weeks, and Mr. Moultrai's steam plough is at work further south.

A Sunday School picnic has been arranged for at Mr. Rich's lake and will in all probability be as enjoyable as on other occasions, much to the delight of the youngsters.

Notices are out for tenders for a stone foundation under the Creighton school, as this is the first school built in the Mannville district and a fine large building as well it is certainly good policy to keep it up to date in all respects.

THE NEW QUEEN

THE mother of Princess Mary of Teck, who, by the sad event which we announce today, is called to the throne as Queen of England, used to say, "I would rather be known as an English Princess than by any other title in the world." The serene patriotism that distinguished the late Duchess of Teck and made her a missionary of everything British is the inheritance of her daughter, the first English Princess who for centuries has shared the throne of Great Britain and Ireland.

To the Duchess of Teck affectionately named by the people "Fat Mary," the Queen owes many of her amiable qualities and accomplishments, and, above all, her love of home and family, her studious disposition and her charity and sympathy. Of the Queen, as of the King, it may be said that her natural bent is not in the direction of ceremonial and public life. Her greatest joy is to be at home with her husband and her five sons and her daughter. [illegible]

...and responsibilities. To the education and training of her children the Princess devoted her great abilities, though her time and energies were always at the command of charity and benevolence. An inborn capacity for business enabled her to accomplish many things, for, as has been well said, her Royal Highness is quite the modern woman in that respect, and is little given to sentiment and meaningless talk.

A certain shyness and reserve of manner have given many observers the impression that her Royal Highness is cold and unsympathetic. Nothing could be more erroneous. No woman has stronger sympathies or sympathies more spontaneous in action. Thousands of poor and thousands of rich people [illegible] ... testimony to this truth. [illegible] ... of the Royal Family she never forgets the face or the name of a friend. The experience acquired in journeys over the Empire ... DAME FASHION'S DECREES

MORE and more eccentric are the fashions exhibited as the summer season advances, and the woman who faces the problem of a becoming, smart and up-to-date summer wardrobe has a harder task as regards clothes than she has ever yet been given. Every woman wants to be fashionably gowned; she also wants to be attractive, and how can two such absolutely diverse feats be accomplished today? The very latest news from Paris is that the skirts shall not be more than two yards wide around the ankles, and that any fulness of the skirt shall be kept in place by a broad strap or band, so that the rule two yards, and only two yards, in width shall be maintained. To quote from a letter written by one of fashion's leaders after a visit to the leading dressmaking establishments in Paris: "The aeroplane evidently dominates the styles of this season, and every woman is dressed as though she were meditating a trip in a flying machine. THE INSIDE OF A MOLE-HILL

ONE would think that the life history of such a common creature as the mole would be accurately known to naturalists. The commonness of an animal, however, often protects it from expert study. It is more exciting and wins more fame to investigate the habits of a denizen of Central Africa or Borneo than to watch the doings of a familiar creature from one's own doorstep. So it comes about, as we are assured by Lionel E. Adams in Nature, that the life stories of some common animals remain to be written, and that of the mole is rather [illegible]

After Presbyterian Ladies' College

At Special Meeting Council Appoint Mayor Stephens to Meet Board. N. Murray to Represent B. of T.

A special meeting of the town council was held Saturday afternoon for the purpose of discussing the line of action the town would adopt in an effort to have the $50,000 Presbyterian Ladies College built at Vermilion. The special committee appointed to interview and communicate with extensive property holders, submitted most encouraging and favorable reports regarding the granting of free sites from Davidson and McRae, the townsite owners, and A. E. Howard and Co., of Vancouver. Both wires stated the willingness of the parties to grant sites for the College, and in view of the favorable replies, the council deemed it advisable to take immediate action to plead their cause before the College promoters at Red Deer. This was accordingly done by the appointment of his honor Mayor Stephens as a delegate by the Council. Norman Murray, barrister being appointed by the B. of T.

These gentlemen left Monday night en route to Red Deer, where they are to meet the College board, who were due to assemble there to finally decide on the choice of a site from the number submitted.

A party giving his name as Wm. Johnson, who was wanted here on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences, was arrested at Edmonton and given his preliminary hearing here Saturday before Justice Barber. He was sent up for trial, Sergt. McPhee taking him up to the Fort [illegible] night.

THE passage of the anti-hopple rule by the congress of the American Trotting Association sounded the death note of the obnoxious straps and every breeder and genuine horseman and sportsman is pleased with the result. Never before in the history of turf legislation was a great question so thoroughly ventilated and so carefully looked at from all viewpoints and when the joint committee of the American and National Trotting Associations, composed of men of eminent ability who have for over two decades controlled the destinies of light harness sport and brought it up to its present high standard of popularity and prosperity decided upon a plan for their final extinction it hurt no vested interest and neither owners of hoppled pacers or secretaries of associations need have any fear of the ultimate result.

The owner of a hoppled pacer can race him, if he lasts that long, till the close of the season of 1914. The career of the pacer is not long and it is safe to say that there is not a strapped up pacer today that will not be absolutely useless as a racing machine four years from now. Then what is he worth? The free legged pacer when his racing days are over will sell for a roadster or a matinee horse; the hoppled fellow is rated good enough for the peddler's wagon.

The principal object of all racing is the improvement of the breed of horses, because the running associations lost sight of that fact the laws of racing in [illegible] states [illegible] their meetings or put them out of existence. The trotting associations should not follow a bad example.

The only opposition to the anti-hopple rule comes from owners of hoppled pacers, their trainers and secretaries who fear that when the rule becomes really operative they will be short of entries. [illegible]

[illegible] the improvement of the breed and it certainly cannot be said by the most enthusiastic supporter of hopples that speed produced through their use can be naturally reproduced. The trotting associations must live up to their principles if they expect to retain the confidence of the public. As for the breed ere they should be a unit on the question. The hopple has depreciated the value of every trotter and free legged pacer on the continent. As a racing and gambling machine while he lasts he can earn as much and sometimes more money than a genuine pacer worth ten times the amount. Dan Patch sold for $60,000, what would he have been worth had he worn the straps. John R. Gentry, Star Pointer and Joe Patchen all sold for big money and they were all natural pacers. These horses are all in the stud. They are all producing speed. Where is the hopple stallion that ever sold for a good figure or has [illegible] to his credit.

The only real backing to the hopple is that offered by a few trainers and a few weak kneed writers for the turf press who like to play to the gallery. The latter make no defence of the straps. They wish they did not exist and are sorry they were ever invented, but they are read [illegible] abundant weeps over the trainers who will suffer and the unfortunate secretaries who will fail to fill their entry lists. Every sensible man will at once recognize the fact, that the trainers are abundantly able to take care of themselves and the sympathy for the secretaries is [illegible] by a lively idea of favors to come.

THE EVAPORATION OF GOLD

SOME years ago Roberts Austen proved through a series of experiments extending over four years, that when a column of lead is allowed to rest upon a column of gold a slow diffusion takes place, resulting in the appearance of traces of gold in the lead. When a degree of heat not sufficient to melt either of the metals is applied the diffusion of the gold takes place more rapidly. The tendency of the gold particles is upward into the lead. As far as is yet known the evaporation of gold occurs only in the presence of another metal.

A Shapely Cigar Means Comfort in Smoking

[illegible]

If you have, you will know what I mean when I refer to the shape of a cigar as being one of the points which determine the difference between a good and a bad cigar.

Of course, a cigar, like a man, cannot travel on its shape alone. It must have other qualities of excellence. Its aroma must be perfect, it must draw well and smoke evenly and the flavor must be true throughout the whole smoke.

[illegible]

If you want to realize how important is the shape of a cigar in deciding on the choice of a smoke try a BUCK-EYE.

There are other cigars, perhaps, equal in aroma, equal in tobacco, equal perhaps in all the little points which go to make a satisfying smoke.

But the BUCK-EYE is nothing if it is not perfect, and perfection in a cigar cannot be achieved unless perfection in shape is acquired.

P.S.—The BUCK-EYE does not travel on its shape—but its shape helps to make it the best Ten Cent Cigar sold today.

Heroines of the Switchboard

(By Anna Steese Richardson)

HUNDREDS of lives and millions of dollars in property are saved every year by brave and quick witted telephone operators. Sometimes the story of their achievements is told in the daily papers, more often it is recorded only in the reports of telephone companies. Sometimes the hello heroine sticks to her switchboard, encompassed by danger; but often the crises demands less courage than quick wit and good judgment.

Bravery of the sort which makes nations great inspired Mrs. Dolla Rooke to stay at her post on that fateful night August 25, 1908, when Cimarron Creek overflowed its banks, and, with death riding on its crest, swept down upon the sleeping, unconscious town of Folsom, New Mexico.

Ordinarily the Cimarron flows lazily and drowsily through a valley studded with ranches and small towns. But New Mexico is a country of cloudbursts, and one of these broke with fury near the headwaters of the little stream, transforming it into a plunging, maddened torrent. Far up its banks a telephone operator watched its wild career from his office. Then suddenly he remembered that the Folsom exchange was in a two-story shack which literally overhung the banks of the creek. He cut in on the Folsom wire.

"Hello, Mrs. Rooke, that you? The Cimarron's rising. It will hit Folsom in about an hour. Your shack's bound to go. Send the word down the line."

"All right. Thanks," answered Mrs. Rooke, the night operator, as calmly as though it was a bit of gossip.

Then she looked at the clock. Eleven—and the little world connected with her switchboard lay asleep with a flood [illegible] the narrow strip of earth, but still the two operators stuck to their switchboards.

[illegible]

"Greenwich swept by fire. Send help," was their terse message along the wires.

Now the flames had crossed the alley. Windows crackled on the lower floor. The fire was eating the second floor rear. The roar of the fire was heard just beyond the partition. The little exchange was filled with smoke.

The operator at Stamford had just received the call for help. Miss [illegible] drove the plug home. The switchboard was hot. The two girls sprang to their feet and dashed down the narrow front staircase just as the flames claimed the exchange for their own.

But the call for help was being answered all along the line, and so, instead of being wiped off the water's edge, Greenwich lost only twelve residences and property valued in all at about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Half a dozen night operators, all girls, working in the exchanges of the New York Telephone Company, at Mount Vernon and Pelham, New York, stuck to their posts with eyes blinded, [illegible]

There are evidences on all sides that Vermilion is growing—that it will keep forging ahead is a positive fact, for it can't help it. One of the best ways to keep things going is to have the interests of the town well to the front by a live press—and the way to have a good live up-to-date representative sheet is to all get together and give it all the business you can—fill its columns with live energetic advertising, for it is through the advertising columns of the town press that outside investors and business interests set the standard of the citizens of a town. The Standard can fill its advertising columns twice over with outside advertisements but would prefer ten times over to carry the advs of every business man of Vermilion.

MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES

The problem confronting every farmer and stockman in Alberta this year is that of providing roughage for the coming winter. Hay will not only be high but very high. The timothy crop is light; straw of all kinds with the exception of winter wheat is short. Every market that had to be supplied from Alberta in the past will look to Alberta again this year for feed. Besides this, other points which have produced enough to supply their own needs in previous years, will import feed largely during 1910 and 1911; those sections which have been favored with rain can do much to supply them and it behooves the farmers of these sections to do their utmost to that end, and by so doing they will be well paid for their [illegible]

Every acre of grass land that can be mowed should be mowed. In driving through the country we see numerous places in which half a day's brushing will enable one to secure a ton or more of hay. There is no kind of farm work that will pay better this year than brushing out these places.

An acre of early sown rye and used as a pasture will easily take the place of [illegible] hay during the late fall and spring months and every farmer should sow at least [illegible]

HIGH RED BLOOD

You Will Never Have It as Long as You Have Dyspepsia

Just as long as you have dyspepsia your food will not properly digest, and the nutritious elements in the food will not be extracted or absorbed, and impoverished or watery blood will follow.

This condition may not be apparent at first, but it will come just as sure as sure as the sun will rise again.

Any stomach ailment, including all forms of indigestion, can be promptly cured by using Mi-o-na tablets, a scientific treatment unsurpassed.

It stops fermentation, belching of gas and taste of sour food almost at once.

The mighty power of Mi-o-na to invigorate and restore the stomach to perfect condition is known everywhere.

Mi-o-na cures by building up—by banishing the cause. For this people it is a great flesh builder, because it causes the stomach to give more and purer nutrition to the blood. It cures sea and car sickness and vomiting of pregnancy almost immediately. Fred Long sells Mi-o-na for fifty cents a large box, and guarantees it to cure or money back.

Order from Ramsay, Florist Edmonton

Gilchrist-Brown

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Brown five miles east of town, on Wednesday July 20th, when her daughter Mary Kathleen was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Ronald Dugal Gilchrist of Islay, Alta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Simons, Presbyterian minister of Vermilion.

A large circle of relatives and friends had gathered for the occasion and promptly at 1.30 o'clock the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Simons floated out on the summer breeze, almost simultaneously the groom elect appeared and took his position before the minister; he was followed by the "Flower Girl" in the person of little Miss Eveline McClellen who looked sweet in a dress of white embroidery, scattering flowers in the path of the coming Bride elect. In a few moments the latter appeared looking radiantly lovely in a dress of white silk mull, made with the tunic effect, trimmed with heavy lace and satin girdle, she wore a veil and carried a bouquet of ferns and smilax. As the last notes of the wedding march died away the voice of the minister was heard repeating the solemn words of the "Old Old Story" and in a few moments the happy couple were receiving the congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends.

After the ceremony the company sat down to do honors to the host of good things which Mrs. Brown had prepared and it is needless to say they did ample justice to the splendid spread placed before them.

The bride was the recipient of many useful and handsome presents a list of which follows:

Silver fruit spoon Rev. Mr. Proctor. China dinnerset, Mr. and Mrs. McCrory Fancy Jewel casket Mr. and Mrs. Scarer. Pair fancy towels, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson. Pair fancy towels, Miss King. Linen table cover, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Lamont, Alta. Pair cut glass salt dishes Mr. and Miss Moore, Galt, Ont. The Bride's mother gave her a beautiful china tea set and her brothers gave her a cow. The Groom's gift to the Bride was a gold brooch with amethyst settings. The "Flower Girl" also received a gold brooch from the Groom. The young couple left the same evening on a honeymoon trip along the banks of the north Saskatchewan.

The Bride's going gown was of western broad cloth trimmed with soutache braid, and she wore a white hat trimmed with plumes. Vermilion loses one of her most estimable young ladies, but what is our loss is Islay's gain.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters:

An Adventurer is breaking through England announcing the old-established Nut Soup marketing combine. It is surprising until it is discovered that he is spurred to this course by the fact that a young lady and her mother whom he has met on the boat—one Miss Trescott—have a pecuniary interest in the Nut Soup combine. Miss Trescott is a writer of fiction, and her mother is a widow. A visit to the office of the Nut Soup combine reveals the fact that Mr. Manling, the president, is a man of iron will, and that he has very little sympathy with the methods of Mr. Trescott. Mr. Trescott is a man of very fine physique, and has been a noted athlete. A visit to Mr. Manling's office by Mr. Trescott and his daughter results in a rebuff, and the latter is told that the Nut Soup combine is not to be bothered with "amateurs." Mr. Trescott is a writer of fiction, and he

The Ways of Tortoises

WHY do you always carry your umbrella?" remarked the worst bore in town.

"Because," moaned the victim, "my umbrella cannot walk."

And purple silence enveloped the landscape for a short space.

THE sluggish motions of common land tortoises, or "turtles," lead many persons to undervalue their intelligence. The "ridiculous slowness" of the tortoise, however, arises from the animal's peculiar construction and is no proof of dulness.

The legs of a turtle look more like crutches than legs; and though the feet form a strong grappling apparatus for pulling along a heavy weight, who could expect swiftness from such tuns? Some large tortoises, nevertheless, make long journeys with more rapidity than might seem possible.

In the Galapagos Islands turtles were found by Darwin which were able to travel four miles a day, a rate of progress not despicable in creatures provided with such legs, creatures, too, so heavy that six men were often required to lift one of them.

Though the tortoise is slow of foot, it is quick to make the best of all its available modes of defence. The box tortoise possesses a singular defensive apparatus. The plastron, or shell covering the under part of the body, is so formed that its front segment can be drawn upward to protect the animal's head, the head meanwhile being drawn back under the carapace, or shell on the back. The upper and under shells then meet in front, forming a kind of box in which the creature is unassailable. When the danger is passed the reptile relaxes a muscle and the raised part of the plastron falls, allowing the head and fore feet to come forth. This movable plate is fastened to the plastron by a strong hinge of elastic ligament.

Few animals seem more impassive than the tortoise, but those who have ever watched its movements know that the creature is really very sensitive. [illegible]

... pulgners, George Wilkes and American Girl, in 2:27½, 2:24½ and 2:26½. October 2 at Albany, for the same amount, she won from George Wilkes and George Palmer in slower time. Five days later at Mystic Park, Boston, also for a purse of $2,000. In that race she defeated George Wilkes, George Palmer and Dreas Prince in 2:23, 2:21½ and 2:27. Her last victory that year was at Point Breeze Park, Philadelphia, October 30, when in a match of $1,000 she defeated George Wilkes.

Her opening victory in 1869 was at Boston, July 8, when she met that great mare, Lucy, winning in 2:20½, 2:21½ and 2:22½. Six days later she was at Fashion Course, L.I., when she again met and defeated her old competitor, George Palmer. Five days after she was at Philadelphia and for $2,000 defeated American Girl. At Buffalo, August 1, she won a $10,000 purse from American Girl and George Palmer in the then exceptionally fast time of 2:19¾, 2:19¼ and 2:19¾. Lancaster, Pa., must have been decidedly on the trotting map at that time, for on September 1 she trotted a race with American Girl and won out again. September 1 at Binghamton, N.Y., there was a swell race for $4,000 between her and American Girl, with the same result. She closed the season at Baltimore, November 10, in a race for $2,000, which she won from George Wilkes and Hotspur.

The season of 1870 was marked with big purses and the Maid was strongly in evidence at Prospect Park, L.I., June 2, 1870, when for a purse of $5,000, she defeated George Wilkes and American Girl. June 15 she was at Boston, and captured a $6,000 purse from George Palmer and American Girl. June 20 she defeated the same pair. June 24 at Providence, R.I., another $3,000 purse was captured and July 11 at Fleetwood Park, New York, the victorious mare won again from the same pair in 2:23, 2:21 and 2:22½. A richer prize awaited her at Buffalo in the shape of a $7,... purse, to which she had only to beat George Palmer, which she did in 2:23½, 2:21 and 2:20. August 31 found the wonderful mare at Long Branch, N.J. [illegible]

... ed Judge Fullerton in straight heats. Her next engagement was at Chicago, October 8, where she took Gloster and Bashaw, Jr. in camp, a dose which she repeated on October 16 for the same amount, and with the same horses. Ten days later at Chicago for $5,000 she went against time to beat 2:16 and won in 2:17½. October 30 was her last victory of the season when she won a $3,000 purse from Gloster in slow time.

The season of 1874 was a very busy one and between May 30 and November 6 she scored twenty-one victories. At Point Breeze Park, Philadelphia, May 30 she defeated the pacer Copperbottom for a purse of $2,500 and did not have to go faster than 2:34½. June 9 found her at Prospect Park, L.I., where she defeated Judge Fullerton for $2,500. June 5 she was at Suffolk Park, Philadelphia and for $5,000 defeated the well known mare Nettie. June 23 at Fleetwood Park, N.Y., she showed her heels to Judge Fullerton for a purse of $3,500. A jump was then made to the west and at Evansville, Ind., July 2, for a purse of $6,000 she defeated Red Cloud and Judge Fullerton in straight heats. Six days after she repeated this victory at Indianapolis for the same size of a purse. July 16 at Saginaw she repeated again and then went on and won at Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester, Springfield and Hartford. September 2 she went for the trotting record at Mystic Park, Boston, and won the championship in 2:14 and $2,000. September 5 for $2,500 she defeated Judge Fullerton and American Girl, also at Mystic Park. Five days later at Beacon Park, Boston, she defeated the same amount, and at Dayton, O., September 30, the purse being $4,500. Against time at the same place for $4,000 she won in 2:14. At Chicago she won against time in 2:17 and she won again at Trenton and Point Breeze, Philadelphia.

The season of 1875 was short and she only won six races, but they went from $2,000 to $5,000 each and her opponents were American Girl, Huntress and Lula. In 1876 she was back in San Francisco and went a novel race against Golden Gate to run a mile and three sixteenths ... [illegible]

CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM

"Fruit-a-tives," the famous fruit medicine, is the greatest and most scientific remedy ever discovered for Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives," by its marvellous action on the bowels, kidneys and skin, prevents the accumulation of Uric Acid, which causes Rheumatism and thereby keeps the blood pure and rich.

Mrs. Walter Hooper, of Hillview, Ont., says: "I suffered from severe Rheumatism, lost the use of my right arm and could not do my work. Nothing helped me until I took "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine cured me."

THE BUCK-EYE
VOL. 1 WEEKLY EDITION NO. 15

The Biter Bit

"Please help a blind man," said a fellow with green goggles as he held out his cap towards the line of people issuing from the Union Depot.

"I always help the blind," said one of two young men who were passing, and he stopped and took out a five dollar bill, "can you get a quarter out of this?"

"I guess so," said the blind man, fishing out a handful of change and counting out four dollars and seventy-five cents.

"Well, John," said the benevolent young man's companion as they walked on, "you're a bigger fool than I took you to be."

"How?" said John.

"... that fellow's no more blind than I am. ... a five dollar bill!"

"Blamed if I know," said John, innocently, "but he must be mighty near sighted not to see that it was a counterfeit."

There are none so blind as those who will not see.

How frequently a man, who asks for a certain brand of cigar, will take just what is handed him without insisting on the smoke of his choice. And how frequently his easy going indifference results in his being handed a counterfeit, a cigar which has no claim to quality of any kind but cheapness of manufacture.

It's different with a BUCK-EYE smoker.

He knows what he wants, and he sees that he gets it.

You ask why?

Try a BUCK-EYE and you'll know.

P.S.—Ask for the best Ten Cent Cigar in the case, and get a BUCK-EYE.

YOU NEED FEAR IT NO LONGER

THE UMPIRE

NOBODY loves an umpire. When the home team loses, it's all his fault, and when the game is won, it's in spite of him. Do the fans applaud when he handles a fifteen inning game without making a mistake; do they cheer his name when he stops a foul tip with his shin, or has a swift shoot bounced off his mask? "Yes, they do,—not!" says "Billy" Evans, of the American league staff. But while the baseball arbitrator's position can not be called an enviable one, Mr. Evans, writing in The Sunday Magazine, alludes to its one redeeming feature—"the salary connected with the job."

While it is not generally known, perhaps, there isn't a man of any prominence in either of the major leagues who is receiving less than twenty-four hundred dollars and expenses for six months work. Positions at which such a salary can be commanded, for so short a period of time, are few and far between; consequently the men judging the game figure they can stand any abuse that may come their way.

The assertion that the umpire's friends are generally in the minority is proven, says Mr. Evans, "by a little happening that was staged in Chicago several years ago.

"Joe Cantillon, former manager of the Washington team, was umpiring in the American league at the time. Joe appeared at the ball park one day accompanied by two men. The man in charge of the gate was a new employee, and refused to pass in the two ... [illegible]

... "Yes, I made plenty of mistakes," was Cantillon's quick retort, "but I failed to make the one you are making every day. When I realized that I had gone blind I knew enough to retire!"

This was too much for old Jack, and he made Cantillon beat a hasty retreat to the clubhouse.

An umpire's first season in a big league is pretty sure to be his hardest, remarks Evans, and if he can get through it successfully, he is likely to hold down his position permanently. Of the new men in the American League last year, Fred, or "Bull" Perine, was one of the most successful, we are told.

Perine, though small, possesses plenty of nerve, and always has a good fund of humor at his tongue's end. Although never looking for trouble, he always meets it in a clever way, and a few of his runs in with different players last year were of an interesting nature.

Jakey Atz, the clever utility player of the Chicago White Sox, was twice the victim of Perine's rule, and each time Atz was requested to beat it to the clubhouse. The offense in each instance was unique.

One day, while playing second base, Atz felt certain that he had caught one of the visiting players who had tried to pilfer second. Umpire Perine took an opposite view of the situation, and declared the runner safe.

The verdict failed to make a hit with Atz, and he at once began to show his indignation over the affair. Rushing at Perine with his arms waving, much after the manner of a windmill he protested vigorously against the ruling. Perine was obdurate. To show more strongly just how bad he thought the decision really was, Atz tossed his glove high into the air and followed this performance by sending his cap in pursuit. This was too much for Perine, who, without making much ado, turned to Atz and said:

"You may do the rest of your disrobing in the clubhouse."

Thereupon the surprised player discovered that he had been put out of the game.

The following day Atz came to the lot still a trifle sore over the disputed decision, also his ejection from the game.

With the call of three balls and two strikes, Perine called two strikes in succession on him. Fearing that any open objection would cause his retirement from the game, Atz refrained from voicing his sentiments, yet in order to convey his utter disgust he assumed a sort of Napoleonic attitude at the plate. ... [illegible]

... he decided he could put his ability to better advantage in another line. In all sincerity he announced his retirement, and went so far as to make a farewell speech at Detroit. In his oration he thanked the fans for the great courtesy they had always shown him, and wound up sarcastically by saying that he was sorry he couldn't accept an urgent invitation to go under the grand stand and get his block knocked off.

While many of the fans had at various times been sore at Jack over decisions that worked to the detriment of the home team, all of them regretted his determination to quit.

"Forget it and come back in the spring!" was the almost unanimous reply to Jack's speech.

Everything moved along nicely until about the eighth inning that day, when Jack gave a close one against the home boys. There was only a mild protest from the players, but a fan in the bleachers set the crowd, players, and Sheridan himself to laughing, when, in a high tenor voice that carried all over the grounds, he sang:

"We don't care if you never come back! Just take your clothes and go!"

By Frederick W. Monteith

IT is an odd fact—and, by the way, facts are nearly always odd—that though we have reduced the process of acquiring knowledge to be almost an exact science, we have left the method by which we decide how best to utilize that knowledge largely to chance or personal predilection, or to the suggestion or advice of somebody else.

A young man leaving college, or whatever educational institute claims him as her finished product, can trace the extent of his acquaintance with mathematics, languages, ancient and modern, dead or alive, history, geography, the sciences and heaven only knows what else, figured out to two or three decimal places; he can be informed just exactly how he compares with all his fellow students. He will know to a fraction how much more he knows than they, or vice versa, and he will forever be hatefully assured by admiring female friends that the chances of his success in life are in direct ratio to the comparative value of his scholastic equipment. ... The Provincial Department of Agriculture has issued a circular advising farmers to cut all the wild hay available, as feed is likely to be scarce during the coming winter and prices obtainable correspondingly high. Even in those sections of the country where the grain crops are good, the absence of early rainfall has resulted in the tame hay crop being lighter than usual. In those sections which have suffered severely from scarcity of moisture the hay has suffered the fate of the grain. The prospect seems to be that hay will be worth much more money than usual after the feeding season commences. Fortunately, the absence of early rain which is accountable for the shortage of the hay crop has left many sloughs dry which in other years were filled with water. These are now standing thick with splendid wild hay, the moisture in the bottom land having induced an earlier and more vigorous growth than occured on higher land and even on land from which slough hay is usually cut. The farmer in Central and Northern Alberta will therefore be able this year to cut a paying crop on land which ordinarily produces nothing. The farmer in the outlying settlement should be able to profit more largely than than others from the shortage of the hay crop. Being isolated, he will have fewer competitors for the hay growing on the unoccupied wild land around him. Ordinarily the man on the frontier farms is at a disadvantage through being far from market. This year he will derive an advantage rather than a disadvantage from this circumstance. He will have more wild land to cut over than if he were located nearer market and therefore in a more thickly settled district. The prospect is that the price will be high enough to make it profitable for him, even despite the long haul to market.—Bulletin.

Goes to Scaffold Without A Word

No Confession of Crime for which He was Executed Made by King

(Edmonton, Aug. 2nd.)

For the murder of Joseph Hindahl, near Millet, on March 10th, 1907, William Oscar King this morning paid the penalty on the gallows at the Fort Saskatchewan [illegible], with [illegible]. The drop [illegible] at 7 [illegible] and death was [illegible].

The condemned man made no confession of the crime, and bore himself to the end without evidence of deep feeling. In his cell last night under the eyes of the death watch [illegible] from eleven o'clock until five. Two ministers of the Lutheran church for which he expressed a preference, were with him the greater part of the night. At six o'clock this morning at his expressed wish the sacrament was administered to him. He breakfasted and twenty minutes before the hour appointed for the execution was led from his cell to the scaffold in the carpenter shop of the barracks. Here he had a few minutes further conversation with his spiritual advisers.

Unassisted, he mounted the scaffold with steady step and penitent demeanour, and took his place on the death trap. When all was in readiness he was questioned by the sheriff whether he had anything to say or any reason to give why the sentence should not be executed. He began to speak in a low tone of voice, in German, his native tongue, and in a rambling way of things he had done which troubled his conscience, but which had no connection with the crime for which he was to be executed. While he was speaking the attendant ministers commenced to repeat the Lord's prayer. King bowed his head in silence knowing the moment had come. Halfway through the petition the trap was released.

Death was pronounced to have occured instantaneously by the jail physician, Dr. Aylen, of Fort Saskatchewan. The neck was broken by the fall. The body was cut down a few seconds later and a formal inquest held with Dr. E. A. Braithwaite, of Edmonton, as coroner. The jury were [illegible] Lang, W. Taylor, P. E. Taylor, J. Smith, A. McLennan and P. Fulkerton, all of Fort Saskatchewan.

The only other present at the execution were Hangman Holmes, a guard of Mounted police, the two Lutheran ministers, Rev. S. Schulz, of Edmonton, and Rev. Mr. Schloss, of Bruderheim, and Sheriff W. S. Robertson.

The body will be given burial in the yard of the [illegible] alongside that of the other [illegible] King, who was hung in 1905 for the murder of a companion in the Peace river country.

Two written communications were left by King, one to the Salvation Army, whose representatives visited him at the jail, and one to the Mounted police. These letters were written in German, and in remarkably good language. In their preparation, King spent the greater part of his last two days in the death cell.

In his letter to the Salvation Army he thanked the organization for the interest it had taken in him and displayed a really penitent spirit through making no denial of his guilt or any confession. The visits of the Army officer had done him a great deal of good. He spoke of his wife and children and wished to state that he had forgiven them for unfaithfulness to him. He hoped that his children would shun evil ways and live a different life from that which he had. He hoped that his wife would not sin.

Writing to the R. N. W. M. P. he made confession of a number of petty crimes which he had committed while at large in Edmonton. He had, among other things, stolen a couple of bicycles, one of them from the curb on Jasper avenue in front of the Bank of Commerce, and sold them at Edmonton second-hand stores.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON

The Merchant Prince of England

The first time that Sir Thomas Lipton came to America was in 1865 as a stowaway in an old fashioned little tramp steamer, and when the vessel neared port he was busily engaged in shoveling coal into the furnaces. The latest time was in 1903 when a whole nation held him in honor as a valiant and true sportsman making his third brave but vain attempt to take a silver cup back to England. On this occasion he lived like a prince on his steamer "Erin," surrounded by his fleet of thirty-three boats—steamers, houseboats, barges, tugs, cruisers, steam launches, gigs, jolly boats and dinghies—maintained at his expense and manned by over two hundred men.

Sir Thomas was born in Ireland, but spent his early years in Scotland; his education was a hurried, unconventional, picked-up variety, and at fifteen, with rosy dreams, he ran away from home, smuggled himself into a steamer and came to New York. His eight dollars did not last long, and after working in the rice fields of South Carolina, driving a street car in New Orleans, canvassing for a crayon portrait concern, stealing rides on freight cars and making a day-by-day living as best he could, went back two years later to Glasgow, empty of purse but rich in experience.

The prodigal was received with open arms, and with £100 of his father's savings he opened a little meat and provision store. He introduced American ideas, worked as he says, "twenty five hours a day," and advertised to the limit of his ingenuity. One day, seven of the leanest, gauntest, hungriest men in the kingdom paraded the town in Indian file bearing on their backs the legend "We are going to Lipton's." Next day seven of the fattest men that could be found walked the streets proclaiming in large letters "We have been to Lipton's." Meanwhile the proprietor slept under the counter.

This little shop in High street was the beginning of Lipton's 500 stores throughout England, his fruit farms in Kent, bakeries in Glasgow, the greatest tea plantations in the world in Ceylon, his curing factories in Liverpool, his candy manufactory in London, his fruit trees in Georgia, and his other vast industries, giving employment to ten thousand people, and having made for their owner a fortune of $50,000,000 and an income of $7.50 a minute. He gave £25,000 for the Jubilee Memorial dinner to the poor of London, and his check seemed little to him when his eyes filled with tears at the sight of 310,000 poor people eating as his guests. Not till later did the world know that it was his gift; for the only thing he never advertises is his charity.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1909, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.

Wheat 100,000,000

Ottawa, July 30th.—W. J. White, inspector of U. S. agencies, in making a report to the immigration department regarding the crop situation in the prairie provinces, says: "After an extended trip through the wheat fields in central Saskatchewan interviewing farmers and dealers, I am inclined to think the total wheat crops for the three provinces will be one hundred million bushels. Cool weather is filling out the yield. The oat crop requires rain, and hay in many districts is scarce. The wheat crops alone along the various lines is good, excepting portions of southern Manitoba and southern Saskatchewan.

BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

SIR WILFRID LAURIER

The Premier of Canada

By sheer force of ability and the compelling power of character, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has reached the highest position in Canadian politics, and won a name that "must live in the annals of the British Empire." He has overridden obstacles that would have daunted a man of less virile genius and patriotism. Though French was his ancestry and language and Catholicism his religion, he has become the leader of the destinies of a great English-speaking nation, the larger part of whose people are Protestants.

He was born in St. Lin, Quebec, in 1841 of a family of rebels who fought bravely under Papineau in the revolt of 1837. From the little country school where his teacher, a Scotchman, spurred his ambition and powerfully influenced his life, he passed to L'Assomption College and in 1864, after completing his course in law, entered the Bar. When he made his début in politics in 1871 as a member of the Quebec Assembly his magic eloquence, the fearlessness, strength and finality of his words, and the mastery by which he brought order out of chaos, light out of darkness, thrilled his audience.

Three years later he resigned from the Legislature and was returned to the House of Commons on the overthrow of the Macdonald government. In 1876 he became minister of inland revenue, and two years later changes in politics deprived him of this position. He was the acknowledged leader of the Liberals who were the Opposition party until 1896 when after eighteen years of waiting, the reins of government again came into their hands and in the first flush of triumph they made him Premier.

His statesmanship has been broad, liberal, far-sighted; his patriotism and his love of liberty are manifest in every act and word. He loves and cherishes the British Empire, and glories in the part that Canada takes in it; but as a Power of great possibility, sharing with the United States the golden future of the American continent, he demands of England and the world the recognition of Canada, not as a babe in the swaddling clothes of a colony but as a full grown nation of virility and assured triumph.

Tall, erect, with a handsome presence, clean-shaven face, clear, penetrating blue eyes, a firm mouth, broad shoulders, a brow masterful and dignified, a voice soft, sonorous and ever with the suggestion of unexpended reserve, a smile gentle and soothing as a benediction, with a courtesy and kindness that surround him as an aura—this is Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Canada's greatest orator and statesman.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1909, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.

The Latest Greatest and Up-to-datest system of advertising adopted by the enterprising business management of the well known establishment of Craig Brothers has certainly caused wide comment and considerable favor among the buying public of this section.

When Craig Brothers first announced that they would give away absolutely Free the beautiful $450.00 Upright Piano Grand Piano which is upon exhibition in their store, much curiosity was aroused as to HOW they could afford, from a business standpoint, to do such a thing, but when it was learned that they would give ONE PIANO VOTE with every cent paid for any article in their store also that the Piano was to be given absolutely Free to the person presenting the greatest number of these piano votes to them on Dec. 24 it looked like an extremely novel and most liberal advertising method. The earnestness with which our buying public have been "going after" these piano votes more than makes good our prophecy that it would be a "merry strife." This novel advertising campaign, the ever increasing crowds, the many splendid values which they are offering daily has made their name a household name and a mecca for the bargain lovers of this community. Craig Bros. are to be congratulated upon the thoroughness of their business foresight and the citizens of Vermilion should feel that they have all reason to be proud of the fact of having an establishment conducted upon such liberal and true business principles within our gates.

Vermilion After Land Titles Office

Movement on Foot in South for Additional Offices Vermilion Likely to Get One for North

At the present time there are only two land title offices in Alberta situated at Calgary and Edmonton. A strong movement is on foot in the southern portion of the province for the opening of land title offices at Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. In the event of new districts being organized by the authorities, the movement which is being pushed by Vermilion for a land titles office stands in a fair way towards meeting with success.

The town has been after a good many things and will keep going till it gets everything within reason.

Farmers are all busy haying. The crop of hay while good is not so abundant as in former years.

The Masonic picnic to Craig's Lake, Monday was a most enjoyable outing and largely attended.

The Sunday School convention of Vermilion District opens this (Wednesday) evening with a mass meeting in the Church of Christ. Thursday and Friday the sessions are to be held at Mannville.

Riley Bumped At Convention

Henry Scott Nominated by Gleichen Liberals

Calgary, July 28.—E. H. Riley was rejected by the Liberals of Gleichen, who met here last night in a convention to choose their candidate for the coming by-election.

Henry Scott, president of the Gleichen Liberal Association, was given the nomination, after three ballots were taken.

There were 50 delegates present and before any nominations were received the following resolution was passed unanimously:

"That the Liberals of Gleichen, in convention assembled, take this opportunity to place themselves on record as unreservedly in favor of the Liberal administration at Edmonton under the premiership of the Hon. A. L. Sifton, and pledge themselves to endorse only the candidature of a Liberal who is prepared to support the government under the present leadership."

Despite the passing of the above resolution Mr. Riley allowed his name to go before the convention, but came out flatfooted in the fifteen minutes allowed candidates before balloting and stated that he could not pledge himself to support the government under Premier Sifton as the latter had not stated what his policy was to be.

"What do you send a man to the Legislature for? To be a dummy?" he shouted, heatedly. "I will not say I will support Mr. Sifton. He has not said yet what his policy is to be, and I say again that if I am elected I intend to oppose the Waterways road first, last and all the time until it is rooted out, both, stock and barrel."

Altogether five names were placed before the convention. They were Frank Moorhouse, Roy Cowan, of Langdon, A. J. McArthur, Calgary, and E. H. Riley the ex-member, whose resignation over the Alberta and Great Waterways question and taking over of the reins of government by Chief Justice A. L. Sifton made a bye-election necessary.

Mr. Moorhouse withdrew but the others went to the poll. The first result was Scott 25, McArthur 14, Cowan 9, Riley 9. The last two named were then dropped and the second vote resulted in Scott polling 32 and McArthur 21 votes.

Mr. Riley did not drop out of his own accord and would not pledge himself to support any of the other candidates when asked by the chairman before the vote was taken. [illegible] Last night he said that he will oppose Scott and will run as an independent candidate.

Welcome To Sir Wilfrid Laurier

Town Does Itself Proud. Great Concourse of People at Depot to Greet Canada's Great Statesman. Hours Stop Made. Civic Address Read by the Mayor.—A Notable [illegible]

"Best Address of Tour" Said Sir Wilfrid

At 11.45 a.m. M[illegible] the special train bearing Sir Wilfrid Laurier and party together with some fifty prominent citizens of Edmonton pulled up at C. N. R. depot and as it stopped Mayor Stephens boarded the train and shortly after emerged accompanied by Sir Wilfrid, who was given a great ovation. He was escorted to the special dais which had been erected near the station, followed by several other members of the party, amongst whom were Hon. Frank Oliver, minister of the interior; Hon. E. A. McDonald; Premier A. L. Sifton and Hon. Geo. Graham.

After the cheering had subsided and the party had taken their seats on the beautifully decorated dias, the Mayor read a splendid address of Welcome which Sir Wilfrid characterized as among the best he had been presented with. A bouquet was presented to Sir Wilfrid by little Janet Ryan, daughter of Dr. Ryan, the prime minister saying as he gave the customary salutation, "The fairest flower of them [illegible]" [illegible] also the recipient of a similar presentation.

Sir Wilfrid spoke first and referred to the very great pleasure it gave him to receive such a cordial and hearty reception as had been accorded to him by the people of Vermilion. [illegible] [illegible]

With the Horses

HOW is it that the trotters of today, even at their best, have short careers? The seasons are not as long as they were twenty years ago. Very few horses begin to race before July and they generally quit in the middle of October. In the old days they began in May and raced till the end of November. In those old days horses raced year after year, some of them as long as six, seven and even for ten years and won races. Now a campaigner who can put in three successful seasons is a wonder. How is this? Has the breed degenerated in endurance what it has gained in speed? Do our modern methods of training sap the vitality of our horses? The fact remains, and it is a serious one, that our seasons are shorter, that the horses are sooner outclassed and that as a consequence a racing stable has every year to have new racing material if it is to keep in the swim.

One of the most illustrious members of the old time brigade who won from the beginning of her long and brilliant racing career, and who is a bright and shining example of longevity and victory, is the mare, Flora Temple. No trotter in modern times has ever approached her records, and they so far exceed that of all other campaigners in the history of the trotting turf that they are well worthy of a short reproduction as an object lesson to breeders, owners and trainers of what was done in the early years of the sport. We do not believe that the breed has deteriorated, but it is far onerous today to what it was then, the big question for the trainer of today is to find out how he can prolong the paying careers of the horses in his stable. [illegible] her 2, defeating Reindeer in 2:30¾, 2:32½ and 2:30½.

The campaign of 1859 was the culminating triumph of her great career, though her last winning race was in 1861. In 1859 she won twenty-two races. She began the season on May 31 and her last victory of the season was on December 1. Here was a straight campaign of six months. In that campaign she met the best trotters of the time, Princess, Ethan Allen, the Cook Honest Anne, and George M. Patchen. Her ever memorable race was at Kalamazoo, October 15, 1859, when she defeated Princess and Honest Anne, taking the last heat in 2:19¾, winning the trotting record. She won fourteen races in 1860 and five in 1861. Here is a career of ten years on the trotting turf with races from one to three miles each. The seasons went from April to December. Her career is certainly an object lesson and is well worth study by the breeders and trainers of the present time.

Stallions that are good gaited, fast natural trotters and have been endowed by their ancestors with the right kind of an inheritance, if given an opportunity will transmit high class speed ability and other race winning qualities, whether trained and raced to fast records or not. The same is true of mares as producers. Every one who has studied the trotting breeding problem, even though but slightly, knows that to be a fact. The chief advantages of training are, it improves the physical condition, trained possess all the qualities upon which speed depends.

L. C. Webb, of Macon, the president of the Michigan Trotting Horse Breeders' Association has just sent two likely youngsters to Peter V. Johnson at Kalamazoo to be trained. The pair are Mabel Director, a three-year-old filly [illegible]

OUTDOOR SPORT AND ZAM-BUK

Every athlete, every ball-player, every swimmer, every canoeist, every man or woman who loves outdoor life and exercise, should keep a box of Zam-Buk handy.

Zam-Buk is a purely herbal preparation, which, as soon as applied to cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, blisters, etc., sets up highly beneficial operations. First, its antiseptic properties render the wound free from all danger from blood poisoning. Next, its soothing properties relieve and ease the pain. Then its rich, herbal balms penetrate the tissue, and set up the wonderful process of healing. Barbed wire scratches, insect stings, skin diseases, such as eczema, heat rashes, ringworm, babies' heat sores, chafed places, sore feet—all come within Zam-Buk's power. It also eases and cures piles. All druggists and stores. Avoid imitations.

The workmanship on this head is very fine, and is undoubtedly a portrait of the King represented in the conventional style of the period. There is also an excellent example of a bronze incense burner with a kneeling figure of Amasis, II. of the 26th dynasty, about B.C. 540. In front the figure is a short hieroglyphic inscription which reads: "The good god, Khnumab-[illegible], beloved of the gods, son of the Sun giving life forever." In the same case as this sport are some prehistoric vases, flint implements, and other objects of the pre-dynastic period.

The Biter Bit

"Please help a blind man," said a fellow with green goggles, as he held a tin cup toward the line of people issuing from the Union Depot.

"I always help the blind," said one of two young men who were passing, and he stopped and took out a five-dollar bill; "can you get a quarter out of this?"

"I guess so," said the blind man, fishing out a handful of change and counting out four dollars and seventy-five cents.

"Well, John," said the benevolent young man's companion, as they walked on, "you're a bigger fool than I took you to be."

"Am I?" said John.

"Yes, you are, that fellow's no more blind than I am. How could he tell that was a five-dollar bill?"

"Blamed if I know," said John, innocently; "but he must be mighty near-sighted not to see that it was a counterfeit."

There are none so blind as those who will not see.

How frequently a man, who asks for a certain brand of cigar, will take just what is handed him without insisting on the smoke of his choice. And how frequently his easy going indifference results in his being handed a counterfeit—a cigar which has no claim to quality of any kind but cheapness of manufacture.

It is different with a BUCK-EYE smoker.

He knows what he wants, and he sees that he gets.

You ask why?

Skyscrapers While You Wait

(By William Allen Johnston)

IT is a marvelous thing how the dreams of Arabian nights are today made realities. Manhattan nights are quite as magical.

This morning you may pass by a street corner surrounded by a board fence from the interior of which comes the staccato thump of rock drills. Another day and the fence is down, spindling iron columns are pointing skyward out of the pit.

Two weeks pass and you are looking upward at some daredevil of an ironworker who is riding an iron beam several stories up above the streets. In three months more you are elevated into a steam heated, electric lighted twelfth story office suite and look down from where you formerly looked up at the sky and wondered. Imagine a massive granite-and-brick, fire-proofed skyscraper covering two-thirds of a block, building upward at the rate of a story a week! A story a week means a completed story, complete even as to inside furnishings and ready for immediate occupancy.

It sounds impossible. Strangers won't believe it till they see the building grow before their eyes. But this rate of construction is an actuality today; and there is no telling just what greater speed the terrific demand of this minute-expanding, distance-shrinking, step-lively age will bring forth.

The sky-scraper is altogether an American institution. Its express speed of construction is also exclusively American, an expression of American enterprise, American inventiveness, American impatience and daredeviltry, American workmen.

Some few years ago a ship-load of Pennsylvania steel and American workers landed at Cape Town and commenced at Johannesburg the erection of the first modern steel-frame structure in South Africa.

The work started at the beginning of the hot season, and when, after six months, the residents of the city returned from their mountain resorts they found a completed building awaiting them, and at first refused to believe [illegible]

[illegible]

ed, extension trucks, and is unloaded all around the edge of the rectangular pit. Each length is marked to go to a certain place. The drivers for the most part are ex-ironworkers and know how to handle steel as well as horses. The derricks are electrically run and move silently, swiftly, steadily. The spasmodic jerking of the puffing steam upright engine is absent. The big booms swing, dip, raise their many ton loads with all the precision and delicacy of human hands. Just think of swinging a heavy girder into a flange union with a play on either side of little more than a quarter of an inch.

With each derrick there's a crew of seven men, comprising a "pusher" or squad boss, a derrick-man, and five over-head ironworkers. Over all the squads is the iron foreman, darting here and there, looking up and down, seeing the whole process and every part of it.

The mighty work goes on continuously by day and night. One shift—on a big job it numbers fifty men—relieves another. There must be no stopping, minutes count. At night yellow and white incandescent lights sputter over a ceaseless din and travail. Now and then an ambulance rings its way into the congested side-street. For there are accidents. They cannot be altogether avoided.

From the edge of the pit you see an iron beam roll lazily out of a pile. Its motion is slight and noiseless, seemingly inconsequential, but it hit a man's leg and stripped it to the bone. Two beams meet, slowly, with velvet-like contact; but a man's fingers intervened, and they were nipped off. And metal will break. There's the foreman, now, bending white-faced over the broken link of a derrick chain. It is an inch thick [illegible] but within there was a [illegible] the steel, leaving only a thin circumference of metal to hold it together. Luckily, when it snapped, no [illegible] him is a favorite at bridgemen's dances and has been known to wear and grace a frock-coat. They make no serious complaint over the new order of things [illegible] the rush of the work. "Sure," [illegible] one, "it's all right only it's over so many days before you get your second wind."

Said another: "This going up at a story a day interferes with me social life. I'm that Thirteenth Street building there was a [illegible] and one day I got to talking with a pretty maid—through a window. Next day I had to talk down to her, and next day I had to yell to her, and in two days more I had to say good-by.

"'Good-by,' says she, 'Sorry to see you go; but I'll introduce you to my friend Katie who works on the tenth floor.'"

Every time two stories of steel are completed the derricks must be raised. This has been slow, cumbersome work in the past. Only a year ago it meant a day's work. Now they do it in from thirty minutes to two hours. In the old way they rigged a stiff-legged derrick above, which grappled down and lifted up the boom derrick. In other words, they raised a derrick with a derrick. Now they make the derrick raise itself. To a layman this sounds like raising one's self by the boots. But it can be done, even with an eight-ton, ninety-foot derrick. A young iron foreman solved the problem one day when his company gave him just twelve days to put up the frame of a twelve-story building.

"It's easy enough," said he. "You just fold up the derrick and lash boom and mast together. Then detach the main 'fall' or hoisting cable from the boom and give it a clutch around the mast about one third of the length from the top.

"Now start your winding drums down there in the basement, and what's going to happen? Why, the cable pulls the whole derrick up and [illegible] we make new moorings."

They wait for nothing and obey precedents in the building of the express sky-scraper. [illegible]

Owing to the great demand for Railway labor, and the difficulty that is being experienced in Railway Construction in securing the number of laborers they require, authority has been received from the Department of the Interior to grant protection to Homestead and Preemption entrants until the first day of April 1911, upon the following conditions:

Application for such protection must be made to the Agent of Dominion Lands for the District within which the land is situated, who [illegible] applicant has perfected his entry by actual residence upon his land for at least thirty days.

"Moose" Philips of Vermilion District, Figures that he made $120 an Hour for 16 Hours by Waiting for a Claim [illegible] Aug 3. One hundred [illegible] twenty dollars an hour for [illegible] there are few men in [illegible] today that [illegible] an income, but "Moose" Philips, a well known [illegible] Vermilion district, [illegible] pulled down [illegible] the 16 hours that [illegible] spent on the steps of the Dominion land office last night.

"Moose" Phillips spent 16 hours on the land office steps last night, and at nine o'clock this morning filed on a homestead north of Vermilion that is valued at $2,000. Of course he did not count the two days spent in travelling to Edmonton and return, nor did he reckon in the [illegible] the three years that he will have to spend in proving up [illegible] quarter section, in spite of the fact that the homesteader who cancelled the quarter, has already spent nearly that length of time on the land, and made considerable improvement. "Moose" was satisfied to figure out his salary at $120 per hour for the 16 hours and boasted to the passersby of the large income he was drawing for the sleepless hours he was to spend on the cold steps of the land office on Jasper.

Down in Vermilion, Phillips is known as the "Moose Hunter" owing to his record for hunting and killing more moose than anyone else in the neighborhood. He has lived there for three years. Hearing that a neighbor was about to cancel a valuable homestead, because of his inability to carry on the improvements, he took the first train to Edmonton, and pitched his camp at five o'clock last evening on the land office steps. For his long vigil through the night he was rewarded this morning by being able to file on the coveted homestead.

The special crop reporter of the Winnipeg Free Press spent a day last week driving through the grain country at Vermilion, and is authority for the statement that the Vermilion grain crop along with that of Battleford is the best he has inspected in the West.

A. E. Howard of Vancouver is in town on a business trip in connection with the subdivision of the town controlled by his company. Mr. Howard expressed great delight at the growth of the town since his last visit a few months ago and the general activity in business circles on all sides. "Your crop is indeed a bummer," he says, "and beats anything I have seen."

It will be learned with regret that the buyer for the British American Elevator at this point, B. Wilson, is not likely to be on the Vermilion market this season. Mr. Wilson will be removed to Innisfree.

A. K. Dowar of the Vermilion Mill of Wards [illegible] is busy unloading machinery for the new flour mill. The huge steam boiler and smoke stack is unloaded and another car is on the track.

Ferrel and Walker have completed a portion of sidewalk along Oliver Ave which forms a connecting link between that portion of the town north of the track, and the scattered inhabitants of the south. This sidewalk was an urgent necessity owing to the elevation of the railway grade and the spring freshets.

Important Transfer In Real Estate

The Most Valuable Vacant Corner In Town Sold to Nainmao Business Man

PROPERTY TO BE IMPROVED

A real estate deal of considerable importance to the town was put through Saturday last by Craig and Falkins whereby the corner lot on Main Street and Bulyea Ave, opposite the general store of Craig Bros., was sold to J. W. Coburn of Nanaimo, B. C. While not at liberty to mention the price paid for the corner the Standard can state that it was a heavy figure. The lot in question is without question the most valuable vacant location in the town and there is no doubt that Mr. Coburn has a definite object in view regarding his purchase. Further than the statement that it would be immediately improved, no further information is available at present.

Mr. Coburn arrived in Vermilion Saturday morning, negotiated his purchase and left again the same night. He is a well known business man in the coast province and we understand is largely connected with the lumbering industry.

... ilsonian system of protected manufacturing cities when he invented the steam engine. Why is that an evident fact? Because the modern railroad is too costly an investment, and too expensive from an operative standpoint not to enjoy the necessity of what is known in railway circles as the "return haul." In other words, no railroad ... agricultural products from the farms to the cities. If it did, the expense of moving the freight cars both ways would be absorbed from the farm products. Thus the necessity of a "return haul" forces the development of industrial cities. This is what occurred in the United States between 1850 and 1870, this is just what is destined to occur in Canada between the present day and the middle of the Twentieth century."

CRIME IS RARE IN JAPAN

THE Japanese police have an easier time than their confreres in Europe. Crime in the land of the chrysanthemum is almost limited to theft and tragedies, or serious cases of bodily harm resulting from street brawls. It is next to impossible, the chief of the Tokio police says, for a murder to be committed without someone hearing of it at the moment. This is due to the fact that the houses are composed of paper and bamboo, so any noise in a house occasioned by robbers or assassins would not fail to attract the attention of neighbors.

Death Struggle at Gravelotte

(From the narrative of Driver Jos. Maus, late German Field Artillery)

A month after France had declared war on Prussia, three of the most terrible battles of modern times had been fought. These were decided near Metz—Courcelles on August 14th, 1870; Mars-la-Tours on the 16th, and Gravelotte on the 18th. In each contest the French were defeated. The King of Prussia personally commanded at Gravelotte, where the fighting lasted twelve hours. Nearly half a million men were on the field, and the losses were unparalleled in modern history. The French casualties numbered 20,000, and the German 25,000. The fiercest of the fighting took place on the wooded slopes of Gravelotte, and it was there that the survivor who tells this story served with the 4th Battery, 9th Brigade, 10th Army Corps.

VERY soon after marching from Cologne with my battery I took part in a battle which was considered one of the most desperate and deadly of modern times. That was the battle of Worth, fought on August 6th. Only a few days earlier the French had sworn that they would soon be in Berlin; yet now, in spite of the most wonderful valour on their part, they had been defeated and thousands were slain, while thousands more were prisoners in our hands.

Some, indeed, were going to Berlin, but how differently from the glorious march of triumph of which they had spoken! When, after the long hours of battle on the field of Worth, nearly twenty thousand men on both sides had been lost as fighters, I thought there could be no more tremendous conflict than that; yet within a fortnight I shared in that deadly fight on Gravelotte's slopes, which ended in such stupendous losses that the whole world was appalled and stricken to the heart.

The tiny, unknown village of Waterloo gives the name to England's most famous modern battle on land; and little hamlets have become immortalised because from their names are known three of the fiercest struggles of the Franco-German War—Courcelles, Vionville, and Gravelotte, all near Metz, a fortified city in Lorraine which was held by Marshal Bazaine and an immense army. That army was hemmed in by the triumphant troops of Prussia.

Germany, like England, has her Balaclava. Your own immortal Six Hundred charged the Russian cavalry and artillery; five thousand of the flower of my country's horsemen hurled themselves, at Vionville, upon artillery and infantry. With you it was only the Light Brigade that swept into the Valley of Death, with us it was both light and heavy cavalry who cut down the gunners and the infantry of France.

Our cavalry silenced the guns which had been slaughtering our infantry. They swept past the batteries into an open space; then the French infantry riddled them with bullets and the French cavalry swooped on the survivors of the charge. Does not history tell that when the King, with heavy heart, visited the battlefield the day after the fight, he knew that the white road which led to the enemy's position was composed of the fallen bodies of his gallant cuirassiers? Five thousand Prussian cavalry had hurled themselves upon a French army corps six times their number.

Gravelotte succeeded the furious battle of Vionville, where each side had lost sixteen thousand men in battle. Neither side had any real proof of victory at Vionville, but all that was changed on the wooded slopes, where with my battery, I fought on the ever famous August 18th.

In the early morning—4 o'clock it was—we were roused by the trumpets and bugles. Who was there amongst us who did not ask himself the question "Will you awake to-morrow?" There was one other question, too, and that was "Have you got anything to drink?" They put that to me, because I knew the French language, having lived two years in Paris, and I answered that I had, so the men of my battery drank some wine before the battle began, and they fought no worse for it. The drink warmed them up and gave them courage, and when the effect of it had worn off—well, they had then the courage of battle itself. All soldiers when they are in the thick of a fight for life and death, and know they must continue to the bitter end, are brave, even if it is only the valor of despair. As for me, I almost ceased to feel or think. I was only a bit of a vast killing machine, and played my little part mechanically.

I often think that you English people form a wrong opinion of the German soldier and his conduct in the Franco-German war. We went out because of our love of war, but because of our love of the Fatherland and our duty to the Kaiser, and it was not every German who, even on that morning of Gravelotte when most of us had become used to war and its horrors, had the right battle spirit within him. There was amongst us a gunner from Cologne who, before the battle began, burst into tears and spoke of his wife and children he had left behind him on the other side of the frontier and whom he believed he would never see again.

Our captain saw the man, and, turning to us all, he said: "My children, it is no good crying. We must be brave and fight like good soldiers, cheered by the knowledge that the harder we fight the surer we are of victory, and that the sooner we win the sooner we shall be home again." That heartened us ... and we all laughed at the gunner ... that he stopped crying ...

[illegible]

... thud and a loud groan, and the next I saw was that the gunner was still standing by the breech; but his hands were no longer on the metal. A French shot had torn them both away.

The giant was removed to the rear, and the surgeons managed to save his life. He went back to Germany, and the King gave him a special pension and commanded that he should always have a servant to wait upon him. Many times afterwards I saw him lighting a cigar with an artificial hand, and I compared his appearance then with his looks when he was my comrade on the wooded slopes of Gravelotte.

From the early morning of that August day we were at the guns, firing all the time, but not always in the same place, because an order would suddenly come for us to change our ground a little, to pour more shell into the masses of the French. I do not know how often we limbered up and galloped to a fresh position, nor how many shells we fired at the enemy, and I cannot tell, nor can anyone, how many of the French were killed and maimed by my battery. It must have been a very large number, for even one shell bursting amongst a crowd of human beings will cause havoc that is too dreadful to picture.

It seemed amazing that guns could be fired so hard and so long, and that ammunition could be found for their greedy appetites. Yet they had to be fed, and somehow the ammunition was found not only for my own battery but also for others ... battle smoke ... from other batteries, black, sweating and sweating with the work, would rush up for shot and shell, so that they could help to give death his dreadful harvest. They had already ...

... hard to distinguish friends from foes ... and at night it was impossible to do so. A very inferno of fire was raging when at ten o'clock the cannonading stopped, except for the little isolated fights.

Villages which in the early morning had looked sweet and peaceful were now devastated and burning, and by the lurid flames my battery marched down Gravelotte's wooded slopes and over the blood-sodden fields and roads. In that awful darkness the weary horses dashed their iron-shod hoofs against the mangled forms of the dead, and the heavy wheels of the limbers and gun wagons followed close upon the iron-shod hoofs. There was no help for it because the artillery had to drive straight across the fields which were thick with the fallen French and Germans who had fought so furiously against each other. On every side there rose the pitiful cries of the wounded for help or mercy, but we could pause for neither.

"Such is war—woe to the vanquished!" and it was woe indeed on the dreadful night which followed that day of appalling carnage.

[illegible]

... be found to take charge of them. Day after day train-loads of wounded were dispatched, thousands of Germans going back to the Fatherland for which they had fought so nobly ...

[illegible]

... Lucky indeed were the men who were killed outright, or whose wounds were so severe that they brought a speedy end, for so vast was the number of the maimed during the three days' fighting that not even the immense resources of the medical staff could deal with them, and the wounded had to be left where they had fallen or crawled. On the 19th, men were collected and placed in churches, houses, buildings of any sort, and in the open air, and many of them had to remain unattended for three whole days and nights until the battle was fought and won. Only then could the exhausted surgeons ... those who were still living.

I saw other things besides the gruesome sights at Gravelotte more than I can remember now, but I recollect that we had to destroy many of the peasants who took up arms against us.

There was a miller ...

It was found that the granting of same would be contrary to provisions of building By-law and council could not grant same without rescinding the said by-law.

A communication re meeting of U. of A. municipalities to be held at Wetaskiwin Sept 6 and 7 was read and a motion passed appointing Mayor and Secy-Treas. to attend this important gathering.

The secy was instructed to draw by-law or amendment, authorizing a charge—to be decided upon—for all buildings to be erected in the town.

Accounts covering expenditures on side-walks, streets and a number of monthly accounts were duly passed.

The B. of P. works was instructed to call for tenders for installing pump and proper bottom casing in school well.

The meeting then adjourned.

A Unique Salad

THIS [illegible] recipe is entirely of my own experimental cooking. It really will not take so long to prepare for the table as it takes me to write it out.

This is the introductory sentence to a letter which has pleased me so much I long for room, that I may share the pleasure with my dearly beloved constituents. Failing this, I lay the lovely outer leaves aside and come to the heart of the salad.

Original Nebraska Salad

One large crisp cucumber, green and fresh, three or four small white stalks of celery, six firm smooth, ripe tomatoes, one small firm cabbage, celery seed, parsley, blanched pimentos.

Peel, seed and chop the cucumber fine. Put it and the minced celery in an earthenware dish and sprinkle with a scant teaspoonful of salt. Scald and peel tomatoes. Put all these ingredients on the ice to chill. When ready to serve cut the tomatoes into halves, remove seeds and pulp, [illegible] [illegible]

A Salad Dressing.

Yolks of two eggs, heaping tablespoonful of sugar, a quarter teaspoonful each of mustard and pepper, butter the size of an egg, with one-quarter cup of vinegar. Cook in a double boiler.

Use this for dressing the salad for which recipe is given. Or you may substitute any [illegible] dressing you prefer.

E. H. M. (Red Cloud, Neb.).

I have purposely held back the Nebraska recipe until tomatoes and cucumbers should be within the reach of the housewife of moderate means.

The formula is unique and attractive.

Buttermilk Recipes Wanted

Can you get for me the German recipe for buttermilk soup and for buttermilk pop? [illegible]

Our able and willing corps of German hausfrauen will see that you do not ask in vain. I have never seen either of the dishes (?) for which you are looking.

"A maid's sleeping room."

A Dry Cleanser

Can you tell me in next Sunday's paper how to dry clean striped silk and cotton portieres at home? I cannot wash them, as the colors run, and it would cost more than the curtains to send them to the cleaner's and have the work done.

J. [illegible] (Washington, D. C.).

Had you written, including stamped envelope, I should have let you know sooner how impracticable it would be to attempt an answer in next Sunday's issue. The time had passed before your postcard arrived. If it is not too late to be of service to you I will say that the portieres may be cleaned by putting them, one at a time, into a tub of fine white cornmeal (such as you use in Washington) heated until you can bear to hold your hand comfortably in it. Mix, before heating it, a half cupful of salt with two gallons of the meal, and proceed to add in this proportion to the tub of meal.

Begin with one end of a curtain and treat with the salted meal as if you were washing it in suds, [illegible] in this way. Throw away the gritty meal, lay the cleaned curtain in another tub and sift clean cornmeal all over it and between the folds. Throw a cover over it and set aside while you tackle the second curtain with a fresh supply of salted meal. [illegible] [illegible] If the work be done faithfully the portieres will look clean and fresh after the ironing.

CONSTANT READER (Athens, [illegible]).

I refer the query about cheese pie to housemothers who know what it is.

[illegible]

AS MIGHT have been anticipated by any one who has made the chief domestic problem a careful and often a compulsory study, editorials and letters bearing upon the subject have excited lively interest in those naturally concerned in the debate. The relations of mistress (the modern American "Madam") and maid constitute the vexed question of everyday life in tens of thousands of homes. The bravest and most philosophical of housemothers cannot ignore the moods and tenses of those who, nominally or in reality, carry into execution her orders for the comfort of her family. A sulky housemaid darkens the domestic horizon for her. A slovenly worker throws double responsibility upon the head of the house. [illegible] the machinery and failure on one side in the practice of [illegible] makes a disagreeable jar all along the line. [illegible] my fellow housekeepers will [illegible] the assertion that the tempers and whims of an employee [illegible] housekeeper, cook, governess or [illegible] do affect the happiness of the [illegible] family where these tempers are displayed. Our husbands [illegible] that they are profoundly indifferent [illegible] the moods of their employees. [illegible] as a fellow does his work [illegible] don't care a rush how he feels while doing it. Be philosophical [illegible] Your maid is a machine for which you pay hard cash. Keep it in good running order by feeding and lodging it comfortably, and give yourself no more thought in the matter. Do you suppose I trouble my head with thoughts as to my stenographer's wounded feelings when I have spoken sharply or told her outright that she has not done her work well? Not a bit of it! It is all business. When women learn to run their domestic affairs as men run offices and shops there will be an end to all this worry and everlasting changing of household help. [illegible] The truth is that you women live in a state of virtual slavery [illegible] and all you are afraid of your servants.

He has come so near the truth if he has not arrived at it, [illegible] that we shrink and grow hot in owning that employees have it in their power to change the whole complexion of the day for each of us. Some men we are fearful lest they may spoil [illegible] the season by giving warning [illegible] the aforesaid temper [illegible] offending them because we hate to be uncomfortable. [illegible] to be comfortable [illegible] expresses the long-ing of many another woman. [illegible]

Appropriating a Crest.

There is a restaurant keeper with a few and capacious place on the upper west side about whom a story is going the rounds. This "mine host" makes no secret of the fact that when he arrived in America as a youth he had more fingers and toes than dollars and that it is due to his own industry that he now can command his little army of cooks, waiters and other help. When he opened an addition to his rooms recently his friends were surprised to see a crest emblazoned conspicuously in various parts of the wall. The glass [illegible] the crest.

"I say, Pat," said a friend recently, "where did you get that crest?"

SOME QUAINT ENGLISH.

Portuguese Idea of the Language In a Book of "Learning."

A book as amusing as it is rare is in the library of a Wissahickon student. The work is called "O Novo Guia da Conversacao." It is supposed to instruct the Portuguese in English conversation, and the following, a dialogue headed "For to Ride a Horse," is the kind of English conversation it supplies:

Here is a horse who have a bad looks. Give me another; I will not that. He not will know to march, he is pursy, he is foundered. Don't you are ashamed to give me a jade as like? He is unshoed, he is with nails up; it want to lead to the farrier."

An anecdote in the book is:

"A day came a man to consult this philosopher for to know at o'clock it was one to eat. 'If thou art rich, told him out when you shall wish; if you are poor, when you may do.'"

In the preface the most elegant paragraph is the following:

"We expect then, who the little book (for the care what we wrote him and for her typographical corrections that may be worth the acceptation of the studious persons, and especially of the youth, at which we dedicate him particularly."

The authors of this strange volume are Jose da Fonseca and Pedro Carolino. It would be interesting to know where Pedro and Jose "learned" English.

Satisfied His Curiosity.

The curiosity of the natives of wild countries as to everything belonging to the traveler often leads to amusing situations. Mr. J. W. Wells in "Three Thousand Miles Through Brazil" tells of his visit to one settlement where the only shopkeeper of the place proved very inquisitive. He was a frequent visitor and would carefully examine the few belongings of the traveler. His curiosity was finally punished in a very funny manner.

On one of his visits writes Mr. Wells, he found my bottle of spirits of ammonia on the table and seeing it was something he had not hitherto inspected, he naturally laid hold of it and asked of me, "What is that?"

"Only a medicine," I replied, and with a perhaps unworthy satisfaction I watched him hold it up to the light, look at it all round and finally remove the glass stopper and then take a good sniff.

I had to rush forward to save my precious ammonia, as he staggered and gasped for breath and ejaculated, "I am dying!" By dint of much slapping of his back and dousing of cold water he quickly recovered, but nevermore did he touch any of my things.

After Dinner Oratory.

The fake humorous speaker has an easier career than even the fake eloquent speaker. Yet at any given dinner the orator who passes out more elocution to his hearers has a success almost as instant and splendid as his clowning brother. It is amazing what things people will applaud when they have the courage of each other's ineptitude. They will listen after dinner to anything but reason. They prefer also the old speaker to new ones; they like the familiar taps of humor or eloquence. If they have tasted the brew before, they know what they are going to get. The note of their mood is tolerance, but tolerance of the accustomed, the expected, not tolerance of the novel, the surprising. They wish to be at rest, and what takes their minds means their intellectual repose. They do not wish to climb any great heights to reach the level of the orator.—W. D. Howells in Harper's.

A Queer Relic.

In University college, London, is a singular object that is preserved carefully in a remote gallery inside a glass case, which again is contained in a huge wooden cupboard, the doors of which are locked and the keys in safe custody. The relic which is thus so zealously guarded is described in some notes on the history of the college as the "skeleton" of Jeremy Bentham, "clad in the garments in which he lived," while his head only is stated to have been "mummified." It has always been understood that Bentham's body was embalmed, and in that case it cannot be his mere skeleton which is reposing there under lock and key.

Pat Balanced It.

An Irish soldier attending school, which is compulsory when starting till after an examination has taken place, had great difficulty in bringing a sum to the correct answer.

"You are a shilling out, Magee," said the inspector, "therefore you have failed again."

"Arrah," said Pat, taking a shilling from his pocket, "take this, and it'll make the sum right. Hurrah! Succeeded at last!"

Weather a Dangerous Topic.

Nowitt—Well, there's one thing about the weather; it's always a safe topic of conversation.

Borroughs—I thought it was today when I met Lendham, but when I started to speak of it he said, "Yes, it's unsettled, and that reminds me of that note of yours."

Getting Even.

Mrs. von Blumer—We must have the Biggsbys to dinner. We owe them one.

Von Blumer—Of course. We passed an awful dull evening there, and it is nothing more than right that they should pass one here.

Making It Easy.

"You never allow yourself to read a book until you have read a review of it? Why is that?"

"Well, I prefer to use only predigested mental food."

In Doubt.

In one of Wilkie Collins' published letters he writes:

For the last week while I was finishing the story I galloped along without feeling it, like the old post horses. Do you remember how the fore legs of those post horses quivered, and how their heads drooped when they came to the journey's end? That's me, my dear; that's me. Good gracious, is "me" grammar? Ought it to be "I"? My poor father paid £90 a year for my education, and I give you my sacred word of honor I am not sure whether it is "me" or "I."

Personal Magnetism.

Two men address an assembly on the same topic and in nearly the same words. One is listened to with indifference, if at all, the other stirs in every fiber our being and our souls thrill responsive to his lightest touch. It is not what we hear, nor is it graceful pose or elegant diction; it is nothing comprehensive or tangible, but an invisible, mysterious force which we acknowledge and yield to even against our convictions and reason. This strange attribute is not hereditary, nor can it be acquired.

The Thirsty Elm.

It has been computed that if the leaves of an elm tree sixty feet high were spread out on the ground edge to edge they would cover five acres of land. These leaves, averaging 7,000,000 to a full grown tree, will absorb water to the amount of seven tons during the normal summer day. Were it not for the ingathering by the stomata during the night a few elms would soon draw off all the water from a district.

The Modest Actor.

"Shakespeare took some great risks in his dramatic effects," said the literary analyst.

"He did, indeed," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, with the innocent egotism of genius. "For instance, when he wrote his plays he had no idea that I would be born to see that they were properly produced."

Could Live on Love.

Father—The idea of marrying that young fellow! He couldn't scrape enough money together to buy a square meal.

Daughter—But what difference need that make? We haven't either of us had a bit of appetite for months.

Troubles of a Manager.

Assistant (in menagerie)—Sir, it's raining.

Keeper—Good heavens! Don't waste a minute, but take in that zebra. His color runs.—London Standard.

RUDYARD KIPLING

The Greatest Living English Author

A small man, tanned and bronzed to a clear light mahogany, squarely built, with broad shoulders, keen blue eyes, heavy straight eyebrows, a [illegible] dark mustache and square resolute jaw, dressed in clothes that [illegible] ance to fashion plates—this is Rudyard Kipling. Active, [illegible], aggressive and intense, quick in movement, a bit cynical and quizzical, he at first [illegible] one thoroughly self-satisfied, [illegible] his own court of appeal.

At Bombay, the most cosmopolitan city of Asia, Kipling was born in Christmas week of 1865. His father was an Englishman, a professor of architectural sculpture in a Bombay college, and when Rudyard was six he was shipped back to England to be educated. At fifteen he entered the United Service College at Westward Ho, under the direction of old India officers. The atmosphere was military and Indian and was doubtless a [illegible] factor in coloring the mind of the boy, who acquired more by absorption [illegible] than by direct study. It is true that he carried off the prizes in English literature in a matter-of-fact kind of a way, as if it were his assigned share of the plunder, but otherwise [illegible] no symptoms of genius.

At seventeen he went to India to work on the "Civil and Military Gazette" at Lahore, where his talent began to be recognized in a half [illegible] way by the editor-in-chief. Strange, however, the "Plain Tales from the Hills," which gave him his first European success, and his "Departmental Ditties" were accepted under protest, to humor the boy rather than for any merit the editors discovered.

A man of supreme individuality, he has the splendid courage of his convictions. He dared to ask England into a fight when the Boer war seemed to him imperative; he scourged the country he loved for her treatment of her soldiers; he inspired those soldiers by his stirring, tingling lines and martial stanzas, while Alfred Austin, the laureate, was writing [illegible] guaranteed to offend no one. Then came his magnificent "Recessional," a new [illegible] added to our literature.

Kipling is the apostle of the strenuous. He loves color and paints it with love; he is thrilled [illegible] struggle, in power, in conquest. He shows men with the primal instincts and passions, nature unvarnished. He is often [illegible] to brutality, fearless to the point of frenzy, but always sincere and [illegible] best when he lets the Oriental in his nature keep him [illegible] the India he has revealed to the world as no other English writer has ever done.

The Mystery of The Yellow Room

By GASTON LEROUX. COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY BRENTANO'S.

Stand aside, Messrs. Sherlock Holmes, Martin Hewitt, Dupin, Lecoq, Vidocq, and all the crew of famous detectives of fiction and history! Enter Joseph Rouletabille, reporter-detective, superior to you all in the faculties of observing everything, remembering everything, deducing all the facts that throw light on his crime. Before Rouletabille (pronounced Rule-to-bee) solved the Mystery of the Yellow Room he was known to the Paris police as a marvel of reasoning power, although he was only a boy in years. With the solution of the famous Stangerson enigma he became a national figure in the literature of France. As such we introduce him to our readers.

CHAPTER I.

In Which We Begin Not to Understand.

"THE yellow room!" Who now remembers this affair which caused so much ink to flow ... on the 25th of October 1892 ... [illegible]

[illegible]

... when, having finished my work and looking at him, I said to myself: "What a man! What intelligence! What knowledge!" I attach importance to the fact that we made no noise, for, because of that, the assassin certainly thought that we had left the place. And suddenly while the cuckoo was sounding the half after midnight, a desperate clamor broke out in the yellow room. It was the voice of mademoiselle, crying "Murder—murder—help!" Immediately afterward revolver shots rang out, and there was a great noise of tables and furniture being thrown to the ground, as if in the course of a struggle, and again the voice of mademoiselle calling "Murder—help—papa—papa!"—

"You may be sure that we quickly sprang up and that M. Stangerson and I threw ourselves upon the door. But, alas, it was locked, fast locked, on the inside by the care of mademoiselle, as I have told you, with key and bolt. We tried to force it open, but it remained firm. M. Stangerson was like a madman, and, truly, it was enough to make him one, for we heard mademoiselle still calling "Help, help!" M. Stangerson showered terrible blows on the door and wept with rage and sobbed with despair and helplessness.

"It was then that I had an inspiration. "The assassin must have entered by the window!" I cried. "I will go to the window!" and I rushed from the pavilion and ran like one out of his mind.

[illegible]

... any one to hide himself. The door, which had been forced open against the wall, could not conceal anything behind it, as we assured ourselves. By the window, still in every way secured, no flight had been possible. What then?

"But we discovered my revolver on the floor—yes, my revolver! Oh, that brought me back to the reality! The devil would not have needed to steal my revolver to kill mademoiselle. The man who had been there had first gone up to my attic and taken my revolver from the drawer where I kept it. We then ascertained, by counting the cartridges, that the assassin had fired two shots. Ah, it was fortunate for me that M. Stangerson was in the laboratory when the affair took place and had seen with his own eyes that I was there with him, for otherwise, with this business of my revolver, I don't know where we should have been—I should now be under lock and key."

The editor of the Matin added to this interview the following lines:

"We have, without interrupting him, allowed Daddy Jacques to recount to us roughly all he knows about the crime of the yellow room. We have reproduced it in his own words, only sparing the reader the continual lamentations with which he garnished his narrative. We should have liked to put some further questions to Daddy Jacques, but the inquiry of the examining magistrate, which is being carried on at the chateau, makes it impossible for us to gain admission at the Glandier, and, as to the oak wood, it is guarded by a wide circle of policemen who are jealously watching all traces that can lead to the pavilion and that may perhaps lead to the discovery of the assassin.

"We have also wished to question the concierges, but they are invisible. Finally, we have waited in a roadside inn, not far from the gate of the chateau, for the departure of Monsieur de Marquet, the magistrate of Corbeil. At half past 5 we saw him and his clerk, and, before he was able to enter his carriage, had an opportunity to ask him the following question:

"Can you, Monsieur de Marquet, give us any information as to this affair, without inconvenience to the course of your inquiry?"

BARN VENTILATION.

Effective System Necessary to Keep Stock in Healthy Condition.

It is quite generally admitted today that some effective system of barn ventilation is necessary if cattle and other stabled live stock are to be kept in healthy condition. The germs of tuberculosis and other diseases thrive best in barns which are not well ventilated and lighted. Fresh air and sunlight are easily the best germ destroyers known to man. Both may be obtained at a nominal cost and with but very little difficulty.

There are of course several systems of ventilation, but none is meeting with more general acceptance than the one planned by Professor F. H. King of Madison, Wis. This plan follows the theory that foul air, containing gases and other impurities, is heavier than pure air and consequently will collect at or near the floor. The King system admits the fresh air at the ceiling and expels the foul air through a flue which extends from a point several feet above the highest part of the barn roof down through the barn to within a foot or so of the floor. This flue acts just as does a chimney, and through it the heavy air is removed from the barn.

A great many men have supposed any system of ventilation would be expensive and difficult to install. This, however, is a serious mistake. Some of the very best ventilation schemes in existence have cost comparatively little either in expense of materials or in labor to construct them. In fact, the more simple and the plainer the ventilating flues are made the better.

CHOKING IN COWS.

Method of Treating Animals Affected With This Trouble.

Choking in cows means the lodgment of a foreign obstacle in the esophagus, or gullet. It is known by slobbering, distressed breathing and accumulation of gas, which may be noticed on the left side or paunch.

The proper method of handling an animal thus afflicted is to stand the cow with her head down hill, [illegible] the head downward as much as possible while the attendant squeezes as much saliva out of the gullet as possible, then allow her to raise her head and give her one half pint of raw linseed oil, giving but one swallow at a time.

If she is not relieved within ten to thirty minutes a half inch rubber hose six feet long may be passed gently down the gullet. This will force the obstacle into the stomach, at the same time allowing the gas to escape.

If the animal has been greatly distended by gas before relieved it may be necessary to give her a laxative and tonic to overcome partial paralysis of the bowels, which sometimes follows.

SLEUTHS ON THE TRAIL.

Tactics Employed to Find a Wife Who Was Missing.

A man's voice, husky with anxiety, called up police headquarters the other night at about 2.30 a. m. It was a distraught husband begging the police to help him find his wife, who had been missing since 8 o'clock in the evening.

"What's her description," asked the official at the phone—"height, weight?"

"Er—er—about average, I guess," stammered the husband.

"Color of eyes?"

A confused buzzing sound came back over the wire.

"Blue or brown?" prompted the official.

"I—I don't know!"

"How was she dressed?"

"I guess she wore her coat and hat—she took the dog with her."

"What kind of a dog?"

"Brindle bull terrier, weight fourteen pounds and a half, four dark blotches on his body, shading from gray into white; a round blackish spot over the left eye; white stub of a tail, three white legs, and the right front leg nicely brindled all but the toes; a small nick in his left ear, gold filling in his upper right molar, a silver link collar with"—

"That'll do!" gasped the official. "We'll find the dog!"—Puck.

Too Late.

At luncheon at Buckingham palace one of the young sons of the Prince of Wales excitedly said to the king, "Oh, grandpapa," when the king interposed with some severity: "Little boys should be seen and not heard. Go on with your luncheon and don't talk."

The small prince collapsed. Presently the king said to him, relenting, "Now you can say what you were going to say."

The little prince, with a world of meaning, said: "Too late, grandpapa. It is too late."

The king said, "Nonsense! If it was worth saying five minutes ago it is worth saying now."

"No, grandpapa," said the little prince. "There was a big green worm in your salad, and you've eaten him."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Hunting For Trouble.

A traveler stopped at a country hotel in Arkansas. There was no water in his room when he arose in the morning, and he went downstairs and asked for some.

"What for?" the landlord asked.

"I want to wash my face."

The landlord directed him to a creek near by, and he went there for his ablutions, followed by several children, who stared at him in amazement.

The traveler washed his face and combed his hair as best he could with a pocket comb.

The children circled about him with wide open eyes. Finally the largest boy said, "Say, mister, do you all take all that trouble with yourself every day?"—Saturday Evening Post.

According to Her Count.

"Yes," said the young wife, "Philip and I have lived together a whole year, and we've never had the slightest quarrel."

"What are you talking about! You and Philip were married seven years ago."

"To be sure we were, but you forget that he's a traveling salesman."—Chicago Tribune.

TAKING CARE OF THE HERD HEAD

As many farmers are anxious to get information about bulls, an expert on handling these animals suggests the following plan for taking care of them:

The first thing is to gain the bull's confidence and let him know that the persons handling him are his friends. Be kind, but firm, and always make the bull keep his place. Never take any chances by getting careless, and a person should never fight a bull unless he wants trouble. But right here I wish to say there is a great difference in making him keep his place and fighting him. To illustrate:

I once bought a four-year-old bull that would chase the boy on horseback out of the pasture, and when I got him home he tried to run me out of the corral where I was working. But his nose came in contact with fork tines, and when he walked off I left him alone just as though nothing had happened, and the result was he never bothered any one afterward. However, he was still watchful and boss of the herd. Dehorn him? Yes, if he shows any disposition to push, dehorn him to prevent accidents.

I had a bull I had under control perfectly. I had bred him altogether, and he seemed to be docile, and we seemed to have a mutual agreement between us, but somehow the gate was left open accidentally one day, and he killed my best mare in about two minutes. Needless to say that bull's horns came off speedily, but it hasn't changed his dislike for horses, but he can't kill any more should he get to them.

It is my experience that a bull with a strong temper is worth two bulls without temper. He will be a stronger breeder. He will infuse his get with his good qualities, especially the heifers. I believe the strongest bull I ever had killed his keeper (the keeper, however, was drunk). Bulls should be provided with a good stable, with a runway for exercising, and always handled and fed by the same man.

SILO VALUABLE.

Space Economizer—Permits Large Amount to Be Grown on Acre.

For dairying and cattle feeding the silo is now considered almost indispensable. A large amount of succulent food to help balance the ration, to insure the health of animals and to improve the appetite is a necessity on every farm that maintains live stock. The fact that alfalfa, cowpea hay and other crops rich in protein are now quite extensively grown in the southwest makes the need of the silo more apparent. Ensilage is a bulky food, furnishes carbohydrates and gives better results when fed with legumes or a concentrate. Those who have given this subject thought say that silage and alfalfa hay or cowpea hay make one of the cheapest feeds known.

While silage does not contain a relatively large amount of nutrition, yet it is valuable. One ton of ensilage is about equal to a ton of sugar beets or [illegible]

Duck shooting season opens next Tuesday August 23rd and local nimrods can already be seen greasing up their dogs and polishing guns in preparation for the big event. The birds are all strong on wing and the larger varieties, such as the mallard and canvas back, are numerous. As a number of the small sloughs frequented in other seasons, are now dried up, the birds have taken since the hatching period, to the large sloughs and lakes. Consequently most of the shooting will be done on the wing and during the morning and evening flights—a good thing for the game. Heretofore ducks on the small sloughs have been slaughtered on the opening of the season.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY

It Can Never Be Perfect Without Luxuriant Hair

A head of luxuriant hair is sure to be attractive. But nature has not crowned every woman with glorious hair. Some very lovable women she has treated rather scantily in this respect.

For instance, there are tens of thousands of women in Canada to-day, who have harsh, faded and lustreless hair, who are unattractive simply because they do not know that now-a-days even the whims of nature can be over ruled by the genius of science.

If you are a woman without beautiful hair, do not permit your attractions to be hidden because of this slight misfortune.

Go to-day to Fred Long and buy a large bottle of Parisian Sage for 50 cents, use it each night and you will notice the harsh, repulsive hair disappear, and in its place will come soft, silky, bright and luxuriant hair.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by Fred Long to cure dandruff, itching of the scalp, and stop falling hair in two weeks, or money back.

WILDMERE NOTES

Colin Smith of Crystal Lake Ranch, and J. Dalman were in town on Monday.

Joe. Young, was a visitor from Edmonton last week, and made arrangements to have a house built on his claim previous to his returning to live on it, at the close of the season.

This is a young settlement, but two Joe Young's in one township is going to be awkward. They will have to be lal c'led.

W. P. McAlpine had wheat in stook last week. Messrs McCord ... have started cutting and harvest, at this date is in full swing. Good average crops are promised from this district.

Haying is still being pushed in this locality. Though none too plentiful, it is expected there will be enough and to spare for the settlers. Certain hustling homesteaders may be seen at work, pitching hay, long after old Sol has retired for the day.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Andreast, with master Donald, are leaving this week on an extended visit to their old home in the States. J. Taylor will be in charge of the Ranch during Mr. Andreast absence. Their many friends will regret to hear that Mrs. Andreast's health is not satisfactory.

The school building is now finished and Mr. Black held a short service in it a week ago. It was a bit awkward that the desks and seats were not forwarded, but these have now been delivered and the school is ready to be made use of. The trustees hope to secure the services of a competent male teacher, and to open school shortly.

Mr. C. Haynes from Owen Sound is visiting his brother Geo. Haynes, on 24-49-6. Mr. Haynes is taken with the appearance of the country and may settle in the locality.

Robt. Graham from Wildmere district was in town for supplies on Tuesday.

HOPKINS

Will we ever be able—ever be able to—state positively where that school-house will be built, which side is to suffer defeat the Eastsiders or the Westsiders? Certainly one or the other will lose out.

Did those delegates return from Edmonton?

It is not so lonesome in this neighborhood since those thirteen parties who were raspberrying out in Sleepy Hollow returned. It was surely like Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" for several days last week.

The surveyors yacht passed here on its way to Edmonton, Sunday.

Dave Ross of St. Paul spent the past week with his sisters, Misses Mary and Julia Ross.

Miss Della Maldey was at Vermilion to meet an uncle, who arrived Saturday.

Mrs. Herlson, who lives southwest of here, says this country is wilder than some might believe. A short time ago she, on hearing a noise outside the tent, stepped out and was greatly surprised to see a huge black bear devouring a pan of milk. She says that had the season been open for killing big game, Mr. Bruin would now have been her meat.

T. Matheson, foreman in the Edmonton Pig & Pulp Co., is visiting Woodward and Morgan at their farm south of town for a few days.

Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. met at Edmonton last week the representatives from the local lodge being Messrs Brimacombe and Fox both of whom report splendid sessions and speak highly of the great welcome accorded the delegates by Mayor Jamieson on behalf of the city of Edmonton.

Sam Barr S. W. 32-50-7, has finished cutting ... acres of ... on the McLaren farm and figures ... of turning out fully 35 bushels to the acre. Vermilion crops are hard to beat.

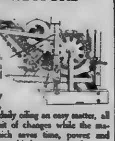
RUMELY SEPARATORS



Will make a better season's run for you, because the feeder is automatic and positive in its action, cylinder large and of excellent suction, side plates rigid, bearings extra long reducing the possibility of overheating.

All bearings needing daily attention are on the outside, working parts always accessible—daily oiling an easy matter, all adjustments so arranged as to permit of changes while the machine is in operation. All of which saves time, power and labor and that's just so many dollars added to your profits.

The Inclined Chain Rake

After passing over the chain rake, nineteen out of every twenty kernels have fallen into the grain pan. Once in the grain pan, it only remains for the grain to be thoroughly cleaned. The lipped chaffer, adjustable sieve, adjustable wind deflector, smooth even throw of the entire shoe takes care of this—and the grain reaches the sack in a clean, ready-for-the-market condition—[illegible] for the thresherman a satisfied customer, more customers and more profits.

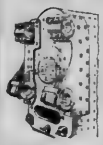
RUMELY ENGINES



Will run many, many seasons. Each season's run will be profitable, because RUMELY Engines have boiler construction with full water circulation fire box construction, large heating surface area. Gearing made of steel and semi-steel, massive in size and design. Traction wheels built of steel are strong and broad and have large heavy grouters that grip the earth firmly.

Rumely Engines are Rear-Mounted and Double Geared

These features very materially lengthen the life of the engine as they are important factors in reducing friction and saving power and power savers mean profits for the thresherman.

This construction permits of the power pushing the engine straight ahead from the rear instead of pulling with a damaging strain on the side of the boiler and entirely does away with the possibilities of vibration, side play, or twisting of the countershaft and suggests tipping in of the drive wheels.

The firm of Ferrel & Walker contractors and builders, have been awarded the contract for the building of the Imperial Oil Co., warehouse at Vermilion. The warehouse is to be erected with all expedience and Messrs. Ferrel & Walker will commence their portion of the work as soon as the company place their storage tanks in position on the property. The building is to be built on property owned by the Imperial Oil Co., just west of the stock yards near the C. N. R. lines.

MEANS MUCH TO VERMILION

C. N. R. Have Now Organized Immigration Department for Their Line Offices in Great Britain and on the Continent Big Immigration to Main Line Next Spring

Winnipeg, Aug 17th. "When I last passed through Winnipeg" said Col. A. D. Davidson, land commissioner of the Canadian Northern Railway, at the Royal Alexandra, "I was on my way to England, on business which at that time I was not prepared to make public. Now, however, I do not mind saying that while we were in England, we organized an immigration department for the Canadian Northern, both in great Britain and on the continent. I look for a large immigration next year, both from Europe and the British Isles.

"There is quite a movement of a very desirable class of citizens from Austria-Hungary and from Poland. These immigrants make very thrifty settlers. There is a good demand for Canadian land in England. We sold 150,000 acres in the last six months. This land is all being bought for colonization purposes, and I believe that during next year some large land companies are likely to be formed in England for the express purpose of buying and colonizing land in Canada.

"As far as I am able to observe, we are getting a very desirable class of British settlers this year. There are more men, experienced farmers, coming from the agricultural districts than ever before. We are also likely to get a large number of miners to work in the coal mines of Western Canada. This is an industry that is being rapidly developed and will require a great many miners, and wages are so much better here than in Europe that a good miner can get a steady employment at a very remunerative wage.

"In regard to crops, I think those along the main line of the Canadian Northern will average better this year than they have ever since the line was built. In fact at many points along the line, the crops were so heavy that they had lodged considerably. On the whole, I believe that the crop of western Canada will be entirely satisfactory this year, a good crop with very good prices.

"I look for a particularly large influx of settlers from the States during the next year, perhaps larger than any previous year. I found, while on the coast, that a great many United States and English firms have their representatives in British Columbia, with a view to the acquirement of timber lands. This means, of course, that good tracts of timber land are likely to command much higher prices than have heretofore prevailed."

Railways For Settled Country

Premier Sifton Says Government Will Assist Those Who Break The Land

"The policy of the government is to build railways for the people now in the country. Those that have been raising grain and other crops are entitled to the first consideration in the matter of government assistance [illegible]."

In the [illegible] Premier Sifton explained [illegible] from Olds [illegible] what the [illegible] tion was [illegible] railways to [illegible] present [illegible] The assistance [illegible] the government [illegible] assistance to those breaking the land [illegible] crops to market [illegible] tion [illegible] will be [illegible] ministration [illegible] of branch [illegible] ed agricultural settlements which have been suffering great drawbacks from lack of railway facilities in the way of necessary branch lines.

The vigorous carrying out of such a policy will have a vast effect on adding to the wealth of the country and to the making of a satisfied and contented people.

INCREASE MEMBERS FOR WESTERN CANADA

But Next Census Will Not Show Enough to Shift Balance of Power From East Present Population Estimated at Seven and a Half Millions.

Ottawa, Aug. 21. According to figures obtainable at the bureau of census and statistics, those who have been figuring out a marked shifting of parliamentary power to the west from the east in the redistribution which will follow the next decennial census may be considerably astray in their calculations.

While the census proper is enumerated only once in ten years, there is a careful check on population from year to year and an accurate annual estimate has been issued. As is well known, Quebec furnishes the unit of representation. It has a fixed representation of 65, which determines the basis of representation.

On March 31, according to the official estimate, the population of Quebec was 2,154,000 as compared with 1,648,898 when the census was taken in 1901. On the basis of this total the unit of representation at the end of March was 33,139. Applying this to the estimate of population of the three prairie provinces on March 31, Manitoba would today be entitled to fifteen instead of ten members, Saskatchewan to eleven instead of ten and Alberta to ten instead of seven.

The estimated population of Canada on March 31 was 7,489,781. Next June it is expected it will be over 8,000,000. Quebec as stated has a population of 2,154,000, as compared with 1,648,898 in 1901. Ontario is now estimated at 2,687,[illegible] as compared with 2,182,947 ten years ago. The population of the three prairie provinces is now estimated at 1,186,50[illegible] as compared with 419,512 in 1901. The estimate of the three maritime provinces is 1,060,678, as against 893,953 ten years ago.

A Message From Mustang

Oh, the way, Farmer Preston ordered Jed be return your studio and never bother you

The farmer looked sheepish. Nor. He handed them back to me and before leaving fell there a moment dressed his hat in the bottom of the box. Well, I hadn't seen you for a week," Preston at last by the papers and I was worried.

Yes, Mr. Preston, I was worried, but not about you. I was worried about myself. I had been working on a story that I thought would be a big success, and I was afraid that I had lost the ability to write. I was afraid that the strain of the past few months had been too much for me, and that I had lost the power to write. I was afraid that I was going to be a failure. I was afraid that I would never be able to write another story. I was afraid that I would never be able to write another story. I was afraid that I would never be able to write another story

THE MISSION OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

A Children's Aid Society or a Committee empowered to act under the Children's Protection Act of Alberta should be at work in every town and village in the province [illegible] prompt to [illegible] cases of child neglect or cruelty, and to act in the capacity of probation officers [illegible] the boys and girls who are in need of the [illegible] ful advice [illegible] an order [illegible].

The work of the Children's Aid Society is:

To [illegible] neglected children at the earliest possible age [illegible] their unfortunate surroundings;

The finding of foster homes for children in need of such homes and the continuing of a watchful care over any children placed in such foster homes;

To protect society against the strongest of its foes—ignorance and vice, by the securing of good home conditions for children who would otherwise grow up under the most pernicious and evil influences;

To urge upon parents the serious results bound to accrue from the careless training or neglect of their children during the most impressionable years of early childhood;

To see that every child in the community has a chance to grow up to be a good citizen.

The home life of neglected children may be greatly improved by a little kindly intervention; that failing, there is a law in Alberta which protects helpless children from abuse or neglect and it should be appealed to promptly. Homeless children should be taken care of at once and placed either in foster homes or sent to the nearest Shelter where they may be cared for until foster homes are found. Those interested in the work of the Children's Aid Society or those who know of cases of neglect or cruelty to children, or know of a home where a little child will be welcomed, are invited to write to the Superintendent of Neglected Children for Alberta, Edmonton.

C. N. R. IMPROVEMENTS

The C. N. R. have a large gang of men at work on the enlargement of their water supply system. At present excavating is going on in river bottom from the river south to the pump station. The company are also erecting a new ash house in the yards. The contemplated improvements involve an expenditure of some $10,000.

An Old Shoe

There is both poetry at [illegible] in an old shoe. [illegible] the [illegible] both rich and poor to draw [illegible] inspiration [illegible] from that humble [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] good.

[illegible] the [illegible] of the elements, was gradually being obliterated from its vast [illegible] of existence.

[illegible] with such objects, I [illegible] gazed upon the [illegible].

As I contemplated on the object [illegible] it seemed to soliloquize in [illegible] manner.

[illegible] pardon me for inflicting upon [illegible] of my personal history and experience.

[illegible] I grew upon the back of [illegible]. While there my [illegible] my own [illegible] a pleasant place. I grew in beauty [illegible] except a slight [illegible] attraction according to the [illegible] of the quadruped upon which I was dependent.

During the [illegible] winter of 1906-1907 the [illegible] died of starvation and drinking slough water, water which had fallen [illegible] the pond that [illegible] the cattle [illegible] were dancing [illegible] Dablo. I was forcibly [illegible] from resting place and conveyed [illegible] the [illegible] home-stead [illegible] was so hard luck and also being a [illegible] not rested on his cuts the [illegible] instead of putting up well cost [illegible] his stock.

Since then he has been more provident [illegible] capacity as a shoe, I have frequently met him in my travels and have noted with pleasure the evidences of [illegible].

But to return to my story, from the butcher's warehouse, I was shipped to the tannery, where I was weighed and docked the grub holes, whereas there were none in my part of the hide. The holes which I present today are not the handiwork of grubs. At the tannery I was cast into a vat containing a penetrating and [illegible] solution, which robbed me of my natural covering and converted me into leather so rapidly that my constitution [illegible] the [illegible] same, I gave poor satisfaction ever afterward.

After completing my course at the tannery and graduating with honor, I was shipped to a great shoe firm which by the use of modern machinery soon transformed me into my present form, or rather in to the form of which, as you see, I am now the mere outline.

In due course, I ran the gauntlet of the wholesale and jobbing houses and at last landed on the shelf of a general store in Vermilion, from which I was sold to your neighbor as Imported French Calf.

You know my present master is a man subject under the slightest provocation to violent fits of temper, which for the time overshadow his more commendable qualities. He keeps cattle, horses and pigs in comfortable numbers and really thinks something of them, but in his fits of temper I have had my strength sorely tested by violent contact with nearly every visible inch of the anatomy of his animals.

On Sunday I was given a coat of blacking, I think the brand was 2 in 1. Then with his Sunday clothes above me, my master would go to church, and sing "All people that on earth do dwell" etc. At first I hoped that this might moderate the [illegible] during the week to come, but it [illegible] otherwise. He precipitated me with great force against his wife for no other reason than that she insisted on expressing her opinion which to his mind amounted to [illegible] but all his kicking didn't make her think so.

The next week he got a new pair of shoes as part of the proceeds from the sale of his wife's butter and as my society was no longer desired in the household, I was thrown where you now see me.

Now sir, I shall not detain you longer. Pass on your way, and as you run the gauntlet of life remember, you will run it only once. Make that life all that it ought to be, try to scatter a few smiles as you go, do less kicking and more [illegible], and at last, when, like me, you start to evaporate, all will be well."

With the Horses

AN WILKES, the pacing champion that is being entered extensively in the summer big stakes to which he is eligible, by Walter Cox, began his racing career in 1903 at the age of three when he started in two slow classes, being second in one and unplaced in the other. In 1907 his campaign bore evidence of "conditioning" as he was well placed in six of his eight starts without a single winning heat to his credit. If that was the ... the system worked to perfection the following season in eight starts ... and a record of 2.11¼.

The campaign the past year consisted of ten starts in eight of which he won; in one he finished second and in the American Pacing Derby at Boston he finished eighth in the field of 17, starting from the ... mark. Beginning at Athol, Mass., July 3, he won in slow time, 2.20½ being the fastest heat. At Woonsocket, R.I., July 16, he won in straight heats in 2.11½, 2.13¾, 2.14¾ and again at the same track August 11 he repeated in 2.10¼, 2.17¾, 2.11¼. A five heat contest at Hall's Grove, R.I., August 19, resulted in first money again, Ten taking the last three in 2.10¼, 2.12¼, 2.10¼, after forcing out The Plummer in 2.10¼ in the second mile. His next start was in the big pacing handicap at Readville ... finished eighth, well up. Turning back to the minors again, he won at Worcester, Sept. 8, in three straight miles 2.12¼, 2.12¼, 2.10, and at Mineola, N.Y. ... in the same fashion with ... miles, 2.12¾, 2.09½ and ... At Brattleboro, Vermont ...

Grannett, a daughter of Gennett, as is the known, both in W. J. Andrews' stable have attracted comparatively little attention, but that the Buffalo trainer may have a factor in the big Detroit race in one of this pair is shown from the fact that a few days ago he worked Robert A. in 2.16¼, with the last end at nearly a two-minute clip, and Myrtle Grannett one in 2.10¼, the last eighth of her mile being in 15¼ seconds. Andrews has also worked the three year old filly Fan Tanguay, by Peter the Great, 2.07¼, a mile in 2.16¼, with the last quarter in 32 seconds, and right now she looms to be one of the season's crack trotters of her age. An addition to Mr. Andrews' stables just sent on to him from Kentucky by the Maddens, is a five year old mare by Knight 2.22¼, dam Flora McGregor, dam of Fillmore 2.05½, Hoosier, 2.1 ... , by Robert McGregor. She is a grandly gaited trotter of great speed and will doubtless train into racing form in the hands of the Buffalo trainer.

The only association that had the courage to put a class for free for all trotters on its list of early closing events was the Connecticut Fair Association, and, as a result, it has been provided with a race that will be about the biggest kind of an advertising card for the Grand Circuit meeting to be held at Hartford in connection with the fair. While this event is still open to horses to be named on July 30th or August 23rd, upon payment of proportionately larger entrance fee according to the date of entry, the following horses were entered on May 31st, taking advantage of the smaller fee charged at that time: Sonoma Girl, 2.05¼, by Lynwood W.; Margin, 2.05¾, by Time (Onward); Paul ... (Kenneth), 2.08¼, by Constenaro; Sterling McKinney, 2.06¼, by McKinney; The Harvester, 2.08¾ ...

The Atlantic Fisheries Dispute at the Hague

During the first few days of last month the learned legal counsel for the United States, Great Britain, and Newfoundland presented to the International Court of Arbitration at The Hague the American, British, and Canadian contentions in the long drawn out, complicated fisheries dispute. The writer of this article, Mr. P. T. McGrath in the American Review of Reviews is preeminently well equipped to set forth the entire question from all sides clearly and impartially. He is a journalist of long experience and keen perception. For many years he has been an editor of influential Newfoundland newspapers, and has been known for his fair and well informed attitude upon Canadian American relations. The Editor of the Review of Reviews states that he believes that a Newfoundlander of Mr. McGrath's experience and ability will make, on the whole, a more useful and adequate presentation of this important and involved subject than would be written by an American sympathizer with New England's claims in the matter.

THE Atlantic fisheries dispute now in process of settlement before the Hague Arbitration Tribunal is perhaps the most extraordinary complication in the realms of international diplomacy, because it really has involved Great Britain in serious entanglements with France as well as with the United States, entanglements by no means disposed of, though relegated to the background by the Anglo-French Convention of 1904, which was understood to have settled the phase of the difficulty known as the "French Shore Question."

Newfoundland, discovered by Cabot in 1497, annexed by Gilbert for Queen Elizabeth in 1583, and in part, if not altogether, held by England ever since, was long desired by France because of its fishery wealth, and the French occupied part of the coast for a long period and overran most of the settled portions of the island more than once. But in 1713, by the Treaty of Utrecht, England was recognized as sovereign of the whole territory, France being satisfied with fishing concessions on the western section of the seaboard, which were confirmed and amplified by the treaties of Paris in 1763 and Versailles in 1783. The later convention, which terminated the American War of Independence, contained clauses assuring American subjects of certain rights in the fisheries of the Grand Banks and on ...

... were largely engaged in the northern fisheries, serious friction ensued until in 1818 a treaty, or convention, between Great Britain and America was signed at London to provide for the carrying ...

water, large or small? The British authorities, in Canada and Newfoundland, adopted the "headline" doctrine and excluded the Americans from even the Bay of Fundy, in Nova Scotia, Bale des Chaleurs, in Quebec, and Fortune Bay, in Newfoundland. Many difficulties and conflicts ensued, American vessels were seized almost every year, and many of them were confiscated for flagrant violations.

In considering the whole treaty question it is important to remember that, beginning at Cape St. John, the northern extremity of Notre Dame Bay, on the northeast coast of Newfoundland, passing northward to Belle Isle Strait and thence southward along the west coast of Cape Ray, the French already enjoyed the right of fishing in the coastwise waters and of landing and drying their catch on the seaboard, with a further proviso embodied in a declaration attached to the Treaty of Versailles, that British subjects were not to interfere with the French by their competition, in other words, making the French the predominant partner in the fisheries of that region.

That this fact was recognized by the British and American negotiators of the treaty of 1818 is evident from their having phrased the concession to American subjects in that treaty as merely a concession to fish in the inshore waters of the west coast, but without any landing privilege such as was granted to them on the southwest coast, where the French had no rights.

The difficulties between Britain and France in regard to the region were not terminated until six years ago, when, in return for concessions in Morocco and West Africa, France agreed to abandon her claims to a lodgment on Newfoundland's western seaboard, and the few French fishing stations thereon were purchased by the British Government, France contenting herself with retaining the right to fish on the coastwise waters of the "French Shore," but without any right to land on the shore for any purpose.

The situation today with regard to this territory is that on the northeast coast of Newfoundland from Cape St. John up to Cape Norman, British and French subjects have the right to fish within the three mile limit, but British subjects alone have a right to dry their catch on the shore; on the west coast, from Cape Norman south to Cape Ray, British subjects, French subjects, and American subjects all three have the right to fish in the coastwise waters ...

... subjects are restricted in the exercise of this landing and drying privilege to the unsettled portions of this coast alone, which practically means that they are denied any access to the seaboard ...

1877, when representatives of both Britain and the United States were present. M. Maurice Delfosse, Belgian Minister at Washington, was umpire. It awarded Canada and Newfoundland $5,500,000, of which subsequently, by arrangement between themselves, Canada took four fifths and Newfoundland the remainder.

After the abrogation of this treaty by the United States in 1885, came the "Chamberlain Bayard" in 1888, which was rejected by the United States Senate, though a modus vivendi was arranged lasting two years. Then came the "Bond Blaine Convention" which gave rise to a tariff war between Canada and Newfoundland and eventually lay moribund for twelve years.

During all this period the modus vivendi of 1888 was continued by Newfoundland because she was hopeful of securing a reciprocal arrangement, and by Canada because she entertained similar hopes. "Pilgrimages to Washington" were made by various Canadian statesmen, and in 1898 an International Joint High Commission, headed by Lord Coleridge on the British side, and containing representatives of Canada and Newfoundland, and headed on the American side by Senator Fairbanks, wrestled with the problem at Quebec and at Washington, but with no result. Not until 1902 did Canada withdraw her embargo against the Newfoundland Convention, having by this time realized that any arrangement of a similar character for herself was impossible and, it may also have been determining to make no more "pilgrimages" in quest of reciprocity. The mother colony, being now at liberty to assent to Newfoundland's endeavor to make a new arrangement, if it could succeed in so doing, the then Premier of the island negotiated the "Bond Hay treaty" on the lines of the convention of 1890, but this instrument was "amended to death" by the American Senate ...

1906 Premier Bond introduced another bill forbidding colonials to leave territorial waters for any such purpose and imposing confiscation on American vessels found in Colonial waters with any persons on board not inhabitants of the United States, but the imperial government refused approval to this measure while American fishermen, on their part, ... by colonial laws prohibiting the use of destructive fishing instruments known as purse seines, and the American State Department forwarded vigorous messages of protest to the Imperial Government against the unfriendly attitude of the Newfoundland ministry, demanding ... that United States subjects be protected in the exercise of the treaty rights granted to them ...

... the settlement of all questions arising between Colonial and American fishermen in the hands of the British naval commander in the station. A modus vivendi was likewise arranged between ...

... against the procedure as a virtual abrogation of the colony's charter of self government but the Imperial Cabinet proposed an amicable adjustment of the matter if possible.

The philosopher of the King Edward district contributes this week an article on "An Old Shoe." In following the course of the old shoe's ramifications our readers are assured that there are no personal allusions in the above remarks.

We learn on very good authority that another candidate of the Vermilion school was successful at the late departmental examinations in the person of Emma Armstrong Standard 6 Such being the case means that only two failed out of the 12 who wrote from the town school.

Two informations were laid during the week by the town for infractions of certain by-laws and in both instances judgment was secured against the defendants. A young man was fined $5.00 and costs for leaving a yoke of oxen tied to a post for 14 hours without attendance, and in the other action $3.00 and costs was imposed by the magistrate against a party for allowing poultry to run at large and do damage. Both cases were heard before J. H. Butler J. P. The town constable also rounded up a bunch of town stock which he impounded, netting some four dollars to the town coffers.

Tuesday, the opening day of the duck season was raw and decidedly wet but did not damp the ardour of the local nimrods and several good bags are reported. The birds are fat and plump and of excellent flavor this fall.

Secy. Falkins of the Vermilion B. of T. has received encouraging and commendable letters from various points re the town pamphlet and its distribution. The work is spoken of in the most flattering terms and more shipments are requested of the work.

A. E. Howard of Vancouver, who recently took a large number of town views and local scenery as well as pictures of grain fields around here, has written from Winnipeg to the B. of T. announcing that a complete set of plates of the same will be shipped to the town gratis. The B. of T. heartily appreciate the gift and will put them to good use in the immediate future.

But don't you think a Moosing Hunt
Is just his one and only stunt
He's others up his sleeve
At hunting homesteads Gee and Whiz
He gets down squarely to the biz
He sticks and will not leave
He sat they say long hours before
The Edmonton land office door
And though the people smiled
He sat it out and papers say
Earned countless dollars on that day

In glaring type the Headlines stood

Let's hope he'll find his homestead bright

When Mme. Sembrich Got a Stage Gown For a Song.

Whenever I think of my early operatic experience I delight to recall a little dressmaker in Dresden who literally sold me a stage gown for a song. I had made my first appearance and was well received. Then word came that I was to appear next as Violetta in "Traviata." Now, in Germany the curious custom obtains of furnishing costumes to the male singers and obliging the women to dress themselves. At that stage in my career a role calling for several elaborate evening gowns meant a serious drain on my resources. At the same time I realized that appropriate dressing was vitally essential to my success. Bravely I began my bargain hunting, but the prices were far beyond my fears. I was forced to resign myself to do the best I could from my [illegible] scant wardrobe. But [illegible] ingenuity could encompass a suitable [illegible] gown for the third act. "What can you pay, madam?" she asked gently as she read the disappointment in my face.

Hesitatingly I named a sum less than one-half the price she demanded.

"On one condition the gown is yours," she said.

"And what is that?" I asked breathlessly.

"I have a father who is bedridden," she said. "Never was there a greater lover of music. Only last night he was [illegible] because he might [illegible] Sembrich, of whom [illegible] much [illegible]

Sharks' Eggs.

The eggs of fishes are usually small, soft and inconspicuous. The most remarkable point about them is the extraordinary number laid by the individual. A single cod lays as many as 9,000,000 eggs. Sharks lay eggs which are large in size, few as to number and are protected singly instead of in masses. These eggs consist of a dark-colored leathery case and are usually adorned with frills, horns or long-tendril tendrils. These appendages serve the purpose of keeping the egg case supported among the branches of seaweeds, thus preserving the embryo from the damage it would sustain were the egg carried hither and thither by the waves.—Scientific American.

The Doctor's Answers

By Dr. Lewis Baker.

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature. Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed envelope for reply. If unable to obtain any of the drugs mentioned of your regular druggist, go to some prominent large retail drug store which is sure to be well stocked.

Arthur F.—I am quite grateful for your kind words, and am glad to know you tried the prescription for stomach disorders. A good way to treat catarrh at home is: To a pint of warm water add a teaspoonful of salt, snuff this water through the nostrils morning and night until thoroughly cleansed. Blood treatment should also be taken and for this purpose try: Fld. ext. saw palmetto 1 oz., compound fluid balmwort 1 oz., fld. ext. buchu 1 oz., aromatic elixir 5 ozs. Mix, and take a teaspoonful before or after meals and at bedtime.

Alice G.—Use a teaspoonful of boracic acid to a pint of warm water for sore and inflamed eyes; wash twice daily.

Sam K.—I have frequently given the following formula for such cases as yours. It is a thorough, powerful tonic and builder and perfectly harmless to the system even if used for a long time. Compound syrup of hypophosphites 5 ozs., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals to improve the appetite and one at bedtime. This improves the blood, makes pink cheeks, red lips and greater nerve control for men, women or children.

Eugene.—Yes, I know a very thorough and reliable treatment to cure dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair, etc. Druggists do not generally have it in stock, but I will give the name. It is plain yellow minyol. It costs 50 cents for a four-ounce jar.

Mrs. C. W.—If your child is addicted to bedwetting, you cannot expect it to be healthy, strong and hearty. Try the use of comp. fluid balmwort. A child of 6 should be given 10 drops on sugar or in water after meals and between meals and at bedtime. The symptoms may increase at first, but gradually a cure will ensue.

Mrs. X.—You want a good prescription to act on baby's bowels, [illegible] griping and pain; and something curative, as well as for immediate relief. This prescription can be relied upon when carefully filled: Aromatic fluid cascara 1 oz., comp. essence cardiol 1 oz., aromatic syrup rhubarb 3 ozs. Give an infant 5 to 10 drops 3 to 4 times daily, or a half teaspoonful at night. Increase the dose according to age, or condition, sufficient to regulate the bowels.

Agnes M.—Since you received so much help from my previous prescription I am going to give you a prescription which will increase your flesh and round out your figure, bringing the physical charm that goes with a well nourished body. This will usually make pink cheeks, red lips and buoyant health. Comp. syrup of hypophosphites 3 ozs., essence of pepsin 3 ozs., tincture cadomene compound 1 oz., and compound essence cardiol 1 oz. Mix, and take a teaspoonful before and after meals. Continue several months if necessary. After the first few weeks you should increase 1 to 3 pounds each week.

CURE COMMON ILLS

NA-DRU-CO

Canadian Made

No doubt you will agree that if quality and price are equal every Canadian should buy Canadian made goods in preference to any others.

Not only is it patriotic—it's sound common sense. The money spent for Canadian goods goes to build up Canadian industries and prosperity, and makes it easier for every Canadian to earn a good living.

On the other hand, money spent for foreign made goods goes out of the country to pay foreigners—not to benefit Canadians.

NA-DRU-CO

Toilet and Medicinal Preparations are compounded in Canada, from the purest ingredients which money can buy. The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada returns to Canadians in employees' salaries, dividends and other expense disbursements [illegible] One Million Dollars a year. In addition to this we spend [illegible] every year in Canada for raw materials, tins, bottles, labels, boxes and other supplies, giving employment to hundreds of Canadian tinsmiths, glass workers, paper makers, printers, lithographers, box makers, and others.

So even if NA-DRU-CO goods were only "just as good" as those imported from other countries, you would be following a sensible and patriotic course in buying them.

As a matter of fact, though, NA-DRU-CO Toilet and Medicinal Preparations are better than those imported. Try NA-DRU-CO Talcum Powder, NA-DRU-CO Carnation Toilet Cream, NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound or any other NA-DRU-CO preparation, and see for yourself.

You risk nothing in making the test, for if the NA-DRU-CO article does not entirely satisfy you, return it and your druggist will refund your money.

DANGERS LURK IN FOOD

"Judge freshness by eye and fin."

"Sprouting Potatoes are Unwholesome"

"A Musty Loaf for the Chickens"

"Set the bottles water in an icepack."

"We should suspect some danger near Where we see no danger."

THUS runs the rhetoric whine Dr. Isaac Watts said it. Like a host of other mechanical jingles turned out from the same brain and fingers, it is unworthy of the man who wrote some of the noblest hymns in the English language. The story goes that the titled patrons in a manor of whose mansions he lived for years expected him to produce a hymn [illegible] before he met them at breakfast. He was, during these years, engaged upon the "Divine Songs and Hymns" that earned him immortality in church and Sunday school. If this be true, one comprehends much and forgives almost as much in the said "productions."

In pondering the subject set down for today's Talk, the prosaistic couplet set at the head of this article has haunted me persistently. To a healthy body and the normal appetite that should go with health eating is a delight. The day has gone clean out of sight in which the refined women and intellectual men thought the pleasures of the table beneath the consideration of noble minds. As late as Sydney Smith's time his learned brethren, ecclesiastical and literary, frowned or sneered at the frivolity of the epicureanism that dictated the rhymed salad recipe which is perhaps better known to the general reading public than any other [illegible] clerical wit.

Our age is essentially practical and commonsensible. When one has no relish for food, the Sydney Smiths [illegible] bluff squires would have said [illegible] stomach for victuals [illegible] be ailing in body or [illegible] in spirit. One and all, we eat to live and are not ashamed to confess [illegible] to eat, so far as to reckon the gratification of appetite one of the joys of existence.

Therefore, when brought up against the truth that dangers, seen and unseen, disport themselves in the food we love and must have, we sicken at heart.

A CASE FOR CAUTION

At the outset of our dissertation I call attention to the fact that caution may degenerate into foolish squeamishness. We have heard from babyhood of the overreligious Brahmin who, believing it a mortal sin to eat of any [illegible] creature [illegible] perished with thirst after a [illegible] showed [illegible] a drop of wriggling water under the microscope. [illegible] is a degree of truth in the [illegible] touching the germs that [illegible] against freezing and which, if [illegible] for a time, regain life and a [illegible] in the human stomach. I have [illegible] ice that had the "tang" of copperas and was [illegible] I have [illegible] other flavors in ice that should be [illegible] Clearly, it is the part of prudence never [illegible] pitcher. Set the vessel of water in the [illegible] enough to cool it. Nobody is compelled to drink a beverage in which ice is dissolved, unless one wills to do it. Give yourself the benefit of the doubt when you "suspect some danger near" in the guise of equivocal ice.

AN UGLY NAME

"Ptomaine poison" is a phrase sprung upon us within the last decade. The thing itself is an old acquaintance, as though [illegible] christened.

It is an ungainly term with a very ugly [illegible] being derived from a Greek word [illegible]

CHAPTER II.

In Which Joseph Rouletabille Appears For the First Time.

I FIRST knew Joseph Rouletabille [pronounced [illegible]] when he was [illegible] reporter. At [illegible] I was a beginner at the bar [illegible] magistrates [illegible] to get a "permit to communicate" for the prison of Mazas or for Saint Lazare. He had, as they say, [illegible] and it is from that, I think [illegible] comrades of the press, all determined [illegible] papers, had given him that [illegible] return immediately [illegible] to M. Stangerson without his absence being noticed. That, of course, is only [illegible] thesis."

[illegible]

[illegible] sat down [illegible] for a few minutes [illegible] excitement which [illegible] dominated him, and then [illegible]

"[illegible] will be found, and the mystery [illegible] more and more mysterious. That is [illegible] The examining magistrate is right. Nothing stranger [illegible] has ever been known."

"Have you any idea of the [illegible] I asked.

"None," replied Rouletabille, "none for the present. But I have an idea [illegible] The murderer did not use it."

"Good heavens! By whom, then, was [illegible]"

"[illegible] Mlle. Stangerson."

"I don't understand, or, rather I have never understood," I said.

Rouletabille shrugged his shoulders. "Is there nothing in this article in the Matin by which you were particularly struck?"

"Nothing. I have found the whole of the story [illegible] strange."

"Well, but the locked door—with the key on the inside?"

"That's the only perfectly natural thing in the whole article."

"Really! And the bolt?"

"The bolt?"

"Yes, the bolt also inside the room, a still further protection against entry. [illegible]

[illegible]

"Is that all?" cried Rouletabille. [illegible]

CHAPTER III.

"A Man Has Passed Like a Shadow Through the Blinds."

[illegible]

Good Form

The person who can talk entertainingly and listen attentively is the best type of guest at social gatherings, for she who chatters incessantly is almost more undesirable than one who is too quiet, for the latter gives opportunity for other persons to express themselves, while with the former to say even one word is often a struggle.

The balance between these extremes is the art of stimulating a temporary companion to conversation, and at no place is it more important to adopt the correct attitude than at a dinner. More than one man has been obliged to talk so much when sitting beside a quiet woman that he has not eaten enough. Such conduct on the part of a woman is decidedly inconsiderate, for if she is not willing to add her quota to the evening's entertainment she should stay at home.

At dinners and also at formal luncheons it is a good idea to watch the plates of neighbors, and if one person has been talking so much as to have fallen behind in the course it is tactful to take conversation into one's own hands, giving the other a chance to listen and at the same time to eat.

It is not good form to monopolize the attention of one neighbor to such an extent as to prevent him or her from talking with the person on the other side. Often it is a temptation when on one side is an attractive person and on the other one who is dull, but politeness makes dividing the attention necessary.

If one person is kept constantly in conversation by one neighbor at dinner it means that he or she on the other side sits much of the time with no one to talk to, for the guest further on is certainly giving some time to the [illegible]

MATHEMATICS.

Used to Locate an Aerolite That No One Had Ever Seen.

Arithmetic, algebra and trigonometry are not romantic, but they may accomplish things which greatly impress the imagination. By means of them a professor at Yale university found a few years ago an aerolite that no one had ever seen.

It appears that a photographer in Ansonia, Conn., was occupied in taking pictures by the aid of a telescope of a comet which was invisible to the naked eye. When his negatives were developed one of them revealed the fall of a meteor. It was too small an object to attract the attention of the unaided eyes, but its line on the photograph indicated that it must have come to the earth.

The picture was shown to an astronomical professor at Yale. Ascertaining the point of observation and reckoning with the aid of the data which the photograph itself supplied, he made a calculation which proved that the meteor must have fallen in the neighborhood of a reservoir some two miles north of Danbury, Conn. There the aerolite was found in the very place indicated by the calculation. It was [illegible] in form, measured fifteen and a half inches in length, seven and a half inches in diameter and weighed twenty [illegible] pounds. It was sent to the museum of Yale university, where it serves not only as an illustration of [illegible] Pittsburg Dispatch.

KEEP BABY'S SKIN CLEAR.

Few parents realize how many estimable lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic and torturing, disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings dispelled.

To this end nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the use of Cuticura Soap, assisted when necessary by Cuticura Ointment. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, U. S. A., sole proprietors, for their free 32-page Cuticura Book, telling all about the care and treatment of the skin.

[illegible]

A Famous English Lawyer.

The statement that Mr. Rufus Isaacs, K.C., the great English lawyer, is said to be anxious not to receive the usual honor of knighthood, which is conferred upon the occasion of appointment to the office of Solicitor-General, may have more truth in it than many of the stories of a similar character which reach Canada. Mr. Isaacs, who is of Jewish descent and the son of a London merchant, has always been a man of most democratic tastes, although for many years he has been recognized as a man of great wealth. Besides many extensive and remunerative investments, Mr. Isaacs has for some years past been making an income of $100,000 per annum, and he can therefore afford the temporary loss of his practice at the Bar. He has had an extraordinary career. As a youngster he served in the mercantile marine, but he soon tired of the sea, and went into a business office where he learned many things about stocks and shares, knowledge which had stood him in good stead when he has been compelled to handle such difficult financial problems as were found in the notorious Whitaker Wright case. For the past ten years Mr. Isaacs has gone into society only on very rare or great occasions. After a trying day in the law courts he would go straight to his home, eat a very light meal and go to bed at nine o'clock. At four o'clock in the morning the devoted man servant, who has been with him for many years and who is known as "Faithful William," would prepare his master's breakfast and bring him a great bundle of briefs to read. For some time to come at any rate, Mr. Isaacs, or rather Sir Rufus, will be able to rise at less unusual hours and go to bed as late as he likes. A well-known Canadian lawyer who often goes over to England to plead before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and has been a guest of Mr. Isaacs's, says he never saw such a splendidly modest home as that of the great English lawyer, nor withal, one so cozy and comfortable.

The "Biscuit Baronet."

Popularly known as the "Biscuit Baronet," one of the most enterprising and generous business men of our time has passed away in the person of Sir Walter Palmer, who died recently. The third son of one of the founders of Messrs. Huntley and Palmers, the famous biscuit-makers of Reading, Sir Walter was beloved by all who knew him. He was possessed of vast wealth, and was a physical [illegible] of considerable repute. For many years he was chairman of the council of Reading University College and a member of the Senate of London University. Besides being a [illegible] of the famous biscuit firm, [illegible] Sir Walter [illegible] great attention to agricultural [illegible] author of a book on "Poultry Farming," which has been translated into several European languages.

WHY BACKS ACHE

The Kidneys Seldom to Blame—The Trouble Due to Blood Impurities

[illegible] ten come from the trouble [illegible] low as surely on any weakness or irregularity in the usual blood supply. [illegible] the [illegible] market [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] year [illegible] Ontario [illegible] Winnipeg [illegible] leads in the [illegible] ing market in America.

At Ottawa, General Baden Powell in an interview made an [illegible] esting statement relative to Canadian boys. The General as we are all aware, is the father of the Boy Scout movement and has been inspecting the Boy Scouts throughout Canada. Baden-Powell made the statement that he had found that Canadian boys learn the rudiments of military training quicker than do the boys of the mother country.

President Hayes of the G. T. P. says that company will build a branch from at or near Wainwright to Battleford.

At Macleod, E. M. Macdonald M. P., of the Laurier party, stated that the time would come when the Hon. A. L. Sifton, premier of Alberta, would be called to serve the Dominion at Ottawa.

The scope of Canada's national literature is not known as generally as might be by Canadians. How many know that Grant Allen, the novelist, poet and naturalist, was a Kingston, Ont., boy, and that his father before him was a noted man of letters; or that J. Stevens Clouston whose "Lunatics at Large" has run into so many editions abroad is a Canadian, or Robt. Barr, or that "What a Friend we Have in Jesus," one of the sweetest hymns in the language is by Joseph Scriven, another Canadian. Of recent years such men as Archibald Lampman, D. Drummond, Louis Frechette, C. D. G. Roberts, Bliss Carman, Ralph Connor, Robert W. Service, Arthur Stringer, Harvey J. O'Higgins, Norman Duncan, Sir Gilbert Parker and Arthur McFarlane have brought home to the people of Canada some idea of how big the Dominion looms up in the world of letters. These are the men who have achieved present day note, but in addition to these Canada lists among her bards some of the sweetest singers in the language, men and women whose work is summed up in a few stanzas, whose verses will be remembered when most of the magazines ephemera has gone to its long rest.

Well-Digger Loses Life

Sylvester Neil Fell Down Well Near Islay and is Suffocated

A sad accident took place on the farm of Mr. Buchanan two miles south of Islay on Wednesday last which resulted in the death of a well digger named Sylvester Neil. Neil had been lowered down the well, which was an 18 inch bore, with a bar to loosen a stone and was being hauled up again by Buchanan when he apparently lost his grip on the cable and fell. It was an hour and a half later before Neil was hauled to the surface by means of a rope and grappling iron. He still gave evidence of life but finally succumbed.

The remains were interred at Islay Saturday.

KING EDWARD JOTS

The King Edward school is again running on schedule time, Mrs. J. Harris Speer in charge.

Jake Pearson has just returned from an extended visit to his parents near Hamilton, Ont., and is again in charge of his homestead S. W. 30-[illegible].

Frank Davis has disposed of his company land, S. W. 17-52-6, to James Service of Dakota, who will take up his residence on the quarter this fall or in the spring.

The cattle are now enjoying their best season of the year. With abundant pasture and free from the torment of flies they are putting on flesh rapidly and will probably go into winter quarters well fortified to stand the lower temperature of that season.

Most farmers have stopped haying owing to pressure of other duties and the difficulty of cutting the grass at this season. The mower sickle gums up to such an extent that the draught is too heavy for an ordinary team of horses.

Oh hunter spare that chicken, spoil not it's feathered brow, Its sweet young life too soon would end if you shoot it now. Put up your blunderbuss, till later in the Fall and we fine that other cuss, who shoots both big and small.

OBITUARY

Our community, at Innisfree, was again suddenly visited by the grim reaper death on Wednesday p.m., August 31st, when Ralph Parker, aged 8 years, eldest son of John J. and Marie Gulley, while driving a stock wagon for his father, dropped one of the lines and trying to reach it stepped down on the pole, which frightened the horses. Mr. Gulley saw the team move and caught one line but did not see the danger little Ralph was in, before the team could be stopped one wheel had passed over his body. He lived 6 hours and was conscious most of the time. All that human skill could do was done, but at 9 o'clock he passed away.

Ralph was a very bright and understanding child for his years and had a great care over his little brother and sister. In this way he was a great help as well as a comfort to his mother, who says she would always find his little Bible at his side or on the floor, after reading himself to sleep. He delighted in learning the "Golden Text" for S. school and could answer intelligently many questions that bothered older scholars. Ralph always asked permission of his mother when wanting to leave her side. Even the last act was to ask if he could help his papa, and put on his little shoes and stockings for the last time. And today we believe that Ralph's feet have been shod with the "Preparation of the Gospel of Peace" and his sweet voice, for he was a beautiful singer, has joined the angelic Choir.

The funeral services were conducted on Friday P. M. by Pastor Rev. A. J. Finlayson assisted by Rev. W. Robinson and Bro. Horace Finch, who spoke kind words to a large gathering of sorrowing friends and neighbors, who sympathize with them in their bereavement.

May the Good Shepherd who said "Suffer little children to come unto me" be their support in this hour of grief.

One Client Lawyers.

The poverty of briefless barristers is as proverbial as that of the church mouse. It would not be an unnatural mistake to consider a barrister with only one client hardly better off than one with none. But the modern "one client lawyer" is usually a prosperous individual. Said a man well known in the business world some years ago to a friend: "I want a young lawyer to put down at a desk beside mine. I'll familiarize him with my affairs, and then I want him to keep me out of trouble." The counterpart of this lawyer, whose duty it is to act as his own client's ounce of prevention, may be found in the office of many large concerns. He is often connected with trust companies, banks, banking houses, railroad and other transportation companies and large wholesale mercantile houses. When a merchant found himself in a tangle, it was once the custom for him to go to his lawyer for advice. The results were a written "opinion" and a fee. The business man today obtains a lawyer who shall work for him alone. Again, the field of the general practitioner is narrowed.—World's Work.

Minnie Hauck as a Drummer.

Mme. Minnie Hauck was once singing at the Berlin court opera in Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment." Emperor William I., after the opera, called her into his presence and told her she had sung very nicely, but that her drumming as the Daughter of the Regiment she had to play the drum—was very bad. Next morning a drum major of the First Grenadier regiment called at her hotel and said he had come to give her a drum lesson. The diva was bound to accept the instruction and learned the whole art of drumming in a couple of dozen lessons. Then the kaiser sent to ask how she was getting on, and, hearing that she had made excellent progress, he commanded a performance of "A Daughter of the Regiment." Mme. Hauck acquitted herself excellently in the drumming scene, and the kaiser complimented her warmly, sending her next day a real official military drum with a silver plate and [illegible].

An Interrupted Story.

Captain Williams, a jovial Irishman, known everywhere as "Bob," used to be a favorite in Dublin society many years ago. His stories were famous. Give him an incident, and he would set it out to the general admiration.

One evening he went into the club and there began telling the true tale of rescuing a lady and her daughters from a dangerous situation into which their spirited horses had brought them.

"I quieted the ladies," said he, "and I quieted the horses. And the gratitude of the ladies! Me boys, I shouldn't be surprised if her ladyship left me"—

At that moment a little Irish page in livery appeared.

"Sir," said he, "Lady Arnold says she lost her purse when yez helped her out of the carriage, and plaze, she says, do yez know anything about it?"

The captain's story was never finished.

Dodging an Interview.

A young reporter once called to interview Senator Quay and found him reading. After formal greetings had been exchanged the senator said: "Do you play poker? Of course you do once in awhile. Then you will find this one of the best poker stories you ever saw," handing the newspaper man a book. The reporter out of politeness read a page. "Ah," said the senator, "I see you are interested. Take the book along and read it at your leisure. Good evening." And the dazed young journalist was out on the sidewalk before he could recover his breath.

It's Never Given Away.

"Pa," said Johnny, who is a persistent knowledge seeker, "what is a law giver?"

"There isn't any such thing, Johnny," replied the old gentleman, who had been involved in considerable litigation [illegible] time.

"But this book says that somebody was a great lawgiver," persisted the youngster.

"Then it's a mistake," rejoined his father. "Law is never given. It's retailed in very small quantities at very high figures."

How He Kept Humble.

Hiller—You'll excuse me, but I never see your name in the list of subscribers for the poor of the village.

Slenderer—Naturally. You see, it is this way. I pity the poor awfully, and I am rather proud that I do pity them. If I should go so far as to give them money I'd be so vain there'd be no living in the same town with me.

Harking Back.

"You were telling Miss Gussip this morning that you were going to be married again, weren't you?" said the shrewd man.

RUMELY ENGINES

Will run many, many seasons. Each season's run will be profitable, because RUMELY Engines have boiler construction with full water circulation fire box construction, large heating surface area. Gearing made of steel and semi-steel, massive in size and design. Traction wheels built of steel are strong and broad and have large heavy grousers that grip the earth firmly.

Rumely Engines are Rear-Mounted and Double Geared

These features very materially lengthen the life of the engine as they are important factors in reducing friction and saving power and power savers mean profits for the threshermen

This construction permits of the power pushing the engine straight ahead from the rear instead of pulling with a damaging strain on the side of the boiler and entirely does away with the possibilities of vibration, side play, or twisting of the counter shaft and sagging or tipping in of the drive wheels.

THE CONSERVATION OF NATIONAL RESOURCES

The general public is ... ed at ... with ... advantages ... future.

A little ... might throw considerable ... the value of the work dealing with prospective criminals during their days of childhood. The average working man has an earning capacity of $600 per year. He gives to the world 20 years of service which means that he ... in a life time the sum of $12,000. The man of a little higher grade with a little more education is worth at least $1,000 a year to the state. His term of working capacity is 25 years, which means that he adds $25,000 to the assets of the world in his life time. It is estimated that it costs $10,000 to convict and take care of an habitual criminal in a life of 20 years of crime. This means that the state has lost the value of the man's labour to the extent of $25,000. The habitual criminal is a man whose mental make-up is capable, as a rule, of taking a fair standing in matters requiring education. The state not only loses his producing capacity but invests $10,000 to prevent him from doing harm to and destroying the property of all harmless individuals.

The cost of saving a child to citizenship in many cases ... exceed the sum of five ... dollars. This includes the conditions of cruelty or neglect wherein he would grow up to be a ... an individual with a non-producing capacity ... are so placed that they must ... is set at ... amount.

The money saved to the state is apparent to anyone who gives the matter a moment's thought. A great deal of credit is given to the man who evolves a system or a scheme whereby $10,000 worth of lumber or mineral resources are saved for the state. The children of the nation are as a rule looked upon as a commodity without commercial value, and the tendency is to leave them in conditions of neglect and abuse until such time as they have reached the place where they have become so saturated in crime and debauchery that it is impossible to rescue them, or until such time as they have reached an earning capacity, when they are overworked and propelled to the place of rebellion and revolt.

A child placed in normal home conditions will, as a rule, find example and precedent guiding it naturally and without force into the channels of life which are bound to result in its becoming a normal citizen with normal views of life and its requirements.

The Children's Aid Society is conserving the wealth of the nation in guarding the interests of the child, and is building up hundreds of thousands of dollars of productive ... for which it deserves ... credit and your hearty support. GETTING AFTER THE FRAUDULENT DEBTOR

That the wholesale houses doing business in the western provinces ... to protect themselves and the honest dealers with ... doing business ... is ... manifested by the action the Canadian Credit Men's Association is taking in regard to raising a fund to take criminal action against those persons who deliberately plan to defraud their creditors, or who, having placed themselves in a financially embarrassed position by injudicious trading, neglect of business, or other causes, take steps to protect their own interests by indulging in practices that render them liable to criminal action.

During the past few years it is stated these cases have become alarmingly frequent and have resulted in large financial losses to the wholesale trade. They are not confined to any particular district, or any particular class of trade, but affect all classes and districts, while they may be more noticeable when times are dull, the good times are not by any means immune from what is known and generally spoken of as the "fraudulent debtor."

In past years the "fraudulent debtor" has, it is considered, had a comparatively easy time of it, and has been able to lay his schemes and carry them into effect with the assurance that the defrauded creditors were either too busy, or had not sufficient organization amongst themselves to take steps to investigate the matter and bring the offender to justice.

It is pointed out that this lack of action on behalf of the wholesale merchants who have been fleeced, has resulted in an amount of assurance being gained by a certain class of persons calling themselves "merchants" that would hardly be realized by the general public, but some of the coups that have been effected in recent years, have aroused such a feeling that prompt action is being taken, which will render the practice in future a very dangerous one to follow.

Every honest trader throughout the country will hail with satisfaction the steps that the wholesalers are taking, as the dishonest merchant is a menace to every person with whom he comes in contact, and to no one more so than the storekeeper, who may be doing business alongside of him.

In one or two isolated cases, the defrauded creditors have gone to the expense of having lawyers and detectives to follow up the criminals, and have been successful in their quest, but now that they have formed themselves into an association, with a special committee to look after such men, every case that arises effecting any of their members, will be the subject for a searching investigation.

Messrs. Campbell, Pitblado & Co., have been appointed solicitors to the association, and are already investigating three cases brought to the notice of the committee.

The fund to be raised will be ample for the purpose, and it is anticipated by the date of the next monthly meeting, which will be held on Sept. 12, at the Royal Alexandra hotel, that a plan will be submitted for the raising of a sufficient fund to ensure the successful prosecution of every man who sets out to defraud his creditors. There is no doubt that this plan will be adopted and earnestly supported by the business community of the three provinces.

CUMMINGS

Great sympathy is felt in this district with Mr. and Mrs C. W. McCurdy and family in the sudden death of their daughter Enis, 12 years old, on Wednesday last from acute Brights disease, it was only on the Monday that anything serious was anticipated and she then sank rapidly. Deceased was a bright, smart girl her untimely end will be felt by all who knew her. Very few in the district knew of her death until too late to attend the short service held at the home by Mr. Black Presbyterian student before the cottage was taken to Vermilion en route for their old home in Illinois U. S. A. where she expressed a wish to be taken.

On Sunday last Mr. Black Presbyterian student preached his farewell service in the Heatherbell school. Mr. Black is returning to McGill College Montreal. During his stay here he won the respect of all with whom he came in contact. We trust he may see his way clear to come back into this field again next year, if he should do so he would receive a hearty welcome.

DEWBERRY

It was with much regret that the community learned of the death of Mr. Geo. Gardiner last Sunday. He had been under the doctors care for the past year but few people were expecting his sudden death.

The deceased came from England five years ago and settled on a homestead in the Dewberry district. About two years ago he opened a general store and had been doing a good business.

The funeral service was held in Hazeldeen school-house on Tuesday Sept. 6th. The burial took place in Islay cemetery.

Mr. Gardiner will be much missed in the community on account of his public spirit.

He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters living in Alberta, to mourn his loss.

Study the Right Side.

A photographer was asked the other day if there is any special reason why most photographs show the left side of the face and not the right ...

"Yes, there is a reason," he answered. "In a majority of cases the left side is the good looking side, and photographers know this and take advantage of it. On the other hand, if you want to get at the real strength and character of a person's face, man or woman, study the right side of it, the ugly side, as some portrait painters call it. There you will find the lines bold and harsh, comparatively so at any rate, with every defect accentuated. On the left side, however, everything is softened down, and the face is at its best.

"Whenever you suspect a man of trickery or deceit, or a woman either for that matter, stand on his right and closely watch his expression. There never was an actor skillful enough to cover up the marks of his real personality, as nature has stamped them on the right side of his face."

"London" Likes It "Ot."

It may be that the quality of imagination was lacking in the Boston and Salem merchants who attempted in 1842 to introduce American ice into London. One of them tried to attain this end by demonstrating the merits of American iced drinks. He hired a hall, as the story goes, and trained a number of men to mix the cool beverages of his native land. The members of the Fishmongers' association, presumably as fond of turtle as aldermen themselves were the guests. The waiters made an imposing entry, but, alas, the first sound that met the ear of the American "promoter," expecting a chorus of approval, was that of an English voice calling for hot water and saying, "I prefer it, all in all." The American completes the story, "I made a dead rush for the door, next day settled my bills in London, took train for Liverpool and the steamer for Boston and counted up a clear loss of $1,300."
—M. A. De Wolfe Howe in Atlantic.

The Charge at Marengo.

As an instance of magnificent blundering, sung by poets and treasured in story, no record has ever fairly to come up to that of the Light brigade in the Crimean war. But perhaps, most renowned was Kellermann's charge at Marengo. ... said to Napoleon "The battle is completely lost," adding, "but it is only 4 o'clock. There is time to gain another one." A little later Kellermann ... one of the most brilliant ... even in Napoleon's career ...

One of the greatest ... of famous personages ... of life have formed of them.

It is recorded that a certain literary man of high reputation had occasion to remark to a waiter in the restaurant where he sometimes lunches,

"Waiter, this beefsteak is very tough."

The waiter looked at him with a reproachful expression and sighed ...

THE old family physician being away on a much needed vacation, his practice was intrusted to his son, a recent medical graduate. When the old man returned the youngster told him, among other things, that he had cured Miss Ferguson, an aged and wealthy patient, of her chronic indigestion.

"My boy," said the old doctor, "I'm proud of you, but Miss Ferguson's indigestion is what put you through college."

REPEAT the words the defendant used," commanded counsel for the woman plaintiff in a case of slander being tried in the First Criminal Court of Newark recently.

"I'd rather not," bashfully replied defendant. "They were hardly words to tell to a gentleman."

Whisper them to the judge, then," magnanimously suggested counsel—and the court was obliged to rap for order.

"I'm willing to bet a cent it isn't out of order," he said.

"And he dropped a cent in the slot. He didn't get any stick of gum, and he didn't get his money back.

"There," I said, "I hope you're satisfied now."

"That doesn't prove anything. Always," he granted. "The machine isn't out of order; it's built that way on purpose."

"But that's Lyeander all over."

With the Horses

THE harness horse racing season is now fairly under way, and while it is unfortunate that two of the most important meetings, those at Sarnia and London, clashed in their dates, we have already seen some exceptional racing ...

"I was thinking," said Mrs. McGoogle, "my husband is the most persistently argumentative man I ever saw. He'll controvert any proposition, no matter what it is. This morning, while we were waiting for a car, he saw the sign 'Out of Order' on one of those chewing gum slot machines.

PROFESSOR ... of Vassar, suggests that young women should pursue marriage as a profession.

"Of course, I don't mean to ... said Prof. Riley recently, "that a young woman should sell herself. I mean that she should use her brains in marrying.

"The sentimental idea of marriage so prevalent today—letting marriage come about of itself, so to speak—that idea seems to me as shiftless and foolish and lazy as the old lady's idea of spelling.

"'You know, my dear, when I don't know how to spell a word I underscore it, like this. Then, if it is spelled wrong, it passes for a good joke, and if it is spelled right it doesn't matter.'"

TWO London specialists were discussing the rubber boom, and the question naturally arose as to how long the upward movement was likely to be maintained.

One of them, who has done very well, was inclined to be somewhat pessimistic.

"You know," he observed to his friend, "something will come along and spoil this boom. If it isn't home politics or an outbreak of war it will be disease among the rubber trees, which, I'm told, once started, spreads like wild fire."

"Ah," retorted his friend, "the disease question is certainly a danger point. But I'm all right as regards that. The company I'm heavily interested in hasn't started planting yet!"

Elephant Hunting in British East Africa

MR. JAMES CLARK, formerly chief animal sculptor of the American Museum of Natural History, recently returned from a fourteen months' hunting trip to Africa, says the New York Herald. At a reception tendered in his honor a few days ago in the studio of his brother Herbert W. Clark, at No. 154 West Fifty Fifth St., Mr. Clark told this story of his remarkable escape from a herd of angry elephants.

"Our party left Nairobi late in January last on the railroad, going to the end of the line. Then we marched in to the interior for six days. We had left the last boma behind when the guides saw some elephants a long distance away on a hill slope. We left the safari to follow and made off on our mules with the guides and gun boys. The country was hilly and covered with a stubborn growth of elephant grass and bush. At times the grass was so intractable that we could do nothing but follow in the paths made by the elephants, and it was only occasionally that we could see over the grass, which was most of the time three or four feet over our heads as we sat on our mules.

"We had come to within several hundred yards of a herd of elephants feeding among some trees. We were unconscious of the presence of the animals, but the keen vision of the native guides spied the familiar color of their hides and sent up a shout, 'Elephants!'

"The guides pointed and we looked in the direction indicated, but could see nothing. Steadily fixing our gaze at the place designated, however, we at last saw a slate colored mass moving which to us seemed to be a part of the foliage. ...

"We then kept very quiet for a while. When we resumed our approach we heard the sound again. We halted and at intervals the same rumble came ...

... when several shots rang out. We realized the hunters had got on to the herd. We galloped to a high point and could see the big herd all massed, but could not see the men, although the firing continued. The elephants turned and came our way, and we saw it would be a good chance to look them over for fine tusks. We gave the mules to the boys and told them to make for safety while we went for the trees.

"I climbed the tree from which I had previously watched the elephants. The tree had a smooth trunk for about eight feet up. I could hear the elephants crashing my way not more than a hundred yards away. I had taken both my guns, but decided to use my big one as a step in order to reach the first limb. I then slung the other over my shoulder. I wasn't sure about getting up the tree. I did get up, however, and that is about all. I had to draw breath before going higher. At last I reached a branch about six inches in diameter, and there I stayed.

"The front of the herd had just come to a stop about one hundred yards away from me, and the others came crashing through the bush and massed with the head of the cavalcade. It was a wonderful sight to see the vast bulk of elephants. The grass was long, but I was high up and not far off, so could see them and their movements well.

"The animals were infuriated. Their trunks were in the air swaying and searching for scent and screeching and bellowing. ...

... pleasant shock, that the man of the omnibus was standing close beside her. However, she slipped into the crowd and made her way quickly to the other department. Here again, as she finished, she became aware of the same man close behind her.

Now thoroughly alarmed she made her way to the costume rooms, where he could hardly follow her, and threw herself upon the mercy of the shopwalker, explaining that she feared she was being followed. ... This he did, ... her safely home.

Having an account at ... she had not needed to pay for ... things she had ordered ... she found no purse ...

Evidently that ... theft was too big for the ... and had dropped off ... Mrs. Smith's purse. He had discovered ... almost immediately ... Scotland Yard, and though assured that it would never be claimed, left it there for some months, and then had it sold for a good sum. As there were only a few shillings in her own purse, the thief had in this case got well sold for his pains.

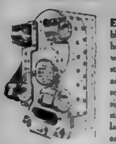
RUMELY ENGINES



Will run many, many seasons. Each season's run will be profitable, because RUMELY Engines have boiler construction with full water circulation, fire box construction, large heating surface area. Gearing made of steel and semi-steel, massive in size and design. Traction wheels built of steel are strong and broad and have large heavy grouters that grip the earth firmly.

Rumely Engines are Rear-Mounted and Double Geared

These features very materially lengthen the life of the engine as they are important factors in reducing friction and saving power and power savers mean profits for the thresherman. This construction permits of the power pushing the engine straight ahead from the rear instead of pulling with a damaging strain on the side of the boiler and entirely does away with the possibilities of vibration, side play, or twisting of the countershaft and sagging or tipping in of the drive wheels.

ALBERTA'S POLICY WILL BE ANNOUNCED TO LEGISLATURE

Premier Sifton, in Address at Macleod, States That it is Due to the Governing Body That Formal Declaration be Made at Opening of Session.

Macleod, Alta., Sept. 17—The Liberals of the Macleod district held their first meeting of the campaign for the election of a representative for the constituency in the town hall here tonight.

A large audience was present. The principal speaker was Premier Sifton, who was expected to make some definite statement regarding railroads in this province.

The premier's speech was a disappointment to those who looked for a clean cut, definite declaration of what the government intended to do. Instead he declared that it would be the legislature that would have to decide on this policy, and that nothing would be or could be said until that body met. Mr. Sifton appeared in advocacy of the candidature of E. S. Maunsell, the Liberal nominee, who is contesting the seat against Robert Patterson, the Independent Farmers' candidate.

In opening his speech Mr. Sifton said that only two classes sat in the legislature. These were the supporters of the government and those who opposed it. The former might change their mind after they got there. When the legislature met it would have the policy of the government presented to it. If that policy met with the approval of the legislature, it would support it. If it was not approved the government would be voted out of office, and he was prepared to gracefully retire.

The premier said "I have been told that it is necessary to make an announcement in regard to what the government is going to do [illegible] [illegible] the legislature [illegible] [illegible] premier of this province, I shall be perfectly free to give to that legislature my ideas in regard to what shall be done, and am satisfied to leave power if the legislature says that the policy is not in the interests of the province, but until that legislature meets, and until the report that is made to the judges [illegible] investigation of this matter is placed before the legislature [illegible] be taken by the government."

The premier said there were just two things which he intended to emphasize. One was the question of transportation [illegible] included roads and bridges [illegible] was of peculiar interest [illegible] met and railways [illegible] [illegible]

The government [illegible] the railroads [illegible] whose bonds [illegible] these [illegible] must show that they are in earnest.

Mr. Maunsell also spoke briefly together with Mr. Patterson, who had been invited [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Jenks [illegible]

With the Horses

A TEAM or single horse that will stand perfectly still, until asked to move forward, is about as sure a test of the kind of a horseman the driver is as can be found. How often do we see some spirited team stamping around, backing up, and then straining on the rein while the driver is alternately jerking at the rein, and endeavoring to get the rug around his knees, or assisting some lady perhaps, to get comfortably seated.

There is a time when this matter can be remedied. It is when the horse is receiving his first lesson. He should be taught to stand absolutely still at all times, until he receives the word of command to move on. ...

For Traction Engines, Wagons, Etc.

Mica Axle Grease

makes the wheel as nearly frictionless as possible and reduces the wear on axle and box. It ends axle troubles, saves energy in the horse, and when used on axles of traction engines economizes fuel and power.

Granite Harvester Oil — Plows, Harrows, Drills, — insures better work from the new machine and lengthens the life of the old. Wherever bearings are loose or boxes worn it takes up the play and acts like a cushion. Changes of weather do not affect it.

Standard Gas Engine Oil — Gasoline and Kerosene Engines — is the only oil you need. It provides perfect lubrication under high temperatures without appreciable carbon deposits on rings or cylinders, and is equally good for the external bearings.

Capitol Cylinder Oil — Steam Traction Engines and Steam Plants — delivers more power, and makes the engine run better and longer with less wear and tear, because its friction-reducing properties are exactly fitted to the requirements of steam traction engines and steam plants.

The Vanishing Smuggler

By STEPHEN CHALMERS

Copyright, 1910, by Edward J. Clode.

(Synopsis of Previous Chapters)

In the year 1815, little Dick Scrymgeour, living with his miserly uncle, Giles Scrymgeour, in the village of Morag, on the estuary of the Clyde, overhears by night a conversation between his guardian and a captain of a smuggling schooner. His eavesdropping is discovered, and to prevent tale bearing, he is shipped on board the vessel.

Twelve years later, the vessel returns to Morag, on one of its occasional visits. Boarded by a coastguard and a lieutenant of the revenue service, it is discovered that, contrary to regulations, young Smuggle-erie, as Dick is called, has been allowed to leave the vessel before it has been cleared by the revenue officers.

A search is made for the missing man. His boat is seen and chased, but on the moment of capture, as it seems to those on shore, it disappears from sight.

CHAPTER III

The Vanishing Smuggler

"WHAT rubbish is this!" thundered Larkin. "Are you blind?"

Then, becoming aware that he was losing his temper, he suddenly altered his tone. "Something wrong here, men! Come, there must be a passage."

At his command the cutter moved slowly into the shadow of the great black rock, which arose straight and slippery from the sea. Behind it, a semi-circular passage divided it from the mainland, where again a landing was forbidden by a perpendicular precipice. In the unnatural gloom between these formidable ramparts, no break or inlet was to be seen where a boat could have so mysteriously vanished. Yet, when continual grazing of the rocks on either side of the cutter suggested a prudent cessation of oaring, neither sight nor sound was to be seen nor heard to suggest the presence of any living thing. The waters gurgled under the barnacled sea walls, and, as the waves drew back, the tresses of seaweed dripped and trailed like wet hair.

One of the men uttered an exclamation of superstitious fear. The sense of the ghostly spread, and when the command to back out of the dangerous waterway came it was obeyed with alacrity.

Once outside, the men leaned on their oars, while Lieutenant Larkin stared unbelievingly at the Bull Rock and the cliffs before him.

"It's a trick!" he exclaimed.

What he did not say was that the truth had suddenly dawned upon him. He was at the dome of the Heather Bloom mystery, and all that was needed ...

"Of course," said Smuggle-erie, grinning. "I'm going to sit on his counter and help him brush the flies off the cheese. Poor man, he's lacking sleep since he forgot to file the edge off a guinea he gave the Laird."

"My respecks to the lass," said Gloughblossom, and added thoughtfully, "if ye should happen to see her."

"I will that," laughed Smuggle-erie, dropping down the rope ladder to the skiff alongside.

"Man," said Gloughblossom, lazily leaning over the gunwale, "I wonder ye'd tak' that Red Head an' have him get his hair cut. It bothers me."

"He has something else on hand," said Smuggle-erie with a wink, "and I'm thinkin' that with bluejackets and ... and brand new admirals, Red Mole and the whole of us'll have our hands full for a while, leastways till this schooner clears. So long, Gloughy! Keep sober."

And away shot the skiff over the calm morning waters of Morag Bay, impelled by Smuggle-erie's lusty arms. Gloughblossom watched the knife-like split of the water in the skiff's wake.

"That young," he sighed, "and that wickit! ... a life before 'im. Look who's yon in the ither skiff," he said aloud, as Smuggle-erie's little craft shot across the bows of a similar one, rowed by a young man in gray tweeds. "It looks like you lieutenant, but he's cast off his brass buttons. ... Look! look at that young deevil, wavin' his hand to the lieutenant as if he'd been at dinner wi' him the night before, instead o' runnin' for his very life!"

Gloughblossom sighed, and the ever ready sentimental tear trickled from his left eye.

"That's the way o' him. Pullin' the deevil's tail, as ye might say, puttin' a match to gunpowder to see if it'll blow. But it's the way o' youth, the way o' youth! ..."

And Gloughblossom, completely overcome by the appalling optimism of some of God's creatures, waddled into the galley, and, having reconnoitered the deck larboard and starboard, helped himself to a pan of grog and settled down in reverie.

Smuggle-erie in the meantime shot past Lieutenant Larkin, whose presence in civilian attire and in Jack Cockson's skiff, was as large print in an open book ...

for a moment, his eyes wide with mock astonishment.

"Permeesion! Permeesion!" he gasped, then burst out in a roar of rich laughter. "Nunky! Nunky! You'll be the death o' me."

"Aye, will I, some o' the days!" snarled the old man.

"That's strange," said Smuggle-erie, reaching out his hand and taking a fine silk scarf off the counter. "D'ye ken, nunky, I mind when I was a wee bit lad and slept in the garret upstairs, I used to think how some night I'd crawl down and slit your throat. That's a pretty kerchief, nunky. How'd it suit me? and after that, force open your old iron box here and take all your guineas and give all the papers and things back to the poor folk you squeezed 'em from."

"Ye—ye—oh, ye rapscallion!" hissed old Scryme, as his dutiful ward stood up before a cheap looking glass and proceeded to tie the silk scarf in place of his own more modest kerchief.

"Was it a viper I nursed in ma bosom?" cried Giles Scrymgeour. "Oh ye—ye—me that tak ye oot o' the poorhouse, where ye'd ha' been brought up ..."

"Say, nunky, honest now! Why did you take me out of the poorhouse? Wasn't it after ye'd skinned my old man to the bone that your conscience got the better o' ye?"

"Skinned yer father to the bone!" shrieked the miser. "It was havers, I tell ye, pure havers, and it was no fault o' mine if yer father was a fool!"

Smuggle-erie's face never changed at the mention of what would have roused many a man's blood. He had never known his father, or his mother. Sometimes he wondered idly if it was really a convenience to have parents, but never having known or dreamed of any tie that would not have brought hateful restraint with it, he had long ceased to trouble himself as to the ethics of the business.

"It was kind of you to take me out ..."

"Aye, aye," said Smuggle-erie, helping himself to a pocketful of tobacco ... there's going to be a wedding in Morag, and then nunky is going to do the handsome to his ... nephew, eh, nunky?" And the disrespectful young rascal patted Old Scryme in the ribs in a way that nearly made the miser faint.

FALL PLOUGHING

There are few farmers in the west today who have not learnt a much needed lesson this summer. In the years of prosperity one is apt to get careless and think that after all there is really nothing in scientific farming, because the slipshod farmer obtains almost as good returns from his poorly cultivated field as the live, intelligent man who adopts the latest and the best methods of cultivation. This summer, however, was one which showed clearly the benefits to be derived from proper methods of farming, and in all parts of the west the same tale is told, namely, "that on summer fallow and well cultivated fields splendid returns have been obtained, but the yield for the district has been lowered on account of the small yields from the weedy, uncultivated fields of the lazy or inexperienced farmer."

Three weeks ago a cry to the effect that no fall ploughing could be done on account of the dry condition of the ground was heard from all sides. Today, however, there is no cause for this. The heavy rains which have fallen over the entire country during the last two weeks, while they may have delayed harvesting to some extent, have been of untold benefit in adding to the ground enough moisture to enable the plough to pass through.

The value of early fall ploughing is that it not only saves soil moisture, but enables the nitrates and other soluble salts to develop in sufficient quantity for the next season. Another important point is that it aids the germination of weed seeds which are killed by the frost before they have reached any appreciable growth. With the land in the condition that it is at present an effort should be made by all to get as much ploughed up as possible. Six or seven inches is quite deep enough, and it would pay many a farmer to take his team away from the threshing gang and start ploughing his fields. While he will appear to be losing a tidy little sum at the present time, he will nevertheless make this amount many times over next summer from an increased crop yield, besides having the satisfaction of having a cleaner and easier worked field. Fall ploughing is a good investment and one which all should indulge in.

WOMEN TO THE FRONT

Every person who follows carefully the trend of public sentiment in various parts of the civilized world must come to the conclusion that slowly but surely the women are forging ahead and taking their place alongside of the men in the solution of national problems. Only a short time ago municipal suffrage was granted to the women of Norway. Already in the state of Colorado, the women are voting and in three additional western states the people will vote upon the question of universal suffrage this fall. At Victoria B. C., two weeks ago, by a vote of 64 to 24, the Methodist Conference refused to admit women to the church courts. Two weeks ago Dr. Helen McMurchy, of Toronto was appointed a member of the International Committee of the Congress of Hygiene at Paris, and thus recognized as one of the foremost medical authorities of the world. It is but comparatively a few years since women were not allowed to graduate from the leading universities of this continent, now the number of graduates is rapidly increasing. In Chicago, the chief position in the educational work for that city, is held by a woman; and all over the continent women are steadily making progress in securing equality with the men. Everywhere the women are organizing and carrying on a campaign for education to secure what they believe to be their rights. In the old world and in the new world they are publishing newspapers devoted to the cause of equal suffrage. They have secured the support of some of the most intelligent and able men of the world and are steadily gaining recruits. In Western Canada the farmer's associations have admitted women to their membership and invited them to take part in their deliberations, thus recognizing the intelligence and ability of the women to assist the men. Naturally there is strong opposition to this forward movement on the part of the women. Every progressive movement has its opponents, and stalwart opponents, but it is patent to every student of the times that the cause of equal suffrage is making rapid progress. Such progress is in keeping with the spirit of democracy. As civilization advances and men become more liberal minded, the claims of the women will be more generally recognized. It does not require the eye of a prophet to look into the future, and not very far distant, to see the day when the women of all democratic countries will exercise the franchise side by side with the men and take upon themselves the full share of the burden of national affairs. FATHER MURDERED BY SON

In Drunken Brawl, Son Discharges Shot-gun Into Father

Gull Lake, Sept 19.—A shocking murder occured near this place on Friday evening.

Mr. McBride and his son, Lewis, both homesteaders, who had been in town drinking freely, returned to their shack, where they engaged in a drunken brawl, during which Lewis grabbed a double-barrelled shot-gun and discharged the contents of one barrel into his father's stomach. The shot suddenly brought the younger man to his senses, and realizing what he had done, he immediately set off to town for medical assistance.

Upon explaining what occured at the homestead, he was arrested by constable Fisher, of the R. N. W. M. P. Medical aid was sent out to the father and every effort was ~~made to relieve his~~ agony. He passed away [illegible] this morning.

The coroner's jury on Saturday night found McBride guilty of the capital charge, and the preliminary hearing is to be held this afternoon.

A man named McNaught was suffocated by gas while lighting a well near Gull Lake on Saturday. He has a relative near Heward, Ask.

The Vermilion football team lost at Islay last Thursday. The score was 2 0.

Mrs. Chas. Claridge of Edmonton is spending a few weeks with her parents Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Glanville.

The Alberta Hotel has been sold to one of our well known citizens, namely, W. Telford who entered into possession of the House Monday. Under the new management we are safe in saying that this popular Hotel will enjoy an even greater patronage than that of the past.

Council met Monday night. A large amount of routine business was disposed of. The mayor and Dr. Ryan were appointed to report on a hospital site, there being a sufficient sum in hand from councillers fees—which have been set aside with this object in view—to purchase the same.

The Church of Christ will hold its regular anniversary services on the 2nd and 3rd of Oct. this year. There will be special services on Sunday an offering on the building fund of the church and a social on the Monday night following, arrangements are being made for the billeting and entertainment of any members of the church from the country who may care to attend.

Mrs. Polly Sidener returned on Friday from a summer in the Okanagan fruit country in B. C. Mrs. Sidener has taken up two claims near Vernon and has had considerable improvements put in on them in the last few months. She seems very favorably impressed with the B. C. climate and is quite enthusiastic over the prospects of the fruit country.

Mr. T Harris returned to college in Brandon on the 20th. A social in his honor was held at the Church of Christ located on W. J. Parsons place on the N. W. 24 53-6 on Friday evening, the 16th inst. The gathering was largely attended, all being anxious to show their appreciation of Mr Harris services during the past summer. A most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr Harris carries with him the best wishes of the entire community with whom he has come in contact.

Still Another Victim

London, Sept. 16 — Reggie Walker the sportsman who took Rector, Kerr and Cartmel into camp in the sprint for the Olympic championships, is sending for John Storbeck, to come to England from his South African farm and will try to arrange a match with Jack Johnson. Storbeck is a big, young Boer farmer who came over to England last spring and won the English heavy amateur championship in a few punches, beating the last of them here in hollow style. Storbeck is only 21 years old, stands full 6 feet 1 inch high and weighs when fit, about 205 pounds. He is a game, hard-hitting fighter that, with more experience, will make things troublesome for the white men who have designs on Johnson. Storbeck has never fought professionally, but in trial bouts against the best semi-professionals that have visited the Cape has more than held his own.

TRY THE MONEY-BACK CURE FOR INDIGESTION

Nine times in ten stomach derangements are responsible for a sallow complexion, dull eyes and thin body.

It is the stomach that supplies nourishing blood to the muscles, the nerves and skin. If the stomach is healthy, plenty of nutritious matter will be absorbed by the blood. If it is not healthy, the food will ferment, and undigested will pass through the bowels, furnishing so little nutritious matter that the blood becomes impoverished, and the whole health is taken.

If you suffer from nervousness, sick headache, belching of gas, sour taste in the mouth, heaviness after eating, or any other miserable stomach disturbance, you need Mi-o-na, and the sooner you get it the quicker you will be healthier and happier.

It will relieve any distressed stomach condition almost immediately. It will cure if used according to directions. Fred Long sells it for 50 cents a large box, and he thinks enough of it to guarantee it to cure indigestion.

THE JOLLY ROGER

(By Berford Delaney)

I AM a "snapper up of unconsidered trifles," although not perhaps in the sense that Shakespeare meant. On retiring from business I took up the "old curiosity" hobby. Now I am for ever haunting Christie's and Puttick's salesrooms, on the look out for small bargains—the depth of my purse will not allow me to consider large ones.

The late Marquis of Pencewerth's effects came under the auctioneer's hammer. His collection of curios were removed to Puttick and Simpson's for sale ... was catalogued simply as ... pirate's flag ...

[illegible]

The piece of parchment ... that the flag had floated from the masthead of the famous—or infamous—Captain Blackbeard's vessel when, in the seventeenth century, that gentleman was one of the terrors of the Spanish Main.

[illegible]

"One of the pirates was a little older than the other. His grip relaxed first. His death was an easy one: he dropped straight into the sea. The other's was a less merciful death: he crashed down on to the deck. The shock brought back some of the consciousness that the sea had burnt away. Broken limbed and battered as he was, he lived long enough to pronounce a curse on the flag and every soul who sailed under it. In his final grip he had torn down the bunting and reached deck with it in his hand."

"How horrible!"

[illegible]

"He proved wrong. That was his last voyage. As you know—the 'certificate' tells you so—he was hanged in chains, possibly experiencing something of the torture that he inflicted on his two ..."

[illegible]

"Of course: horrible accident! Stray shot—no one knew who fired the gun—whilst partridge shooting."

"Exactly."

"But, Phillips, you say 'exactly' in a tone as if—you surely don't——"

"... once again at the certificate you acquired with the flag," he interrupted gravely. "The previous owner was Prince Krapokin. Do you know how he died?"

[illegible]

"True to their Order."

COUSINS OF EUROPE

IN earlier days it was always the object of each reigning monarch to marry his sons or his daughters to the children of neighboring rulers. In this way he could, or believed he could, secure peace for his people.

If today it were impossible for two countries to quarrel whose ruling houses were related, Europe at large might literally turn the sword into a ploughshare, for if we except Turkey and Italy there is absolutely no other ruling family upon the continent of any importance with whom George V. is not allied by ties of blood.

Two of the most powerful thrones in Europe are occupied by first cousins of our King. The mother of Kaiser Wilhelm was King Edward's sister, while the mother of the Czar Nicholas of Russia is sister of Queen Alexandra.

Denmark, being the original home of Queen Alexandra, is the country with which our royal house has become closely linked, and the alliance was further strengthened by the marriage of the King's sister to the Danish Prince who is now King Haakon of Norway.

The marriage of young Alfonso of Spain with the daughter of Princess Beatrice created a close link between the two countries, and placed a royal crown upon the head of another cousin of the King.

The Czarina, as well as her august husband, is a cousin of our King. She was Alix Victoria, youngest daughter of the late Princess Alice, and is, therefore, a first cousin of the occupant of the British throne. The family likeness between the Czar and King George is very strong, and the two are excellent friends.

Another country the throne of which will, in all human probability, be occupied by two first cousins of our King is ...

[illegible]

BIGGER RIVER THAN THE MISSISSIPPI

[illegible]

"... from the constant overflow of their vast cisterns under the mountains, now spread their clear and blue waters, heated by the volcanic furnaces they have passed. By the joint influx of these rivers into the Caribbean Sea, its western surface is elevated several feet above the level of the ocean; and pouring into the Gulf of Mexico, becomes the 'Gulf Stream,' until now one of the mooted puzzles of the world."

TO LAUNDER EMBROIDERY

MOST housekeepers are proud of their collection of fine lace and embroidery, and while the average woman takes the greatest care of her lace, she is not always as careful as she should be when "doing up" her embroidery. Handsome pieces of embroidery should be laundered by themselves, never in the general wash. To be sure they are carefully done do not give them out on wash day; this will avoid temptation.

If you are not sure of careful laundering learn to do valuable pieces of embroidery yourself. It is only a matter of time, care, and knowledge.

Take a time that will not be interrupted, as embroidered pieces should not be hung up to dry, nor should they be left until finished.

Make a light suds with a good soap and lukewarm water, put the linen in it, a piece at a time, and squeeze gently. If there are soiled spots rub with soap, but do not rub the whole piece. Rinse three times in water of the same temperature.

Do not wring out. Put the article flat between two Turkish towels so the embroidered piece does not fold over on itself without the towel between. Press with hands until almost dry.

While still damp place face downward on heavily padded ironing board. ...

[illegible]

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

[illegible]

... half full of hot water. It will come off easily.

Clothes should always be thoroughly aired and dried after being cleaned, or they will become sour; and white goods will turn yellow.

To preserve the flavor of tender peas, boil them for a little while in the pods, which may then be removed, and the cooking completed.

Either cold or lukewarm water should be used for cleaning bread or pastry boards. Hot water softens the wood and causes grease to spread.

When the tin moulds are used for boiling or steaming puddings, remember to grease the cover of the mould as well as the mould itself with butter.

To clean and brighten rugs, have a clean mop, wring out of clean warm water in which is one-half cup of ammonia. Mop the rug as you would a floor.

A vegetable brush should be found in every kitchen. Roots may be cleaned more readily with one than with the hands.

It will be economy to finish your sheets with the same width hem at each end. By so doing they can be used either side up, and gain much wear.

Sweeping linoleum with an ordinary broom is but scattering the dust. Slightly moisten a square of house flannel, tie it over the broom and then sweep.

For cleaning all kinds of teapots, pot lids, insides of pots and pans, also enamelled goods, nothing can equal wet emery cloth. It is splendid also for polishing tin or zinc basins.

How to clean gas ovens.—Put a little ammonia in the water and clean in the ordinary way. They will be found to clean more easily, as the ammonia prevents them from turning brown.

When the dust pan begins to wear out paste a piece of brown paper both inside and outside. When dry blacklead and polish, and it will last a long time. ...

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

FALL fashion rumors are in the air. In fact, many of them have already ceased to be rumors and have become substantial facts in the form of new suits, gowns, wraps and blouses. Undoubtedly these early models will be subject to modifications as the weeks go by bringing later ideas in their train; but they serve very well to indicate the correct trend in fall styles as originated in Paris, London, Berlin and Vienna.

Great interest centres in the new skirts. That they are to be narrow about the feet is a foregone conclusion, the vogue having been introduced and partly established during the late summer season. The earliest models as advanced by Paris measured not more than one yard at the bottom. They gave the courageous wearer a most awkward appearance when she attempted the difficult feat of locomotion, and gained for themselves the derisive appellations of "mummy" skirt, "hobble" skirt, "garter" skirt, and like descriptive but loose titles.

Later models have increased the width, first to one and a half yards and, more recently, to about two and one-eighth yards. It is likely that it is this latter width that will be in greatest evidence in the fall models. By way of importing ...

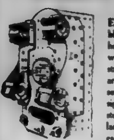
RUMELY ENGINES



Will run many, many seasons. Each season's run will be profitable, because RUMELY Engines have boiler construction with full water circulation fire box construction, large heating surface area. Gearing made of steel and semi-steel, massive in size and design. Traction wheels built of steel are strong and broad and have large heavy grouters that grip the earth firmly.

Rumely Engines are Rear-Mounted and Double Geared

These features very materially lengthen the life of the engine as they are important factors in reducing friction and saving power and power savers mean profits for the thresherman. This construction permits of the power pushing the engine straight ahead from the rear instead of pulling with a damaging strain on the side of the boiler and entirely does away with the possibilities of vibration, side play, or twisting of the countershaft and sagging or tipping in of the drive wheels.

BIG LIST OF ATTRACTIONS

The directors of the Vermilion Agricultural Society are now heaving a big sigh of relief on the perfecting of the arrangements for the Fifth Annual Exhibition to be held at the fair grounds on Wednesday next, Oct. 5. The exhibition has been well advertised this year through the energy of Secy. Taylor in having the 500 prize lists circulated throughout the length and breadth of the land six weeks before the Fair. The result has been that he has been flooded with entries from all points of the compass and hundreds of entries from new exhibitors as well as old ones have poured in and from the standpoint of exhibits the fifth annual is already stamped with success in capital letters.

Some of the improvements made by the board this year are the providing of a loading and unloading gangway for stock from wagons. What this means to stock exhibitors they well know. The society are also providing a new row of pens for sheep and swine. The poultry will be displayed in a large tent which is now en route from Winnipeg and the [illegible] will be properly exhibited in [illegible] provided by the society. Storming the Taku Forts

[illegible] of Mr. John Hemp [illegible] Rifles, as told to Walter Wood

In 1860 a [illegible] expedition against China was prepared by Great Britain and France and in August [illegible] stormed and took the Taku Forts. They afterwards advanced towards Pekin, which was invested and surrendered. [illegible] it was creepy and uncanny to find them using one as a lodging.

When all was ready, and the heavy rains allowed us to make a start, we began the operations of war by assaulting a place named Tangku. It fell to the lot and honor of the 60th to help considerably in the reduction of the place, for we found a sort of secret passage, after struggling through an appalling dust [illegible] ditch which was really like a canal. I think we must have fairly paralysed the Celestials, because they bolted as soon as we got into Tangku, and left forty-five guns in our possession. That was an appetizer for the Taku Forts, which were the great objective [illegible] attentions [illegible] could be done. We wanted to be able to reach Pekin, the capital, and it was as needful to smash the forts as it would be for an enemy who determined to raid London to break down the defences of [illegible]

[illegible] sounded the advance, and the hosts of us, French and British, marched to the assault. I liked the French. They were good men and fine men, and I believe that they were [illegible] to maintain the reputation of their country for military valor.

Those were the days, you know, when we went to our stormings with colors flying and drums beating. All that is a thing of the past, for in these times [illegible] would be too good a target. [illegible] storming has gone for ever.

In modern warfare there have been some fine performances by British [illegible]

Another young officer—Lieutenant Lenon, of the 67th—saw what was taking place, and dashed to his comrade's help, and then occurred one of the most thrilling incidents of that astonishing assault. With the swiftness of thought Lieutenant Lenon rammed the point of his sword into a crevice of the fort, and using the blade as a step, Ensign Rogers managed to scramble through [illegible] Englishman, literally, to get inside the fort. He instantly set to work to help others through, and they say that the brave Lieutenant Lenon was the third to enter.

Ensign Rogers and Lieutenant Lenon got the Victoria Cross, and with them, for the storming, John McDougall, a private of the "Little Fighting Fours," Lieutenant Burslem (he afterwards became a captain in the 60th), Private Thomas Lane of the 67th and Ensign John Worthy Chaplin of the same regiment, a gallant gentleman who afterwards became colonel of the 107th Regiment and who is still living, I believe, in Leicestershire.

Ensign Chaplin was the first man to [illegible] what is called the "cavalier" of the fort, and he was badly wounded in [illegible]. He carried the Queen's Colour [illegible] and when the storming party had made a breach, he planted the silken banner there. Another fighter, Arthur Fitzgibbon, a hospital apprentice of the Indian Medical Establishment, won the Victoria Cross at the storming of the forts, so you see, no fewer than seven crosses were awarded for the assault. I believe that except for Rorke's Drift, Taku Forts gave more V.C.'s for one event than any other action in the annals of the British Army since the decoration was instituted. The Cross does not mean everything, but it is something of a standard, at any rate, and shows how desperate and determined a business was the taking of the forts. Of those Crosses the 67th gained four, and two went to the "Little Fighting Fours."

They say that it was a Frenchman who was actually first to get a footing [illegible] mind as I talk—that of a man, firmly bound in a chair, who had been put to death by having boiling lead poured down his throat. The thing was so shocking and so real that it was hard to believe that the model was not actual flesh and blood.

Then there were other figures, the sight of which was sickening, and many of which gave us clearly to understand what the sufferings had been of those British prisoners who were restored to us, and what awful things we ourselves had escaped by not falling into the hands of the Chinamen. That was the one thing which most of us were careful not to do—fall into the enemy's hands as prisoners, for to do that, as I have said, was worse than death.

Looking back on the war and that famous storming I find that the incident in it which is most firmly impressed on my memory, and which I dwell on now, is my adventure in the village of Pehtang and my discovery of a missing French sergeant of the line.

Our convoy had gone astray, and we were badly pressed for food. Like my comrades, I was a hungry, tattered soldier, and wanted something to eat and drink, especially to eat. There was a good deal of talk just then about loot, but the only loot I craved for was something in the shape of Chinese pork or fowl. My mind did not dwell overmuch on Chinese gods or Chinese art.

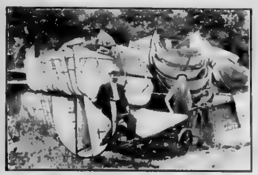
At that time I was a corporal, and in my shirt sleeves, with about eight of my companions, I wandered about the village in search of food, and perhaps a pair of boots. I particularly wanted a pair of boots, because my own were torn to shreds.

I made my way into one of the little miserable houses of the village, a sort of mud hut, walking very stealthily and carefully, because although we had defeated the Chinese, there were still a good many of them lurking about in strange and unexpected quarters. You never knew when the blade of a sword or spear would flash round a corner where you craned your neck, or when a hidden Celestial would spring upon you from the gloom.

This foraging was creepy work and I stepped into the house as craftily as [illegible] went about his business. I listened, but heard no sound which indicated the presence of an enemy. I pushed the door open and entered softly. Still there was no suspicious noise [illegible]

The New Shocker in Operation

[illegible]



The First Shipment of Improved Gleaner and Shocker

and gave me a drink, and in the shattered state of my nerves I was very grateful for the attention.

I have told you that my own boots were worn to tatters. When I examined the French sergeant I saw that he was wearing a pair of fine new boots. I coveted them, even in that awful Chinese house; but I did not touch them. I could not rob the dead. The only things I brought away were the notebook and the silver pencil—the book from which the roll was called to which no answer could be given by the sergeant of the line.

SAVING A SHORT CROP

Owing to the great heat this season, accompanied in many districts with a lack of moisture a great deal of grain will have very short straw, making it very difficult to handle. The short straws will shake out of the sheaves in the moving, and a comparatively large quantity of the grain will be a total loss. A means of overcoming this difficulty has been found, and the machine which promises to save the grain which would be otherwise lost has been put on the market.

It is claimed for this machine that it saves labor, it stooks the grain, making better and more solid shocks, it leaves all grain shocked when the binder stops. It has further advantages. It catches all loose straws and shattered out grain. It catches all foul seeds, making cleaner fields. It is easily attached to any kind of binder, and does away with the bundle carrier. It takes the side draft from the binder, and one man, who rides on the machine, operates it.

At the Agricultural College in Winnipeg, the management is delighted with the work it does. It has been thoroughly tested out there, and pronounced eminently satisfactory. It is known as the Improved Gleaner and Shocker, and is sold direct from Winnipeg by the Munro Steel & Wire Works, Limited.

KING GEORGE AS A WAR CHIEF

It may not be generally known that His Majesty King George V. is entitled to wear the buckskin coat, the moccasins and the flowing plumes of an Indian chief. At the Council of the Six Nations of Indians at Brantford, Ontario, about a year ago, a letter was read from King George, then Prince of Wales [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. Robert Barr, the novelist, accompanied the Canadian Minister to the hunting grounds of the Iroquois Indians, and the redskins were so pleased with him that they made him one of their chieftains, giving him the title of the "White Horse."

TO OVERCOME SLEEPINESS

THE first remark on the point made by the American Medicine (New York) is that "sleepiness should not be overcome as a rule, as it is nature's signal to stop work." But there are times when the worker must go on, sleepy or not, and so the writer, after a word in favor of morning work as against night work, tells the tired toiler how to refresh his weary brain. He says:

"If efforts are continued in spite of fatigue, the quality of the work is poor and the exhaustion inordinate. Students constantly make this error, and do all sorts of things to keep awake to burn the midnight oil, when, if they would go to bed and rest, they could accomplish far more in half the time in the morning with little or no fatigue. Yet there are times when sleepiness and fatigue must be overcome without resort to stimulants which injure the judgment. The tired physician with a critical case, for instance, must have his wits about him, and it will aid him vastly to go to an open window every fifteen or thirty minutes to take a dozen or two of deep inspirations of cold air. His exhaustion in the end will be great, but he can make it up later. As a matter of fact, surgeons and others, whose work requires the keenest perceptions, instinctively choose the early morning for their best efforts, reserving the afternoon for 'low pressure' tasks or recreation. That is, it is far better to so live that we do not need the stimulus of these extraordinary methods of respiration."

DAME FASHIONS DECREES

IF there is one thing that can make the heat of midsummer bearable this year it is the charm of the lingerie gowns that are designed for the warmest days. In the thinnest frocks it has been impossible to carry out many of the eccentricities which prevail in all other styles of dress. The material probably would not allow of the skirt being so narrow that the wearer is forced into a mincing step curiously different from the long, vigorous stride one has grown accustomed to in the modern woman. Nevertheless, there are no suggestions of dare or fulness in this dress, only a trifle greater width at the feet, and it is this scarcely appreciable difference which makes the lingerie gown so much more attractive than any other dress of the moment.

The newest lingerie frocks are all adorned with either ribbon or satin, or even velvet, the simplest showing a sash and various rosettes, etc., of a bright colored ribbon, while the more elaborate models are really combinations of silk or satin with embroidered batiste or French mousseline. The principal trimming is still generally on the underskirt; tucks, lace insertions, flat bands of ribbon or bias silk, all made to show through the transparent outer covering, really force a lining to be attached to the gown. The more heavily em [illegible]

Black is the reigning shade of the moment, there is no question of that, and were it not for the very great discomfort, it is probable that black would now be worn at all times in the day or evening. The smartest afternoon dresses are black and white, and the newest frocks of really summer material are in great majority white and black. The combination of black velvet with embroidered lawn is, however, rather too extreme to be likely to be very generally worn. And yet a gown of English embroidery finished from just above the knees with a band of black velvet, a black velvet girdle about the waist and worn with a toque of black velvet and a parasol of the black velvet also carried, looked not too extraordinary to be delightfully smart.

Black satin is also used to make half of the new lingerie frock. Then the parasol and hat are also of the black satin, the parasol faced with chiffon to soften it. There are a few white lace gowns placed over black chiffon just out of contrast to the multitudes of colored costumes draped in chiffon, but it remains to be seen whether the curious tone of grey thus obtained will meet with great popular approval. Separate bodices of finest appliqué lace made up on a foundation of black chiffon are undeniably very smart, as are also the lace waists veiled in black. It is a curious fashion to cover costly lace in this way, but then there is scarcely one feature in the entire realm of fashion at the present moment which is not curious. In the striving for the novel many extraordinary results have been arrived at certainly.

In the gowns of which half the skirt is composed of a foreign material the open English embroidery or eyelet hole work is more generally seen than the raised embroidery. Valenciennes and baby Irish are about equally fashionable, and there are many combinations of Cluny and even torchon lace that are very beautiful. Whole gowns of Irish lace are still the envied possession of all who can purchase them, but this year the beauty of the lace is shown to unusual advantage by the contrast of the broad bands of colored satin or of black velvet with which the costume is made up. A sash with a great butterfly bow and long ends at the back of black tulle was effective on one Irish lace costume, and these tulle sashes are already to be seen in the different colors.

Did you ever read any of Walt Mason's stuff? Of course you have heard of "Walt" the writer of prose poems, the singer of right-living songs, the [illegible] the [illegible] of heart strings. If you are not acquainted with the pithy bits written by this genius, get acquainted right away. He'll do you good. A week or so ago the daily papers had "Walt" dead and buried, had him stiff in his studio at [illegible] and the circumstances pointed to suicide by the laudanum route. Wasn't that tough? But look, a ray of light. Mason hangs out at Emporia, Kansas, not in the Quaker City, and anyhow he wasn't of the stuff that commits his "quietus" deliberately and with malice aforethought, with the liquid that makes the best of them take the count; that nothing, in some cases damnable narcotic. Well anyhow, it's alright. Walt Mason is among the living. He says so himself and he ought to know. But those newspaper reports sure had a lot of us going and nearly knocked one of our idols clean off his pedestal. — "Cog." in G. G. Guide.

H. F. Kenny, provincial secretary of the Alberta Sunday School Association arrived in Vermilion on the local Monday evening to attend the regular monthly meeting of the Central Committee of the Vermilion District S. S. A. Mr. Kenny spoke at considerable length on the changes to be made in the constitution of the association at the approaching convention in Calgary. The main difference will be that the separate districts will be much more independent than before, and will have considerably larger responsibility. Greater stress will be laid on the district conventions and in all probability the provincial conventions will be held triennially instead of yearly as has always been the custom. The convention in Calgary this year will last from Oct. 31st to Nov. 3th and will be one of the best ever held in the province. Single fare rates and [illegible] are promised to all delegates. The local central committee [illegible] the Tuesday following the third [illegible] in each month. Miss Brown and Mr. C. E. Stephenson of [illegible] were down for the meeting.

VERMILION TEACHERS MEET AT VEGREVILLE

Second Annual Meeting of Association Was Most Successful — Instructive Addresses — Officers Chosen For Year

Vegreville, Sept. 24. Thursday and Friday of this week a representative group of teachers gathered in the town of Vegreville, where the second annual meeting of the Vermilion Teacher's Association was held in the town hall.

After invocation by Rev. G. D. Armstrong, and a short address by the president, Mr. G. S. Lord, principal of the Vegreville school discussed the subject of history. His paper, which dealt with the subject in its relation to the general curriculum, its importance as a [illegible] study, and the best methods of presenting it in the different standards, form the basis of an interesting and profitable discussion.

The paper on composition, which was to have been given by Mr. W. J. Maclean, of Wainwright, was not read, owing to his absence.

In the afternoon Inspector Parker read the paper on "Physical culture in Schools," for Mr. Bissonette of Islay, who was also absent. This paper was a very comprehensive outline of physical culture, its use and abuse, its benefits, its various divisions, and proofs of its value in the daily life of teachers and pupils. Special reference was made to military drill in schools, and to the Boy Scout movement.

Following the discussion of this paper, Miss Burnett of the Calgary Normal School stepped forward to deal with "Primary Reading in Schools." Miss Burnett was enthusiastically received by the members of the convention, many of whom had come under her instruction at the normal.

During the course of this paper, the convention resolved itself into a primary class, staid inspectors and teachers holding primers in their hands while Miss Burnett stood at the black-board and carried her "pupils" away with her own enthusiasm, so that they felt that primary reading was an absorbing study, and all were sorry when the speaker dismissed her class. The discussion of this paper was one of the brightest and most instructive of the session.

The afternoon's proceedings were closed by a social hour, the staff of the Vegreville school entertaining the visiting teachers to a reception, held in the Methodist church. In the evening the town hall was crowded, the teachers and leading citizens having gathered to hear Dr. E. K. Broadus, of the University of Alberta. The doctor, who has a reputation for holding the breathless attention of his audience for as long as he may choose to speak, took as his topic "Sir Thomas Elyat, a Pioneer of Education." He showed the [illegible] point of view taken by this contemporary of Sir Thomas Moore, in his "Book of the Governour," written in 1531 the first book dealing with education written in the English language. In this book the worthy pioneer held that education ought to be limited to princes and governors. He outlined a course of education (mainly classical) for his royal youths, and dealt with the qualifications which should be possessed by the tutor. One gained an insight into the life and times of this curious old forerunner of the modern teacher, and was in all respects an admirable lecture.

A witty address of welcome, by Mayor Goodwin, and a number of musical selections completed an enjoyable evening closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Friday morning's session was marked by two papers of unusual interest, one by Mr. Dudy, of Hu-men, on "The Program of Studies in the Foreign Schools," and the other by Mr. Renwick, of Bruce, on "The Art of Questioning." The question of dealing with Reading in the Ruthenian schools was gone into for more than an hour, and almost the same time was spent on the discussion of various methods of Questioning.

Dr. Broadus took up another pioneer educator in the afternoon, namely "Roger Ascham." This was the contrasting figure to Sir Thomas Elyat, the one representing the aristocratic tutor, the other practical, professional schoolmaster. Roger Ascham's method of teaching Latin was applied, point by point, to the teaching of English literature. The Doctor quoted at some length from the writings of this man, who at the same time taught Queen Elizabeth and Lady Jane Grey, was a celebrated archer, an orator, a Latin secretary, and the trusted confident and secretary of an ambassador. The Doctor also answered many questions re the teaching of English in the various grades.

The election of officers and the purely official business of the convention followed. A number of resolutions were adopted, and a delegate selected for the Alberta Teachers Association.

As a whole, this convention was a most instructive one for all concerned, and the officers are to be congratulated on their success.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

Hon. president, Inspector Parker, Vermilion; president, Mr. Hartley, Vermilion; first vice-president, Miss H. Forrest, Vegreville; second vice-president, Mr. Eliott, Mundare; secretary treasurer, Mr. Roxborough, Lamont; and an executive committee of five members.

WANTED ON CHARGE OF FALSE PRETENCES

Warrant Out for R. R. Stevens Who Was Operating Well Boring Machine Here

Vermilion, Sept. 26. — R. R. Stevens, who was in partnership with A. R. Arthurs formerly of Radisson, in a well boring outfit which has been operating around Vermilion for the past few weeks, is wanted by the authorities.

Stevens sold a bay mare, a Canada road cart and a set of single driving harness to W. R. Hayward last Friday for $150.00. Subsequently Hayward began to grow suspicious and informed the mounted police of Vermilion, who at once wired to the R. N. W. M. P. station at Radisson, Sask., to see if Stevens was alright and owned stuff in question. In reply he was notified that Stevens had bought the outfit from Boyd Bros. of that place paying part cash and lien note for balance. Constable McPhail explained reply of telegram to complainant who consequently laid charge against Stevens for receiving some $150 by false pretences. A description of Stevens has been sent to all the police detachments in the Division.

Stevens and Arthurs it appears were operating the machine on half interest for a party at Radisson. Stevens drew the full amount for work done for town some $97.00 and hired a liveryman to drive him to Mannville Friday last where he took the night express for Edmonton.

Constable McPhail's investigation goes to show that Stevens is well known in police circles, having spent some time in Regina jail and leaving Regina and coming to Radisson he left there under a cloud. [illegible] also wanted here on other charges.

1500 Bushels Off 25 Acres

60 Bushel Average Oats On Farm of Chas. Pilkie Two Miles From Town

Grain producing land right up to the borders of the town is what we have out here at Vermilion, and it is a fact that some of the heaviest crops to be threshed this fall will be right around the town. This means a lot to the farmer so situated as to be able to put his grain on the market direct from the machine at the minimum of expense. Over 1200 acres of prairie land were turned over by steam plowing outfits this season within three miles of the town. At this rate of cultivation it will mean but a comparatively short period in the history of development when the bulk of the grain to be marketed from the outskirts of Vermilion alone will be enormous.

The output from the land of Chas. Pilkie, 2 miles east of town, is a fair indication of the soil's productiveness and the dead sure thing in crops in the Vermilion district.

Mr. Pilkie had the threshers on his place last Thursday and stook threshed a field of oats comprising exactly 25 acres by actual measurement. The machine returns showed 1500 bushels or the splendid average of 60 bushels to the acre. The oats are a fine sample and weigh 42 pounds to the measured bushel. Mr. Pilkie is well satisfied with his crop which he says is quite good enough for him.

HANDICAPPED

This is the Case with Many Vermilion People

Too many Vermilion citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest, and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

Mrs. J. Griffith, of Main street, Hepworth, Ont., says:

"A heavy bearing down pain had settled across my back and sides. There was a soreness in the kidney region and I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself up. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretions of the kidneys and had often been just as done out in the morning as on retiring. A languid feeling would come over me and I would have to let my housework stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded I would try them, which I did and soon found the long sought relief. The kidney secretions were soon regulated, my back strengthened and I began to feel better and stronger. I am able to enjoy my sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me." For sale in Vermilion by F. C. Long. Sold by dealers price 50 cents. The R. T. CHAPTER IV.—(Continued)

Grant's Confession.

"I'VE known you twenty years, lad. Twelve years ago that mistake o' nature, called Giles Strymegeour, would ha' drowned you like a blind kitten ower the Bull Rock if I hadn't a word to say. Ye needn't thank me for that. It might ha' been as well for you if I'd let him have his way."

The man stopped short in his restless tread and rapped his knuckles on the table in the gesture so characteristic of him when strongly moved.

"Smuggle-erie, I'm sick of it! Ashamed of it! I looked through the window a minute ago and saw you and that puir lass on the beach, and I was more ashamed of it than ever. Not that it is my mind, Smuggle-erie, that you should marry my lass, Grant. I do not say 'aye' or 'no' to that, for there is no time for it now. You're as good a lad as any I know, and a great deal better than most, but——"

He stopped, confused. He had lost the drift of his words in his agitation and eagerness to get them out.

"Smuggle-erie, I'll tell ye something," he began again, his voice deep with the thing that was gripping at his heart. "Ye mind one night last week in the channel, I threw Ironghlassen down the companion? It's all right now. I gave him a pound of tobacco. But no doubt you wondered at it. I am a hard man, but not a violent one. Twelve years ago on that very night I saved your neck, lad, in the lodge by the Laird's gate, and half an hour later, lad, I held my ... my wife, Smuggle-erie—and——"

"I can't tell it to ye, lad. I'd make a baim o' mysel'. But while I don't say it killed her, it helped, it helped!"

Smuggle-erie shifted uneasily in his seat. Grant walked to the window and looked out. ...

"You're a good guesser," said Smuggle-erie, smiling. "He went exploring this morning in old Jock Cookson's skiff."

The announcement had a bad effect upon Grant. He gripped the edge of the table and stared at the young sailor.

"So—already!" he almost groaned. "You saw him?"

"He'll find nothing," said Smuggle-erie assuredly. "It is full tide. Now, if he'd taken a lamp last night he might have seen wonders."

The captain sighed his relief and went back to the window.

"Come to think of it, though," added Smuggle-erie, "I think I'll go and clear the coast."

"Do, man—do!" Grant pleaded. "There must not be a sign—not a sign!"

Smuggle-erie arose and prepared to go. As he passed through the parlor door, he glanced back at Captain John Grant. The big sea master was again staring out of the window, and the younger man thought he heard him saying, half to himself:

"No! They could hear them breathing—hear them breathing!"

CHAPTER V

Whirled Into the Unknown

When Lieutenant Ben Larkin, rowing across the bay in Cookson's skiff, passed Smuggle-erie, as the latter was rowing ashore, he felt amused at their passage of words, but more amused at Smuggle-erie's gay attire. Whatever position toward each other fate had decreed for them, the lieutenant would have been willing to admit that he, at least, bore no ill feeling toward his opponent. He wondered what Smuggle-erie meant by "grand flounder spearing." ...

That Reminds Me

On the first night of a new piece, a pretty young actress advanced to the front of the stage flaunting in an exquisite new costume. "That must have cost three thousand francs!" said, audibly, a lady who sat with her husband in the front row. "No, no—only twenty five hundred," he said, mechanically. Then he found her eye fixed on him, and was silent.

An old lawyer in Paris had instructed a very young client of his to weep every time he struck the desk with his hand. Unfortunately, the barrister forgot himself and struck the desk at the wrong moment; the client fell to sobbing and crying. "What is the matter with you?" asked the presiding judge. "Well, he told me to cry as often as he struck the table." Here was a nice [illegible], but the astute lawyer was equal to the occasion. Mrs. Somerville had, to a great extent, the power of concentration, and became so absorbed in her task as to be unconscious of what was going on around her. Dr. Somerville told Harriet Martineau that he once laid a wager with a friend that he would abuse Mrs. Somerville in a loud voice to her face and she would take no notice, and he did so. Sitting close to her, he confided to his friend the most injurious things—that she rouged, that she wore a wig, and other such nonsense, uttered in a very loud voice. Her daughters were in a roar of laughter, while the slandered lady sat placidly writing. At last her husband made a dead pause after her name, on which she looked up with an innocent, "Did you speak to me?"

One of the foremost lawyers in England is Lord Halsbury, who was Lord Chancellor in the Balfour Ministry. A friend tells this story of his career at the bar.

He was once arguing a case on behalf of a Welshman, and showed great knowledge of the principality and its people.

"Come, come," said the judge at last, "you know you cannot make yourself out to be a Welshman."

"Perhaps not," replied the barrister, "but I have made a great deal of money out of Welshmen in my time."

"Well, then," replied the judge, "we may [illegible] call you a Welshman by extraction."

There was an amusing "give away" in a case tried in a Southern court not long ago. A colored man, charged with stealing a watch, pleaded not guilty, and, moreover, he brought against the complainant a counter-charge of assault. This man, he averred, had endeavored to kill him with an iron kettle.

During cross-examination there was quite a flurry. "Dare you to say," demanded the attorney, who had the negro on the grill, "dare you to say that my client attacked you with a kettle?"

"But what he done, sah," said the defendant with a nervous gulp.

"With a kettle, eh?" sarcastically reiterated the lawyer. "That's a fine story for a big, strong fellow like you to impose upon this honorable court! Had you nothing with which to defend yourself?"

"Only de watch, sah," was the unwary response, "but what's a watch agin a kettle, sah?"

A NOVEL DIAMOND THEFT

A [illegible]

Detroit fixtures have been keyed up for a hard fight. A $14,000 stake is worth getting a colt ready for, no matter when it is to be trotted, and my guess is that when Geers and the other good colt handlers come on the track at Detroit their pupils will be trained to the minute and will go about as good miles as any they will show later in the campaign. Last year Nancy McKerron was as good at Detroit as anywhere, and her second heat in 2.10½ gave the filly a standing among the high class three year old trotters that a considerably faster mile later in the season would not have furnished, because in October Czarevna, Soprano, and Heroncea Virginia were beating 2.10 every time they took the word.

Allerton's death occurred at the Hopper farm in Iowa, the old horse simply toppling over when he no longer could stand. Like a good many other horses, he "died standing."

As to Allerton's greatness, both as a trotter and a sire, there can be no question. He was as game a trotter as the day produced, and the speed question is settled by the fact that he was the first entire horse to beat 2.10 to high wheels, and his 2.09¼ mark is the best by a stallion to the hitch, barring only the 2.08¾ of Palo Alto, made two months after Allerton had beaten 2.10. By reason of being the stable companion of Axtell, when both were colts, Allerton was overshadowed by the other horse which was champion two year old trotting stallion and at three champion of all stallions and ages.

As a matter of fact Allerton was a pretty good colt trotter. John Hussey, now well known as a trainer, had charge of him as a two year old, and gave him all his work, driving him in races as well, so that when Williams, the owner of Allerton, took the nag in hand he was a made trotter and I always have credited Hussey with a good part of success of the horse, just as Ben Kenney, who made Nancy Hanks and raced her to a mark of about 2.14, should be given credit for much that Nancy was able to do later on.

It is not a certainty that racing will end on the New York tracks when the new Agnew-Perkins laws go into effect on Sept. 1, at least that is the information that comes to me from a reliable source. When the various track owners met on Thursday to discuss the steps to be taken, several racing associations expressed a willingness to go ahead with the original schedule pending a test of the new laws in the courts. [illegible] Aug. 1, so that it was decided to close the gates a month later so turfmen could make their arrangements to go elsewhere.

The racing associations, it is understood, have been legally advised that the new law prohibiting so-called bookmaking with or without writing [illegible] not prevent individual betting which is going on orally at the present time. For that reason the racing association feel confident that if betting orally is pronounced legal by the courts they cannot be held criminally liable for speculation that may take place among individuals inside the race courses.

Eminent legal authorities who have been consulted say it is not a crime to make a bet. It is also argued that when the Agnew-Perkins measures were up for final passage their sponsors made it clear that the legislation was not aimed at the private betters. On this point depends the future of racing in this state and it is said the track owners intend to make a hard fight to have it legally established.

Horses are placing mankind daily under obligations to them, says Secretary Pershing, of South Bend, Ind., Humane Society, but how cruelly and thoughtlessly are they repaid by those who are most indebted to them. A horse is a noble animal; patient, kind hearted, self sacrificing, willing to work till he dies in his tracks, uncomplaining; a lover of kind treatment, and who is willing to work a whole lifetime with no other compensation than his bed and board.

Of the many things which make the daily life of a horse miserable, two are blinders and the tight check rein, the worst parts of a horse's harness. Very many people believe that they are part and parcel of a horse and that he would not be a horse without them.

The majority of horses could readily dispense with blinders, and all could if they had never been invented. Blinders were first used by a nobleman in England to hide a defect on his horse's head and later they were found excellent locations for the displaying of his coat of arms.

A horse's head was never intended for blinders, for his eyes are so set in his head that he can see behind him without turning his head, and of course the blinders deprive him of seeing the very things he should see for his own safety as well as his driver's. A horse's eye is a beautiful object, and it is a shame to cover it.

[illegible] without blinders I always feel like stopping him and shaking hands with him. [illegible]

With the Horses

A New England man who is much interested in trotters and has bred some good ones writes to complain that in giving the news about the good three year olds that are to figure in the big stakes for that age beginning at the Detroit meeting, no mention has been made of Chatty Direct, owned in Massachusetts and named in the Horse[illegible]

THE BUCK-EYE

VOL. I — WEEKLY EDITION — NO. 40

SIR WILFRID, THE TARIFF AND THE BUCK-EYE

SIR WILFRID: The gentleman at the back of the hall has asked me about the tariff. I shall be very pleased to answer the gentleman's query. I notice that my friend in the back of the hall is smoking a cigar. That, as we all know, is an evidence of prosperity. Such has been the marvelous progress of this great and glorious west, since my government came into power that any man may, at will, smoke cigars, instead of the home-grown pipe tobacco, the fragrance of which lingers in my boyhood memories.

The gentleman at the back of the hall is even more than ordinarily fortunate, for I perceive that the cigar he is smoking is a BUCK-EYE. It is one of those extraordinary dispensations of Providence that you, my fellow Canadians in this great and glorious country, are enabled to enjoy the privilege of obtaining the BUCK-EYE at the ordinary price. And if I needed proof of the discernment of my able friend at the back of the hall, if I needed an illustration of his ability to pick out the salient points of any subject under discussion, if I were to ask for the reason why he has become so prosperous, so independent, so far-sighted, so clear of vision—I should point to his choice of the BUCK-EYE. Such keenness of perception, such admirable judgment, warrant me in the expression of the belief that so long as my government shall be in power, so long as I shall be spared to direct the destiny of this glorious young nation, so long as the sturdy pioneers of these vast western provinces display such splendid examples of judgment as are evinced by my friend in the back of the hall, I look forward to the time when the teeming population of these illimitable prairies shall be as prosperous, as happy, as independent and as fortunate as my fortunate friend in the back of the hall—when, under the guidance of Providence and the stimulation of my government, every man, woman, and child throughout these vast regions will be in a position, if they so wish, to choose the BUCK-EYE for their after-dinner cigar.

P.S.—Not only Sir Wilfrid, but every visitor to the West cannot but notice the remarkable popularity of the BUCK-EYE, the best ten-cent cigar on sale to-day.

Hook Worm of Industry

By Harrington Emerson

The poor white trash of the Southern States and the listless negroes have long been a by-word, but we suddenly find out that all these people, white and dark, are afflicted with a parasite, the hook worm, which saps their vitality, internally slowly bleeds their strength away.

The remedy is not schools, nor churches, not the suppression of the saloon, nor the strenuous of the task master—all excellent devices; the remedy is the elimination of the parasite. After this initial betterment, the principles of education, of religion, of temperance, of stimulus, may be confidently applied.

American organization for operation, whether governmental (army, navy, civil), whether state or municipal, whether industrial or commercial, proves on investigation to be inefficient, often disgracefully so, the efficiency of the output of men of militia age of the country as a whole being not more than 5 per cent., the efficiency of use of materials being not more than 60 per cent., the efficiency of equipment, facilities, averaging not [illegible] per cent. These inefficiency statements can be verified from the facts, by any competent expert, as readily as an assayer can duplicate the assay of an ore sample.

Our material resources are unsurpassed, our workers are intelligent, ambitious, versatile; our equipment, from farm lands to office buildings, from typewriters up to Mallet compounds and [illegible] it is all depreciated by an equally stupendous inefficiency. The principles of efficiency are simple, are plain, are elementary, they have been accepted and practiced [illegible] for a few [illegible] years [illegible] planet, yet in modern America, we flounder in our [illegible] operations, as hopelessly put back [illegible] victim of the South.

What is this insidious disease that wastes our resources of materials, of human [illegible], of equipment, that prevents the application of efficiency principles [illegible] the acquisition of principles of human well being?

The industrial hook worm [illegible] defective organization [illegible]

[illegible] a native chief to come to his village and shoot the baboons, as they had just killed two women, badly bitten several children, and caused such a reign of terror that the village would be abandoned if they were not killed or intimidated. He himself saw the torn and mutilated bodies of the dead women; and he stayed in the village a week, shooting so many baboons that the remainder were quite cowed."

Baboons do not act alone, but in bands with leaders, with sentinels posted. Baboons, wolves, wild dogs, and primitive man are thoroughly organized for offence and destruction. It is because the object is offence and destruction that evil characteristics are most prominent—arbitrariness, irresponsible exercise of power, harshness, cruelty, with anarchy all along the line.

Some strong male, differing not in kind but merely in degree from his fellows, has fought his way to the top, is given allegiance, based partly on fear, partly on self-interest. He delegates power, or each lower rank of followers usurp power, and this results in anarchy all along the line. Are we now writing of the African baboons, of the wolf pack, of the paleolithic war chief, of the neolithic hunting, foraging, plundering, filibustering chief, of the enterprising New York Madagascar trader, of the respectable Rhode Island slave and rum trader and privateer; or are we writing of Roosevelt's land and marine experiences as a Rough Rider with the United States army and navy; or are we writing of the shops of the great industrial incorporations, of the operation and maintenance of our railroads? It is all one and the same thing, as they are all victims of a common type of organization rooted on the same principles—individual arbitrariness at the top, usurped and delegated power down the line, anarchy everywhere.

Modern men have lost the fangs and the cruel hands of the [illegible]

Secretary of State Koenig, of New York, says the average daily receipts now for automobile licenses under the Callan law and also from chauffeurs' applications amounted to more than $5,000. Nearly one hundred clerks are kept busy attending to the rush of mail. Basing his estimate on the money received now, Mr. Koenig believes that the State will receive more than $1,000,000 yearly under the Callan law.

It is well in selecting maps to choose those which are on a scale sufficiently large to show clearly all the byways, for it frequently happens that the beauty spots in any locality are only to be reached by abandoning the larger and more important thoroughfares.

M. A. Brimacombe, P. G. and A. Fox, P. G., of Vermilion Lodge, I. O. O. F. No. 2[illegible] went up to Innisfree Monday night to assist an Edmonton degree team in instituting a lodge of Oddfellows at that town. The occasion was a memorable one in more ways than one of which more later and the lodge was duly instituted with an initial membership of 33. Messrs. Brimacombe and Fox left Vermilion on a tricycle, the motor power was refused on the grounds of speed, Bro. Fox took charge of the handle and worked heroically until Mannville was sighted. It was a long hard pump and he had had about enough, in fact was about "all in". Pulling out on time from Mannville, Bro. Brimacombe supplied the motive power. It was a long uphill grade and at the end of a five mile pump the speed of the tricycle had slackened to a scant half-a-mile an hour and Bro. Brimacombe was "in". Bro. Fox took another turn and though the speed was increased for a time to about one mile per hour it was gradually decreasing when the smoke of an engine was seen up the line. Bro. Brimacombe here suggested that they remove the car from the track as at the great speed the tricycle was travelling they would undoubtedly run into the train, but Bro. Fox pumped on. He had no [illegible] to reply, the speed [illegible] but luck was with them as they pulled into Minburn the freight [illegible] Innisfree [illegible] mistaking the [illegible] for Bob Cameron [illegible] C. Mr. Morrison of Cummings was taken ill with dysentry on the 2nd day of Oct latest reports are he is some better.

Also the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Stone is very ill with Dysentry.

A petition signed by most of the residents of the district has been sent to the postoffice Inspector at Edmonton asking for mail to be delivered at Cummings twice a week instead of once as at present what we want now is telephonic communication into the Valley when anyone is taken suddenly ill it is a long journey into town and back and there has been a few bad cases around lately, besides business [illegible] into the district [illegible] someone [illegible] the matter in hand.

WILDMERE NOTES

Our new school-mistress, Miss Craig, sister of Messrs Craig Bros. Vermilion, arrived at the Post-Office [illegible] last, and took up her duties at the school on Monday.

Colin Smith of Crystal Lake Barr [illegible] was in town from Thursday to Saturday, under care of the doctor, owing to an injury to his hand, caused by the kick of a horse. We trust he will soon be well again.

We understand that the party who went to the Grizzly Bear Coulee, big game shooting, a short time ago, forgot to take the lunch basket, never-the-less they came back with a wagon load of spoil.

All the grain in this district is cut and stacked and very soon we hope to hear the sound of the threshing whistle.

J. Graham, who was in town for supplies on Saturday, went in with one wagon but came back with two. A very good sign.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Black has preached his last sermon in the school-house; at least for some time to come; he having gone back to McGill College at Montreal, where we wish him every success.

Our friends R. Wilson and family took up their residence at Laren's Store, Cummings last Monday and, we hear, will be there for quite a while.

Robert Graham's new shack is nearly finished, and he will soon be making it his home for the winter.

Jack Frost paid rather a lengthy visit to our district on Saturday night, there being ice of considerable thickness on the lakes and sloughs.

What do you say to a twice a week mail, boys? wouldn't a quicker despatch be better.

HANDICAPPED

This is the Case with Many Vermilion People

Too many Vermilion citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest, and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

COMPLICATED CASE IN THE SUPREME COURT

Resulting From Transfer of Vermilion Hotel Property

An interesting and somewhat complicated appeal case was argued before the Supreme Court en banc last week at Edmonton.

H. J. McCue, the owner of an hotel property in Vermilion, was indebted to the Canadian Bank of Commerce in the sum of $5,700 and to the Western Canada Trading company in the sum of $2,379. To each of his creditors he gave a mortgage on his property for the amount of the obligation. Later he transferred his property to the Western Canada Trading company in trust that they might effect a sale and, after paying the two amounts due respectively to themselves and to the Canadian Bank of Commerce, place the balance in his hands.

The Western Canada Trading company mortgaged this property, held by them in trust, to the Canadian Bank of Commerce for $11,000, apparently including the amount of the two debts. Shortly after this the company went into bankruptcy and passed all its assets into the hands of S. H. Smith, official assignee, in Edmonton. The official assignee applied to the court for an order to sell the property to one Telford for $15,000. Mr. Justice Harvey confirmed the sale of the property by the assignee.

The case was appealed to the Supreme court en banc, H. A. Mackie acting as counsel for the appellant, C. A. Grant for the respondent, and H. H. Parlee for the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Mackie argued for a reversal of Mr. Justice Harvey's judgment on the grounds, first, that the price for which the property was finally disposed of was less than a fair price; and, secondly, that the property having been passed to the Western Canada Trading company in trust and the trust conditions not having been complied with, the company had not the power to assign the property of McCue as an asset of their own for the benefit of their creditors.

The judgment of Justice Harvey was set aside and the property reverts to the official assignee.

The case will be heard in December.

KING EDWARD JOTS

Threshing in this district is now well advanced, and while the result of our season's labor isn't all that could be desired, yet when we compare our lot with that of others who have been hailed out entirely, we have little cause to complain. In this section to the great credit of the settlers, not one of them was responsible for a prairie fire. In one or two instances fires were started by people passing along the trail. We managed to save a large strip about three miles wide running from near town to about twelve miles north. In this strip there was plenty of upland hay, while on the burned prairie, the upland hay, on account of the ground having been stripped of its covering of grass, which allowed it to dry out, the upland hay was not worth cutting.

The recent frosts have again put the prairie grass in [illegible] shape for burning. We are greatly surprised that no person has been careless enough to start the work of destruction as yet. We trust to each and every one we'll be [illegible] usually careful, from now [illegible] the protecting snow covers the ground, otherwise if we happen to [illegible] a long winter and feed is scarce in the spring, the result [illegible]

[illegible]

At twilight I sat on a three-legged stool, where oft I had lingered before. As high in the pail there arose the white pool, my prospects, I viewed o'er and o'er. Absorbed in the thought of big dollars to come, when no longer my lot I'd bewail, I was [illegible] from my dream now don't laugh; twas no fun, she had kicked her [illegible] foot through the pail. From Hades, a legion of imps came across, to prompt me as loudly I swore. Bespattered with milk, I could gaze on the loss, no power on earth could restore. How often the brightest of prospects are crushed, by cow-kick, frost, lightning or hail, or when affairs, business too madly we've rushed, there is somewhere a hole in the pail. But let not such trifles dry up all our mirth, we'll surely get three meals a day. 'Twill not be our lot, boys, to gain the whole earth, for thousands are grabbing that way.

DAME FASHIONS DECREES

SUCH extraordinary eccentricity as characterizes the fashions of the present season surely never was known in the world's history. The styles, the most exaggerated of the last ten centuries, have apparently been selected and put forward as the most desirable, while the sad fact exists that women who until now have been select in their taste in dress not only contemplate with equanimity the absurd caricatures that the models present, but actually select the gowns as being not only possible but what they term smart.

When the story is current that on account of the extreme scantiness of the skirt, making it impossible for a woman to take a long step, there have been within the last fortnight several serious accidents in Paris, two women in trying to step from their carriages falling and breaking their noses, there would seem to be more than eccentricity in such a fashion, but when the skirt measures one yard and a quarter around the ankles it can easily be understood that just such accidents can readily take place. And yet these absurdly [illegible] upper part of the sleeves and the waist are all in one piece and the folds of the foulard cross back and front over the veiled lace that goes around the figure. The gown shows the newest fashion in the draped effects and the foulard is so light and soft that it falls most gracefully into the folds required. Black and white is the most popular coloring, but in blue and white and gray and white there are charming copies of the model.

After much heartrending uncertainty in regard to sleeves it would seem as though a decision had finally been reached, and the small, tight sleeve has triumphed, for almost without exception sleeves are small; many are short, above the elbow; the smartest and most becoming are below the elbow. They fit quite close to the arm, are finished with a lace cuff or undersleeve, and are quite elaborate in construction, with bands of lace under a veiling of mousseline de soie and then with folds of the material of the gown. In ball gowns there is merely an apology for a sleeve, fringe or a band of jeweled passementerie, with only the small lace cap sleeve if required to make the gown becoming. Coat and jacket sleeves are all small and most carefully fitted into the armhole, so that there shall not be any fullness in the top of the shoulder; in fact, even in coats every effort is made to suppress the shoulder or armhole seam, by cutting the upper sleeve in one piece with the waist, not an easy undertaking, be it realized. For the [illegible] and the simpler style of evening gown the absolutely tight fitting sleeve of net with applique designs of embroidery in silver and gold is extremely smart and becoming, and, cut in one piece with the upper part of the waist, is most becoming. An old evening gown can easily be remodelled in this manner, and there are any number of fancy nets and laces to be found at this time of the year which are capital for this purpose, only be it remembered that the net must be flat, not in folds, on the neck and upper part of the waist.

Very often the home dressmaker does not give herself the least chance in the world to turn out a good looking gown because the person for whom the gown is intended is not properly attired for having it well fitted. It is hopeless, for instance, to expect a gown to look well when it has been fitted over stays that are too large, too long, or otherwise are unsuited to the figure. The stays should be fitted perfectly before the new gown is attempted. Stays made to order are not inexpensive, but there are many shops where corsets of medium price are fitted without charge. If the customer herself takes a keen interest in the fitting and insists upon every detail being well attended to she will be able to get what she wants.

With properly fitting corsets which have the fashionable lines as a foundation for her work, the amateur dressmaker will find the task of giving style to a costume much less difficult. Then she should be sure, also, that the corset cover fits well and that the underskirt is perfectly smooth over the hips. There should be no clumsy bands or even [illegible] around the waist to interfere with the fitting. The home dressmaker often endures handicaps of this sort which a professional dressmaker would refuse to tolerate. Mr. Carton the popular teacher of the Alamdale school for the past summer left on Sunday morning to resume his studies at Queen's University, Kingston. His place at Alamdale is being filled by Miss Sutherland who arrived Saturday. Miss Sutherland is staying with Miss Slater ... the east of the school.

R. J. McClinton, Vermilion's progressive baker is completing the erection of a two storey brick bakery and engine room, 16x24 ft. with an addition for a bake oven 12x13. The building is fitted with electric light throughout. The ground floor contains the bakery and dough mixer run by a 3 h. p. gasoline engine, and the upper floor is used for a store and flour room.

Napoleon Lalonne, a well known pioneer of 51-7 leaves in the near future for a winter's hunting trip to the Peace River country. Some sixty or seventy people enjoyed a pleasant evening on Monday night at the anniversary social of the Church of Christ. After an hour spent in conversation an informal musical programme was given, speeches were made on the growth of the church by A. S. Cash, H. S. Stephens and H. L. Kempton. Mr. Cash reviewed the past work of the Church from its inception in 1906 till the present. Mr. Stephens spoke briefly on present conditions and Mr. Kempton prophesied most optimistically on the prospects not only of the Church but of the entire country for the future. After partaking liberally of the refreshments provided the assembly sang the National Anthem and dispersed.

The citizens of Mannville will in all probability have a mounted police stationed there at once. A petition with a number of signatures attached was forwarded to Major Cuthbert, R. N. W. M. FIFTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION

Ideal Weather Splendid Exhibit Attendance of Over 1200

The fifth annual exhibition of the Vermilion agricultural society held last Wednesday was favored with "made to order" weather, it was an ideal day - warm and resplendent with Alberta sunshine, and the huge crowds in attendance were evidence of the increased interest manifested in the fall fair. A conservative estimate places the crowd on the grounds at 1200. The gate receipts showed a paid admittance of over 1000 and the revenue from this source was the largest in the annals of the society.

The grounds partook of the real fair nature. The showing in horses and cattle was by far the best ever seen here, the entries in the horse classes numbered 146 and cattle 90 and the judges had their work cut out for them. A very fine class of horses were shown, Clydes, Shires, Percherons, Suffolk Punch, Agricultural, General purpose and Roadsters were much in evidence, while in cattle Shorthorns, Ayrshires, Red Polled and Grades predominated. The entries in sheep numbered 13 and in poultry 67. Butter totalled up 31. Agricultural products made a remarkably good exhibit the grains attracting more than the average attention by their high grade and quality as well as varieties. Vegetables as usual were good and the tubers were there in abundance, in fact it was an Irishman's paradise. In domestic manufacture the work shown was of a superior class of workmanship, but we would like to have seen more in this line.

It is regrettable that so many came with their entries on the day of the exhibition and had to be refused admission for them. The society did all it could to place ... late in the hands of ... [illegible]

DAME FASHIONS DECREES

PERHAPS it was the long, cold spring which influenced the designers of smart millinery this summer, or it may have been only the unquenchable desire for novelty which has caused the utilization of the various materials from which the newest midsummer hats are made up, textures which hitherto have been seen only in the models intended for the height of the winter season. An all velvet toque trimmed with quills or even ostrich feathers was, for example, never before considered appropriate until almost after the first snowfall, yet such is worn now with a lingerie gown, as though the combination were the most consistent imaginable. Even fur is used as a trimming on one of the very smartest French models, formed of lace and chiffon, but it is not likely that fur will ever have a place in the summer outfit for an American resort. Moth, if not rust, does corrupt too quickly in our zone.

The most charming of all summer hats, however, are bound to be the wide brimmed leghorns, adorned with great French roses, lace and ribbons. There is a suggestion of the cloche, or bell shape, still evident in nearly all the large hats, but the brims are much more spread out than was the case a year ago, giving the effect of not quite so high a hat. This is but an optical illusion, however, as will be seen as soon as the attempt is made to pack the hat of the present season in last year's hat box. The greater width of the crown makes it appear not so high as before, but it is in reality somewhat deeper if anything. The exaggeratedly wide crown—larger than the top of the head could possibly be—is disappearing, and the smartest hats all have now an effect of fitting the shape of the head peculiarly well. The crown, in other words, must never seem to stand out beyond the sides of the head, so that were it not for a bandeau or halo within the hat would fall down and at once smother the wearer.

There are some few quite flat hats also. These are the hats that are unusually wide, the brim curved down slightly all around, but the hat tilted slightly on one side, so that while part of the face is almost completely hidden the wearer shall still be recognizable from the view point on the other side. The brim is wide and bent up slightly on the ...

To American eyes the black velvet hats may seem strange just now, and perhaps while the weather remains at its hottest, black velvet toques will not be worn, but at the first breath of autumn velvet is destined to be put on for most formal afternoon wear. It is not necessary, however, to have the entire hat of velvet. Perhaps the brim may be faced with straw as the crown and facing may be of velvet, while the upper part of the brim is of yellow, white or colored crin. Flowers relieve the larger velvet hats. Lace is also used to soften the black velvet and to make it look lighter. Fortunately, the velvet hats are fashioned in some miraculous manner which makes them really no heavier than the thinnest straw.

Sheerest lawn combined either with straw or satin is another unusual effect noticeable in some of the new models. A larger crown composed apparently of layers of folded white mousseline de soie bordered with a band of softly folded black satin made up one charming little toque. Again, the white mousseline is seen next the face, while the crown is of satin. The different combinations of textures and the different methods of combining are almost innumerable. When fur is seen on the summer models it is generally as part of the trimming on a mousseline or lace hat.

Cornflower blue is a favorite shade of the moment and is introduced with every color that will admit of the combination. This is another favorite trimming and a touch of cornflower blue velvet on a white hat veiled in black tulle with a great cluster of full blown thistles as trimming was most attractive.

There is no real limit for the size of the hats of the present moment—no limit in any direction, it might be said. When large they are so large as to make the widest Gainsborough look like a Scotch cap. When small they are very small and rapidly growing narrower. At the same time a hat of medium size does not necessarily look out of date. Some hats are very high, others apparently quite low and flat, yet if the proportions and lines are correct they will look smart. A high bandeau instead of a flat "halo" is worn in some of the newest hats when it is desired to keep the sloping brim from entirely enveloping the face. The height of the bandeau must depend entirely upon the individual. This means largely the way in which the hair is worn, for upon this depends almost entirely the adjustment of the hat.

No summer costume is perfect without its sunshade, even though the hat is itself wider than the parasol, for a parasol must be carried to give a finished effect to the whole. There are many novelties in the parasols of the present year, but chief among them is the sunshade of black velvet lined with softly shirred white chiffon. Somewhat incongruous, perhaps, a velvet parasol is nevertheless exceedingly effective, and a black velvet is more effective than any other. It must have ...

Here October 18

The Manxman, latest of the dramatizations of that powerful writer, Hall Caine, will be seen in this city on Tuesday, Oct. 18th at the Opera House with a cast of great brilliancy headed by that popular star, Mr. Frederick Clarke.

The play is acknowledgedly the best of all the Hall Caine plays, and that is saying much for the enjoyment of local play-lovers for we all remember The Christian, The Prodigal Son, and The Eternal City. The Manxman is a page from real life and has to do with a great and inspiring love, punctuated by great dramatic moments and brilliant dialogue. Action with simplicity keys the heart of the auditor and beholder to the beauty of the work and the cast which will interpret it will be far above the usual dramatic organization.

Killed At Vegreville

Vegreville, Oct. 7.—An accident happened here about nine thirty last night which resulted in the death of Louis Jacobson of Martins, about fifteen miles south of here. It seems Mr. Jacobson started about that time for the Canadian Northern railway depot, and in the darkness ran into and was knocked down by a freight train and killed. The deceased leaves a mother and several grown up children to mourn his untimely end, his wife having predeceased him some years ago. An inquest is being held this evening before coroner Dr. W. Field.

W. A. Titley left last week on a visit to England, where he will remain until spring. Mr. Titley came to the West four years ago and engaged in cattle ranching, purchasing the well known A. C. Smith ranch southeast of here and homesteading a quarter section. He is another instance of western success and at the present time has a bunch of 200 head of cattle on his ranch. The Standard wishes Mr. Titley a pleasant holiday and safe return to these parts.

Land Titles Office

Red Deer Board of Trade

Red Deer, Alta. Sept 29 1910

Norman Murray, Esq.,
Barrister, Etc.,
Vermilion, Alta.

Dear Sir:—

The Board of Trade took up the matter of Land Titles Offices as suggested in your letter to His Honor Judge Lees, and the enclosed resolution was passed. Mr. R. B. Welliver and W. E. Payne were appointed a committee to act in conjunction with any other Board of Trades taking up this matter and to present their claims to the Government. We would be pleased if you would communicate with Mr. Payne or Mr. Welliver of this town as to what steps your Board of Trade is taking and if you intend waiting upon the Government we would be pleased to have representatives present at the same time.

Yours truly,
Geo. W. Greene
President.

WHEREAS owing to the rapid settlement of this Province and the increased activity in Real Estate the Two Land Titles Offices in this Province are inadequate to handle the business with dispatch and with the care which such an Office should exercise.

AND WHEREAS the Torrence system in vogue in this Province requires that all titles issued by the Registrar and other instruments registered in the Land Titles Office should be passed by a person skilled in the Law of Real Estate, such as the Registrars are, but owing to the amount of work in the Land Titles Offices in this Province the Registrars are unable to give the attention to titles and other instruments passing through their Offices as the public are entitled to receive and mistakes occur thereby.

AND WHEREAS owing to the Registration Districts covering such large territories as they at the present time do, it often happens that there are more than one person of the same name residing in the same Registration District which frequently leads to executions being registered against property which it should not be, thereby causing delay and expense where it should not occur.

AND WHEREAS the Province of Saskatchewan [illegible] under [illegible] system with [illegible] the Province of Alberta [illegible] two Land Titles Offices, which are found to be [illegible] the people.

BE IT RESOLVED [illegible] the Honorable A. L. Sifton, Premier of Alberta, and to the Honorable C. W. [illegible] Attorney General [illegible]

After having wrestled with about thirty dishes at a dinner, and after all this being called upon to speak, Horace Porter declared that he felt a great sympathy with that woman in Ireland who had had something of a field day on hand. She began by knocking down two somewhat unpopular agents of her absentee landlord, and was seen later in the day dancing a jig on the stomach of the prostrate form of the Presbyterian minister. One of her friends admired her prowess in this direction and invited her in and gave her a good stiff glass of whisky. Her friend said, "Shall I pour some water in your whisky?" and the woman replied, "For God's sake, haven't I had trouble enough already today?"

A characteristic anecdote is told of Cherubini, the most jealous of the irritable genus of composers. He had been prevailed upon to be present at the first representation of the work of a confrere, and, during the first acts, which were much applauded by the public, he had kept a gloomy silence. The third act was less favorably received, and a certain passage especially seemed to cast a cold blanket over the spectators, when the old maestro, to the astonishment of his friends, was seen to applaud heartily. "Do you really like that duet?" asked one of them. "I should have thought it was ..."

... "Don't you see that if I did not applaud it he might possibly cut it out?"

Mr. Veach saw them all trialed out and then ventured the opinion that Wendell would yet prove the best of the party.

"Well, it's too early to tell about that," said Splan, "but when Moody and Hussey and I hook up in that race for a hundred bushels of oats, we'll know who's training the racehorse of the party."

"When are you going to have that race, John?" asked Mr. Veach.

"Thanksgiving Day," promptly responded Splan. "Yes sir, Thanksgiving Day, just after we've had our turkey and when we'll be feeling prime for sport."

"Look here," said Mr. Veach with a smile, "if you're going to put it off that long, I expect it would be cheaper for me to send each of you a hundred bushels of oats and not have any race."

BEFORE THE DUEL

How the Viscount Faced a Great Fear

In society they called him "Adonis Querne." His name was Viscount Gontran Joseph de Querne.

An orphan and master of a large fortune, he made quite a figure, as they say. He had style, readiness enough to appear witty, a certain natural grace, a proud, well-bred bearing, a fierce moustache, and a gentle eye—the combination women like.

He was invited everywhere, was in demand as a partner in the german, and inspired men with the smiling unfriendliness that a strong face usually begets. He was suspected of a few love affairs that go to make a bachelor interesting. He was happy, calm, and self satisfied, known to be an expert swordsman and a good shot.

"If I ever fight a duel," he used to say, "I shall choose pistols. I shall be sure then of killing my man."

One evening he went to the theatre with two ladies and their husbands, and after the play invited them to go to Tortoni's for an ice. When they had been seated there a few minutes, he observed that a gentleman at a neighboring table was keeping his eyes obstinately fixed on one of the ladies of De Querne's party. She seemed troubled and uncomfortable, and held her head down. Finally she said to her husband:

"That man is staring at me. I don't know him, do you?"

The husband, who had seen nothing, looked up, but said at once, "No, not at all."

The young wife continued, half smiling and half annoyed:

"It's very provoking; that individual spoils my ice for me."

Her husband shrugged his shoulders. "Pshaw! Pay no attention to him. If we took notice of every loafer we met there'd be no end to it."

But the viscount rose abruptly.

He would not permit a strange man to spoil an ice of his offering. The insult was to him, since it was by his invitation that his friends were in the cafe. The thing devolved upon him to settle.

He approached the man, and said to him:

...

... and over, lying five minutes on his back, then on his right side, then on his left.

He felt thirsty again. He rose to get a drink. Then a genuine anxiety seized him:

"Am I afraid?"

Why did his heart beat so wildly at all the familiar sounds in the room? When the clock was going to strike, the little click of the spring made him start, and he was obliged to open his mouth to breathe for several seconds after, he felt so oppressed. He began to reason with himself on the possibility of such a thing.

"Am I afraid?"

No, assuredly he could not be afraid when he had just announced himself resolved to push the thing to extremity, when he had such a determination to fight. But he was so deeply moved that he said to himself:

"Can one be afraid in spite of one's self?"

And the doubt grew upon him—an anxiety, a dread; if a force stronger than his will overcame him, what should he do? He would go to the place of meeting, because he willed to appear there. But if he trembled! If he lost consciousness! And he thought of his position, his reputation, and his name.

He felt a compelling wish to see his own face in the mirror. He lighted a candle. When he saw his reflection in the polished glass he hardly recognized it, it was like one he had never seen. His eyes looked enormous, and he was pale; he was certainly very pale.

He stood there before the mirror. He even looked at his tongue to see if it were feverish, and all at once the thought shot through him:

"Day after tomorrow, at this time, I may be dead."

And his heart began to beat furiously again.

"Day after tomorrow this, that I see in the glass, may be no more. I am here, I look at myself, I feel that I am alive, and in twenty-four hours I may be laid on that bed dead, my eyes closed, cold, inanimate, ended!"

He went back toward his bed, and could see himself stretched out on his ...

CHAPTER VIII. (Continued)

The Night of the Harvest-Home

[illegible]

The Red Mole [illegible] upon the [illegible] public house [illegible] whose favorite [illegible] whose tongue [illegible]. That [illegible], which she [illegible] her best harmed beauty was the only womanly trait in her character. Her son, a tall, [illegible] youth, was the only law and order in that lawless, disorderly plague spot. He ruled by terror.

On this night of the harvest home the inn was deserted except for the Currie. Mrs. Currie could be heard snoring stertorously upstairs. The air was faintly impregnated with strong vinegar.

The Red Mole greeted Old Seryme with the [illegible] of hatred and led the way into a back room. Here there was a young man lying asleep on a table. It seemed as if he would never uncurl himself to his full length, when his father roughly awoke him. Then he stood up in his long leather boots and guernsey, and waited for someone else to speak.

"Weel," said old Seryme, "is't a' ready?"

"Aye!"

"Had we no' better see it?"

The tall youth took a key from a nail, while his father, the Red Mole, fetched a lamp.

Archibald, as the son was called, then lifted the shop shutters from their accustomed place on the wall. Behind them was a door into which he slipped the key.

"There ye are," said the Red Mole. "None o' yer public property I'se me. When it's day, there's the shutters, and who'd think there was a door ahint? An' then when it's night, an' the shutters are up, there's none to see but me an' mine."

"Aye, aye," said [illegible] with a grin.

The son silently waved them into the open doorway and stood guard as they went below. In the cellar the light of the Red Mole's lamp revealed about half a hundred kegs stacked neatly at the farther end.

[illegible]

... he stopped guilty of evading the [illegible] that [illegible] never dawned upon him.

[illegible] "Mebbe we might [illegible] real seal on yer mouth."

"[illegible] your threats, Mr. Seryme gower," said Mr. Horneycraft loftily. "I've heard threats before."

"Mebbe ye'll no' hear them agin," said Giles uneasily, as if he hesitated to utter the words that, once out, could not be recalled.

The figure in the stairway took a step nearer. The Red Mole put down the lamp. Giles gathered courage and support from these movements.

"Ye'll escort us to the nearest justice of the police, did ye?" [illegible] rasped out. "Are ye sure [illegible] y'are goin' yersel'?"

He, too, crept a step nearer Mr. Horneycraft. And at once he said in an evil, quick whisper:

"An ill day for you, Mr. Horneycraft, that ye recognized Giles Serymgeour. If there's to be blood shed in this place tonight, be it yer ain an' upon yer ain heid!"

"Na, na!" cried the Red Mole, his terror of discovery getting the better of his animal ferocity. "There'll be nane o' that in my house. They'd search for him!"

Serymgeour turned upon him like an animal at bay. He saw with his cunning, rat-like shrewdness that it was the life of the hunted or the hunter. Above all things, he saw that it was chiefly necessary for the safety of Giles Serymgeour that someone else be a party to the murder.

"Ye're mighty canny, Baldy," he sneered. "Wasn't it you that wad hae cut the weasand o' the lieutenant in the cave?"

Mr. Horneycraft pricked up his ears. The Red Mole subsided.

Old Seryme went forward and whispered rapidly in his ear. The hairy [illegible] cheek [illegible] in the breeze, and his lips made inarticulate sounds of protest and assent.

Then Giles turned upon Mr. Horneycraft and bade him good night.

"You cannot leave this place!" cried Horneycraft. "I arrest you in the King's name! The place is surrounded!"

"[illegible] a lie!" the tall youth on the staircase said steadily.

Horneycraft, who had almost forgotten his [illegible] antagonist's existence, turned around with a start.

In that moment Giles Serymgeour slipped past him. Horneycraft sprang to stop his passage, but Archibald hurled the collector back.

[illegible] Giles Serymgeour had reached the public house upstairs [illegible]. Stricken with [illegible], he rushed from the place. He [illegible] the shaggy pony and scrambled into the saddle. From within he heard an inner door close with a heavy slam and a rusty key turn in the lock.

The miser lashed the pony into a gallop. About a quarter of a mile down the hill he suddenly remembered that if the crime was to be hidden his appearance must not be the first thing to arouse suspicion. He drew the pony to a standstill and allowed the half winded animal to blow. Suddenly conscious of the mountain silence around him, Giles turned in the saddle and looked at the dim light of Cathouse Inn.

He wondered what was going on in the cellar under that house. Were they killing him now? How would Baldy do it? Smother him? Stab him?

As his mind danced from one alternative to another, among the still mountains echoing like the shrieking of a million devils, went the long, wailing cry of a human being in distress.

Giles Serymgeour, with gurgling noise in his throat, brought down the lash upon the pony's head. The animal lunged violently, then horse and rider rushed down the hill road in mad flight.

DAME FASHIONS DECREES

THE wearing of mourning in England consequent upon the death of King Edward VII, has started a wide-spread influence in favor of black and black and white that will be felt for several months. Strangers visiting London felt obliged to wear black because otherwise they were disagreeably conspicuous. One American woman who, not provided with a black gown, went to the play attired in light blue, soon became so painfully conscious that she was the only woman in the entire house wearing a color that she left before the play was over. It has been said that in consequence of the enforced wearing of black an outburst of most vivid colors will follow, but that remains to be proved, and the dressmakers are busy turning out the smartest of all black and black and white gowns that are so fascinatingly becoming they are certain to be copied.

Never were there so many black satin gowns worn, the coat and skirt costumes especially, and it is remarkable how many different kinds of black satin there are. Some have a bright finish, [illegible] then some of the gowns are struction of the skirt. There is a foundation or underskirt of the softest satin or silk, which is fitted as tight as possible to the figure and reaches only a short distance below the knees; on this is sewed a scant straight flounce of the material and over this falls the straight skirt or tunic, finished with a wide hem. If the lines are too trying then the tunic is shaped to be shorter in the front or the back and the flounce has more fulness in the way of scant box plaits wide apart. The most becoming style for any one who is not slender permits of a draped effect, as though the tunic were long enough to drape across the front and tie at the side with the back breadths. The lower part of the waist is draped, the folds going around the figure, not up and down, and the material can either be drawn tight to give as small a waist measure as possible, or, like the classic draperies, be left loose to quite hide the effect of any waist and make the figure very nearly the same width at the waist line as at the hips. In description this fashion may appear impossible for the majority of women, but already it is being so modified and worked out that it is quite safe to predict that before winter it will have become not only possible but even attractive.

The color that is introduced into the black gowns is most cleverly dealt with. It is never to be noticed in the coat or skirt, but on the waist, when in bands or folds, or waistcoat it is most becomingly placed. One of the smartest street suits for early autumn and winter is of black light weight cloth, the skirt, short and narrow, is finished with a broad band of black satin braided with black braid in two widths, one very narrow and one quite wide. The jacket, hip length, has also a band of satin braided with the braiding, and there are broad black satin revers. The gown is not [illegible] fascinating little fitted waistcoat of bright blue [illegible] as carefully as the waist.

The Fall Fair

The fall fair is an institution that is both useful and significant. The competition it provides among farmers induces a spirit of [illegible] some rivalry at [illegible] among those [illegible] want to [illegible] country [illegible] duce [illegible] on the [illegible] factors [illegible] is capable [illegible] Alberta [illegible] country [illegible] large [illegible] spread [illegible] knowledge of the resources and conditions of the Province is worthy of note. At the [illegible] fair itself is a personal [illegible] which serves in a rough and general way to measure the progress of settlement and to indicate the degree of development which has been attained. The exhibit [illegible] and quantity, compared with that of previous years, reflects the increase in the number of farmers living in the locality and also whether or not they are making improvement in the quality of their products or increasing the variety. The attendance, compared with that of the preceding event reflects even better the increase that has taken place in the population of the community in the twelve months. In the same way the number of new fairs appearing on the list each year serves to indicate the rapidity with which the wilderness is being dotted with communities of farmers.

[illegible]

The Calgary Daily News has gone into liquidation. The petitioning creditors were the Imperial Bank of Canada, whose claims amount to the respectable sum of $19,617.54. It will be seen by the news item published elsewhere that among the heavy creditors of the Daily News Publishing Company of Calgary, are leading men of the province. To those who are inclined to look upon the publication business as a small gold mine for the proprietors the fate of the Daily News will come as a rude shock—at the best the greater percent of daily publications are showing little more than keeping even and the Standard has yet to hear of any that are declaring dividends to stock holders. To an outsider the printing business may appear very attractive but we will have to look a long way to find the editor who has retired from the profession on the returns his business has brought him, to spend the mellow days of his life in less strenuous and nerve-racking scenes.

THE HUDSON BAY ROUTE

(Free Press)

Engineer W. J. Clifford, who has returned from the north, having completed a year's survey of the country between The Pas and Landing Lake, a distance of some 200 miles, or nearly half of the whole distance to be traversed by the Hudson Bay Railway, states that but little of the country surveyed by his party presents obstacles to steel-laying. He also reports optimistically with regard to the presence of minerals and other natural resources. Two other railway survey parties are still in the field, heading respectively for York and Churchill. With the information acquired by these three land survey parties, added to that gained by the hydrographic survey parties still working at the mouths of the Nelson and the Churchill, the Dominion Government will doubtless [illegible] knowledge on [illegible] vigorous activity [illegible] in the whole work of opening up the Hudson Bay route.

[illegible] Engineer Clifford there returns to [illegible] from the north Hon. [illegible], who has spent several weeks on behalf of the Dominion Government in examining the falls and rapids of the Nelson and the Saskatchewan. Mr. [illegible] reports that within a reasonable distance of the proposed location of the railway hydro-electric power is available to the extent of at least a million horse power. He makes it quite clear that there is ample power of this kind in the Nelson and the Saskatchewan, not to speak of that in tributary streams, to operate a railway to Hudson Bay. Whatever is ultimately decided upon, it is, at any rate, very satisfactory to know that if electricity is not used for the railway, it will not be from any lack of opportunity to generate current.

No Extensive Deposits

All hopes ever held by prospectors and others that mineral indications on the eastern slope of the Rockies, [illegible] from time to time, would be traced to extensive deposits of minerals are given a cold [illegible] by the statement of Dr. D. B. Dowling, Dominion geologist, who has returned to Edmonton from a trip west to the mountains and who states that the eastern slope of the Rockies will never produce any extensive or valuable deposit of mineral.

In making this statement Dr. Dowling has merely stated what has long since been discovered to be true by himself and other geologists that geological formations of the eastern slope of the Rockies is not mineral formation, but chiefly lime and sandstone, that the [illegible] formation is to be found in most Ranges of the Rockies, which display lower strata of rock in which minerals have been deposited.

Consequently the reported discoveries of iron and other minerals at various points on the eastern slope can amount to nothing.

Dr. Dowling stated that he had secured samples of iron struck on the eastern slope near Hinsley and the same statement applies to this find as to the other finds on the eastern slope.

Good For Alberta

The recent Dry Farming Congress at Spokane has given Alberta more publicity than anything that has occurred for some time. According to the statement of Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, Alberta simply swept the board and made a very excellent impression all through. The Macleod district captured the greatest number of prizes.

The most important prize was the Grand Trophy for the best state exhibit on the ground. There was a strong fight for this and Alberta's victory was well deserved.

The success of George Lane's stock is something that made Albertans proud. He showed in 13 classes and took 13 firsts and two seconds. He won the Grand Challenge cup for the best herd of 10 horses on the ground and in this he was in competition with the best breeders in the western states. The judge said that there were not ten other horses of the same breed type on the continent, and he had never seen ten better horses in France, the home of the Percheron.

In winter wheat, 1st and 2nd and 3rd prizes went to Macleod.

In spring wheat 1st and 2nd to Macleod, and 3rd to Claresholm.

In Oats 1st to Macleod, and 2nd to Lacombe.

In barley 1st and 2nd to Macleod.

R. railway company was summoned to appear for not maintaining a lawful fire guard near Claysmore siding as provided for by order of the board of Railway Commissioners of Canada No. 3245. This case occupied the attention of the Court all morning. Constable McPhail conducted the case for the Crown, while S. Short, barrister of Edmonton looked after the interest of the C. N. R. Several witnesses were examined by the prosecution. The evidence produced went to show that the C. N. R. had absolutely failed to maintain a lawful fire guard. The defence claimed that the reason a lawful fire guard had not been maintained was due to the fact that they had endeavered to procure people to plough fire guard on the same land in question but were unable to get anybody, also that the inflamable material which lies in between the track and the illegal fire guard could not be burnt as it was too green. Mr. Short, counsel for the defence raised several objections during the trial but they were overruled by his worship. After hearing all the evidence he found the C. N. R. guilty on the evidence produced by the prosecution and ordered the said railway to pay the maximum fine, which is $100 together with costs. The settlers who reside west of Vermilion along the C. N. R. line are determined that they will enforce the order of the Railway Commissioners for their own protection. Strict measures promptly applied should be used for the protection of the settlers against their lives and property. It is generally understood that a similar charge will be laid against the said company by a number of the settlers of Islay as they have absolutely failed to maintain a fire guard in the Islay district whatever.

This is the second conviction Constable McPhail has secured against the C. N. R. within the last 30 days, last June on a similar charge the Company was fined $100 and costs the same being paid.

James Fax and his company will appear here Oct. 25.

Chas. Hodgins of the Wellsdale district was again a most successful exhibitor at the local fair. This year he carried off 21 prizes against 11 last year. These were chiefly in grains and vegetables.

HOPKINS

Ed. Shiner and Jack Hyman are building a barn for J. S. Valentine & Co.

Paul Dakale is enjoying a visit from his father and family of Phillips, S. Dak. who are well pleased with the country and may reside here permanently.

There is some talk of a teacher being hired to teach the youth of the district, at some private house until the school-house is built. Mrs. Lyle Howard has applied for the position.

At present writing Jos. Maldey and E. Hoagland have not recovered their horses which strayed away about six weeks ago.

Quite a number of homesteaders have passed through en route to the Moose Creek settlement. Others are soon to follow.

The Hopkins Trading Co. are kept busy freighting out goods from Vermilion. Looks like they would have to add a few more to their staff as the demand at present seems to exceed the supply.

Master Franklin Kettgee is sick with the chicken-pox. They seem to be making the rounds of the neighborhood. Who's next Court Smith and sons Fred and Harry left for Cold Lake last week. Court will return but the boys will proceed further north with pack horses, where they expect to hunt and trap until Christmas.

Mrs. Lyle Howard and little daughter were Vermilion visitors last week.

The good crops are all harvested and give good proof that the soil here is all that could be desired. We feel confident if a railroad were built through these parts, it would lead to a greatly increased acreage. The farmers is very busy at present discing the ground preparatory to early spring seeding.

Jay Parker and Orrin Caskey are expected home soon.

Miss Julia Ross is visiting at present with her mother out on Stoney Creek.

BABY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA

Hands Tied to Prevent Scratching

Five Doctors Failed to Benefit, But Zam-Buk Worked a Cure

Mrs. Chas. Levere, of Prescott, North Ameer, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says:—"My baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were fearful, and the little one's plight was so serious that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off by the disease.

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain, until we had had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good.

ON THE LAKE

By John R. McMahon

"I WANT a guide who does his work and earns his wages."

The stout, red-faced man—J. Thornleigh Weldon of New York—lolled in a comfortable armchair on the porch of the little inn at the foot of the lake.

"Yes, sir," said the tall, lean woodsman, bronze of face, keen-eyed, who stood respectfully, hat in hand, before him.

"A man who comes ... who is honest and reliable," continued Mr. Weldon, flicking the ash off his cigar with a pudgy finger on which a diamond sparkled. "There are too many guides, I understand, who don't give full value. You look to me a little better than the rest."

"Yes, sir," replied the other and, in spite of himself, cast an anxious glance at a group of the rest who were applicants for the job of guiding the New Yorker in the Maine woods.

"What do you think of my costume? Is it suitable for the woods, and all that?"

The shabbily dressed woodsman, in belted trousers, flannel shirt, and worn moccasins, made a grave inspection of the outfit: the kid-lined canvas jacket with many pockets, a silk vest, tweed knickerbockers, ribbed stockings in lavender and green, a visor cap, and high pigskin shoes.

"It will do all right for this time of year, sir," he said. "In the fall you'd want something quieter."

"Well, let's get down to business. [illegible]

... ing camp, and set out early in the morning across country for a trout stream of repute.

As the canoe slid over the glassy waters of the inlet, like a beautiful woman gliding over the polished floor of a ballroom, the fish were leaping near the lily pads, and a thrush's voice sounded magically from the leafy shore. A rope of pearls dripped from the clean blade of the paddle and dissolved in the silvery swirl behind. The sun cast lengthening shadows over the western mountains.

"This is O.K., guide," remarked the passenger, puffing a cigar, his chubby hands on the sides of the canoe. "How is it outside?"

"She's rippling up a little, sir. We may have a handful of wind."

"What do you call a handful?"

"Not enough to bother us, sir."

The channel of the inlet receded. There were no more lily pads and one reached depths. The widening waters of the lake were streaked and rippled by soft gusts that seemed to float down from the green battlements above. The gentle music of the ripples against the sides of the canoe mingled with the faint sibilance of the forest leaves.

"Ames."

"Yes, sir."

The ash on J. Thornleigh Weldon's cigar had accumulated, but he did not let go of the canoe sides to remove it.

"Ames, I don't mind telling you that this is my first trip in a canoe in a good many years. I am a very busy man, [illegible]

THE CAUSE OF BALDNESS

THE microbe of baldness has been discovered, but the microbe is not the cause of baldness. The microbe is found on bald heads, because it lives where hair cannot live, but it is no more to be blamed for baldness than the weed growing rank on worn-out abandoned land is to be blamed for the condition of the land.

Baldness and hardening of the arteries ... arise from the same cause. The scalp is irrigated and nourished by different groups of arteries. These carry nourishment to the hair. If the head covering compresses the arteries, as it does occasionally, the blood cannot circulate with force enough to reach the hair's roots. As a result the hair dies and the head becomes bald, first in spots, then all over, whenever the roots of the hair do not receive nourishment, just as grass dies on the prairie whose irrigating canals run dry.

The hair disappears first from the terminal points of the arterial systems, because, as these regions are the last to be reached by the irrigating fluids, they are the first to suffer when the streams diminish. The scalp is one of the ... of the system ... Since a covering of hair was placed upon the scalp to protect the scalp, it is foolish to shave the head ... The head should not be shaved after sickness, because the convalescent needs the protection given to the scalp by the hair.

The chief care in case of falling hair should be the maintenance of the blood supply. The blood should be enriched, purified, and made to circulate. ...

A very good substitute for glue can be made by rubbing a piece of cold boiled potato on paper until it is of the right consistency, when it will be found to be equal to strong glue or cement.

For cleaning boots a strip of carpet glued to a piece of wood will remove mud from boots very quickly and without the slightest injury to the leather, and is much better than the usual brush.

Here is a test for watered milk which is simplicity itself. A well polished knitting needle is dipped into a deep vessel of milk and immediately withdrawn in an upright position. If the sample is pure some of the fluid will hang to the needle, but if water has been added to the milk, even in small proportions, the fluid will not adhere to the needle.

To loosen a glass stopper which has become fixed a good plan is that of dipping a feather in salad oil and letting a drop or two fall all round the opening. The decanter or bottle should then be placed at a short distance from the fire. It will probably be necessary to give the neck a gentle hit on one side and then on the other before the stopper will give way. A little more oil, warmth, and another gentle knock may, perhaps, be required if the bottle has not been in use for some time, and has contained wine or syrup.

LOVE OR POLICY

By Beatrice Heron Maxwell

"WHO is that young lady?"

Mr. Otto Wernheim asked the question in his usual quiet voice, and with a manner indicating indifference as to the answer, but his hostess hastened to follow his glance and see who had arrested his attention.

"The girl in white?" she queried. "I'm afraid I can't tell you. Mrs. Hurst brought her. But I will find out."

"Don't trouble, Lady Murray," he answered equably. "My interest in her was merely transient."

And he would have passed on, but that at that moment Mrs. Hurst approached, and Lady Murray, turning to her, said:

"Mr. Wernheim has just asked me the name of the girl you are chaperoning to-night."

There was a flicker of hesitation in Mrs. Hurst's eyes before she replied:

"She is a young cousin of mine, Violet Hurst. I asked you to let me bring her because she gets very little pleasure. I am always sorry for girls who have a dull time."

"You think it is the prescriptive right of girlhood to enjoy itself?" he said, smiling.

"Yes; especially pretty girlhood. You find her attractive looking, Mr. Wernheim?"

He understood the drift of the question, but merely bowed an assent.

"She possesses no other claim to your interest," persisted Mrs. Hurst. "She is poor, unknown to the great world, and without influence."

"A handsome girl always has possibilities," he said, and looked across at the graceful figure in white again.

Then he moved away, and Mrs. Hurst followed their hostess, who had gone in to the ballroom.

"Lady Murray," she said, in a subdued tone, "is it true that Mr. Wernheim is a politician—not a press agent, as he calls himself?"

"I have heard rumors," Lady Murray acknowledged. "In any case he is a personage, and one meets him everywhere."

"I hope he won't try to mix Violet up in any Anglo-Prussian movement," Mrs. Hurst remarked.

Meanwhile Violet herself, serenely unconscious of the talk about her, felt like Cinderella at the moment when the Prince arrived upon the scene.

For she had just finished her third dance with Count Brand, an English man by birth, an Austrian nobleman by right of descent on his mother's side, and a diplomat by profession, moreover, one of the most popular men in the capital of the world—London. How great a flattery his preference for her was she did not know; she was scarcely aware of the fact that many eyes followed them while they waltzed together, and many curious lips whispered questions and comments.

All she knew was that the world, dull and grey in her home life, had suddenly changed into a sphere so bright and wonderful that it dazzled her.

"I have been," Paul Brand was saying to her, "in all the gardens of the world—East and West—and seen beautiful flowers everywhere, but never before to-night have I wanted to gather any one of them and make it my own."

Her face was turned away from him, the masses of red-brown hair shadowing ... that were cast down in sweet shyness. But he could see the ... and contour of her ... profile, and he thought, as he studied it, that here was a perfect blossom for ... if he could reach it.

"You like English flowers best," she asked ...

"... lilies," he repeated, "and violets. Violet is your favorite—your own sweet name flower!"

She assented.

"I will send you some to-morrow," he said, "unless you will let me bring them."

A sudden flush swept over her face, and she raised dewy, diffident eyes to his.

"Count," she said, "I am not quite like the other girls here to-night. You don't understand. They are all in your own set—they belong to this world always, but I am only a little stranger here. I go back to-night to my usual life in a very poor home, that is not—not suitable for you to come to."

"Violets grow best and sweetest in the shade," he answered. "I singled you out as different in one way from all the other girls here. I am not without understanding and discrimination, you see. I shall be proud and honored if you will let me come to your little home."

But she still demurred until at last ... he took her hand in his.

"... you not to understand," he said. "I am pleading with you for something more than the privilege of ... I have only five days ... left in London ... I return to Vienna. Please let me come, and believe that the humblest of rooms, with you in it, ..."

It was at this moment that a ... came close to them and:

"I am the bearer of a message to Miss Violet Hurst. May I deliver it?"

And the Prussian, serene and courteous, bowed both to Violet and Count Brand, who rose, polite but formal.

"I trust I do not interrupt," said Wernheim. "Your dance is past or to come?"

"It is over," answered Violet. "I am not engaged for the next one. What is the message, please?"

There was a pause, the Prussian expressing by his silence that he was waiting for the Count to depart.

Count Brand held out his arm.

"May I take you back to Mrs. Hurst?" he asked. "Perhaps this gentleman's message can be delayed for a moment?"

"Pardon me," Wernheim also offered his arm; "my message is urgent. Allow me to give it while conducting you to Mrs. Hurst."

Violet looked appealingly at the Count; the situation was perplexing. He decided it for her by bowing and withdrawing, saying as he did so:

"I hope you will spare me another dance later."

As they went towards the ballroom, Wernheim led her across the conservatory to a corner where a secluded seat was almost hidden by palms.

"My message is from my Government," he said, as he took his place by her side, "and I count on the honor and discretion that I have always found in English ladies. May I consider the matter will be treated by you as confidential?"

"I do not understand you, sir," she answered. "I think you must be mistaking me for someone else."

"Not at all. I should have approached you more gradually and diplomatically if there had been more time. As it is, the favor I ask of you is too urgent to admit of a moment's delay."

"The favor?" she stammered.

"You have made the acquaintance to-night of a diplomat," he went on, "who is greatly attracted by you, yet I do not think he is a marrying man. He has the reputation of being an impressionable and irresistible lover. Your influence would, I am sure, be sufficient during the first stage of his admiration, to gain from him one little piece of information that I want."

She would have spoken in protest, but he made an imperative gesture of silence.

"I have just learnt your history. You have a mother who is ill and in poverty. With money you could restore her to health. I would place in a bank, to your account, the sum of five hundred pounds if, within five days, you tell me the name of the Franco-Russian secret agent employed by Count Brand at Belgrade. In diplomacy it is sometimes best to be quite open. Therefore, I will tell you frankly that we have ascertained, by our Emperor's recent little yachting expedition, that France is not ready to fight; and the one thing we wish to know at this moment is whether England is going to form a secret alliance with France and Russia against Germany or has come to any understanding with either of these Powers on that subject. You see, therefore, that you will merely be aiding a political cause, and doing no harm whatever, either personal or collective, by finding out this name for me."

"But it is impossible," she exclaimed. "I have no influence with the Count, and if I had I could not use it against him. Besides he would not confide a secret of this sort to me."

The woman who ... This was the Prussian's ...

"Tell the Count," he resumed ... that ... and that ... with more. Then suggest that he should show his trust in you, in return for this confidence of yours, by telling you the name. Telephone it to me, it ... within five days, and one thousand pounds shall be in the St. James's Street branch of Lloyd's Bank within two hours afterwards. I will not ask you to do anything more ... what you have done, and you can show your people the letter in which the manager will tell you that an unknown donor has placed this sum to your credit. If you wish to marry the Count and he asks you, which is extremely doubtful, you can do so with a clear conscience, for you will have done him no injury. He is about to make a political blunder, from which he will be saved. ... his good angel. Now ... back to Mrs. Hurst."

... took it mechanically ...

... eventful night ...

"Farewell ..."

"I hope your ... With money, ... sible. Make ... chance!" And, with a bow ... her.

As Violet was driven back that night to West Kensington two things stood out prominently in her mind—Count Brand's last words: "I shall bring you violets to-morrow," and the Prussian's persuasive sentence: "One thousand pounds will be placed to your credit."

It was the fourth morning after Lady Murray's ball, and in the three days that had passed three things had happened.

First, the illness of Violet's mother had reached a grave crisis, and the doctor said:

"If ... she must be taken ... at once."

... bearing only three words:

"Gerrard, 0012 ..."

Thirdly, Count Brand ... each day with ... Mr. Wernheim ... suspected.

It seemed as if Fate was determined to thrust ... temptation.

"... woman has ever ... me in the way you do," the Count said to her. "You have captured my heart with all its emotions—love and trust and reverence. I would place my life and my honor in your little hands with confidence. If there were any proof I could give you of this it should be yours!"

He paused, and she remained silent, though through her brain there flashed the Prussian's ... words.

"I have to go back to my work," he went on, "and I shall take with me a memory and a hope. Will you add to the sweetness of these by giving me the assurance of your love, so that when I return it will be to you?"

He had taken both her hands, and held them in a close grasp.

"You love me, Violet?" he asked insistently.

... The Prussian's words ... to her: "An irresistible lover but not a marrying man."

How could she hope that such a man as this would transplant her from these ... almost sordid, surroundings to the life of luxury that would be for his wife?

She raised her eyes to his at last, and said simply:

"Yes!"

He lifted her hands to his lips.

"My flower!" he murmured. "I shall go to my work with a light heart now, looking forward to our future meetings. I would not leave you but that urgent affairs of State demand it. My mission is a private one. See, I will prove my love to you by placing my secret in your hands. To-morrow I have an important meeting, at Vienna, with our secret service agent, and together we shall pull a lever that will move Europe in the future." He took out a pocket book, and drew from the inner case a letter which he gave to her. "Now you have my honor, as well as my love, to guard and cherish. This contains the details of my plan, and the name of my agent. I will return to-night, for a few moments, to say a final good-bye. Till then, au revoir!"

And he left her, with the envelope in her hand—unsealed.

At six o'clock that evening he returned. The servant was out, and Violet admitted him to the flat herself and led the way to the little sitting-room.

She was very pale, and there was a shimmer of tears in her eyes, while her lips were tremulous.

"Count," she said, "here is your letter. I want you to take it back, for indeed, we had better not meet again. My mother is going into a Home to-morrow, and I have taken work in order to be able to give her some of what she needs. Your sphere and mine lie far apart. We thank you for all your kindness to me, but I ask you to go."

He took the letter with a dawning smile.

"You are a daughter of Eve," he said, "yet you have been able to resist opening this letter and learning the secret that it guards. Have you, then, no curiosity, no interest in me and my work?"

"How do you know that I have not opened it?" she asked in return.

"I feel practically certain," he answered, "but I will make sure in your presence."

He opened the envelope, inside was another, sealed, and attached by its seal underneath to the other one.

"You could not have withdrawn the envelope without breaking the seal," he said, "as I am doing now. ... I can see at a glance that the envelope has not been tampered with. My secret was written in a cypher so difficult that it would have taken too long to find ... would have been past. I tell you this because you must not think that I would risk the interests of my mate too lightly ...

... we never had any friends, nor ever will have. The sacred prizing which parents put on such advising and instruction renders the same precious as a memory beyond anything they ever did for us. Man lives far within and out of sight. None ever sees him except himself.

He is often driven within and shuts all the doors. He is in trouble and knows how powerless he really is, how small and weak he is, sitting there all alone face to face with himself!

The best of his friends could not enter and put an arm round him. Even if he left the door open friends could not enter, they can only talk to him. But the help must come in there where the man is sitting alone with himself if there is to be any help. Think it over.

How can help be got into your inmost self? You know the answer because you are a human soul.

There is a manly and patriotic interest which all right-minded citizens should take in instruction of Faith. The reward is not the mean calculation of what society or what credit can be got from it among men. But such advantages are bound to follow. Never was an age when they were greater. Not sordid and hypocritical, but as honorable as the consequences of any favorable association. The loss of such fraternal acquaintanceship is simply incalculable.

Nothing can substitute it. Stand with the men of some faith, bear your part of the burden of their cause, seeking not your own but their good. It will invest you with the esteem of your community, and the love of esteem is a splendid motive for straight work in life.

It will throw around your family a thousand safeguards and blessings. The idea is not wealth, certainly ... free that it is not. But worth is the test, and a faith that makes a man of real worth gives him the entry everywhere.

That is success.

LAND TITLES AND DISTRICT OFFICES

The Vermilion [illegible] the Edmonton Journal [illegible] follows [illegible] tation for the [illegible] of a land titles and district court district offices.

"Vermilion, Oct. 13. — A meeting of the board of trade [illegible] Friday night to take [illegible] ation [illegible] titles office for Vermilion. [illegible] also probable that the [illegible] creating the Vermilion [illegible] to a district court district [illegible] taken up. The attention [illegible] attorney-general has already drawn to the matter and he [illegible] under advisement. The [illegible] that the electoral districts [illegible] province should be made [illegible] court districts, and registration districts as well. At present writs and summons issued [illegible] the district court act have [illegible] sent by the process issuer [illegible] clerk of the court at Edmonton [illegible] well as all the subsequent proceedings. This, it is pointed [illegible], causes delay and is a heavy [illegible] in the bill of costs when [illegible] to be taxed by the way of [illegible] fees. It is further pointed [illegible] that the change would be a [illegible] to the province. At present the district court judge, when on circuit, brings a clerk of the court and a stenographer with him, the travelling fees of these officials being considerable. Under the proposed arrangement, the officials would be in the respective districts and the amount of travelling fees thus saved the province.

"The remuneration of the clerks would not necessarily be much more than is now paid the process issuers, a good deal of which would be made up by the sale of stamps now bought in Edmonton through the agents of the solicitors in these respective districts. The matter of registration of liens, notes and chattel mortgages is, under the present system, one of great inconvenience and expense. If these paper writings and documents were registered in each of the respective electoral districts a considerable amount of money would be saved to the people.

"There is a good deal of dissatisfaction with the present system of centralization, both as to land titles and district court offices, and the theory of the agitation now going on is that all the work of these offices in so far as the outlying portions of the province is concerned, would be more expeditiously carried on by the creation of more registration districts for both lands and chattels and the making of the electoral districts district court districts. In both these movements Vermilion appears to be well in the lead, in fact the agitation may be said to have originated here."

Treating of this matter editorially the Journal says under the heading "Demanding A Necessity" as follows:

"The board of trade of Vermilion intends to place a formal resolution before the government asking that land registration offices and judicial headquarters be established in that and other towns in [illegible] outside of the [illegible] centres of Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat.

[illegible] Edmonton standpoint, the suggestion is not [illegible] would be conducive to the immediate benefit of this city. [illegible] certainly take away [illegible] which is centered here at the present time.

But from a broad, provincial standpoint there is justice in the demand.

It does seem unreasonable that a property-owner in Vermilion, [illegible] miles away, should be required [illegible] to Edmonton to record [illegible], and just as unreasonable that a litigant having an action [illegible] should be required to [illegible] to Edmonton or have his legal representative do so, which is [illegible] costly [illegible] any ordinary legal process document.

"Alberta is becoming a big country and population is not now so scattered as it was when Edmonton was chosen as the land registration centre of the large Edmonton district. Some day the government will have to yield to the necessity for more registry offices. It might as well be now as later. Vermilion is merely voicing a requirement which will ultimately have to be granted willy nilly."

JUVENILE OFFENDERS

The child offender has until the last few years been a source of perplexity to Police Courts. The old idea of punishment— an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, was constantly held before culprit and judge. The child was discharged or committed. The result in either case was the development of a precociousness in the child to evade the results of wrong doing, and a [illegible] on the part of those who were wholly interested in the welfare of children, of the inadequacy of such a system to inculcate the principles of reparation and correction. The Probation System is an outgrowth of this need. At the present time the Judge treats the child much as a school teacher a pupil who has made an error in arithmetical calculation and is required to work out his problem again under direction. The Judge has before him a report on the home conditions surrounding the child and contributing to his becoming a delinquent. The child is shown why he must make reparation. He is given to understand that there is a higher principle at work than what he probably considers a species of retaliation. He is not sent back alone to his old conditions, as formerly, but is placed under the supervision of a probation officer, a clear headed, sound hearted individual who volunteers to give the boy a friendly hand, to take an interest in his work, his companions, his amusements. The probation officer is willing to advise the boy when he stands in need of it, to warn him of the consequences of persistent delinquency and to see that he is deprived of privileges or otherwise punished according to his offence. In nearly every case where children have come under the influence of probation, they have responded immediately, and according to the reports of probation officers throughout the province, have become [illegible] and in many instances more than had been expected.

The Superintendent of Neglected Children, Edmonton, calls for volunteers from every city and town in the Province of Alberta to act in the capacity of "Big Brothers" to the mischievous children whose misdirected energy, if not promptly steadied by a firm friendly hand, will send them into the ranks of confirmed criminals. Ninety-five per cent of our child delinquents need only such directions to become honest, industrious and in every way desirable citizens.

COMMUNICATION

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any views expressed by correspondents. Personalities will not be published.

To the Editor of the Standard

Dear Sir, I have often of late been very much concerned about the filthy suggestive language, the most profane expressions and epithets, which one hears in the ordinary walks of life, which is on the main streets of Vermilion with its groups of more or less, go where you will and one's ears are ever being forced to listen to oaths and language that gentlemen would not use. I have come to the conclusion that 80 per cent of our men to-day are tainted in their speech. No one seems to count it an honor to veto such conversation it is really not surprising that it is not safe for our young people to walk our streets when men allow their minds to put into words what they are in their own hearts. Walk along the main streets, particularly on Saturday nights, and one will hear enough profanity to stock an army in Flanders. There is too much loafing and too much pernicious swearing out loud on the public streets, the former could be remedied by our town police, but the latter can only be effectually dealt with by men of good common sense themselves, who will stop to think a moment on the foolishness of it, and of how it sounds to other people and besides that's where the boys learn to swear.

I noticed last Saturday evening that two or three men in front of the Alberta livery got into a bitter quarrel and these drunken men bellowed out oaths and filth at the top of their voices, and a number of females who were standing near by, heard every word of it, of course they became shocked, and assured each other that it was perfectly dreadful. Constable McPhail was dispatched for, and on his arrival, as usual he soon closed the game. The guilty parties whose names are with-held appeared before his worship F. H. Barber on Monday evening and were fined $5.00 and costs each, which was paid in order to save them from a two months term in jail.

The frequency of these drunken quarrels in the town and its immediate neighborhood, are becoming a serious matter, and the opinion is being expressed that the guilty miscreants responsible for such conduct should be severely dealt with.

The great importance of this reserve [illegible] opportunity it affords [illegible] recreation and conservation of [illegible] the rivers which rise in [illegible] and traverse the prairie [illegible] plays so important [illegible] the fertility of this soil of [illegible], one of the richest farming countries of the world. The forest on the tract consists mainly of lodge-pole (or black) [illegible] Engelmann spruce and Douglas fir. Very serious fires have occurred throughout the reserve in times past but the nature of [illegible] over the greater part of the reserve at any rate, is abundant.

Further extensions of the reserves are contemplated, in fact, some of the lands have already been reserved from settlement, though not formally set aside as reserves. Among the proposed extensions are:—

To the Spruce Woods reserve, 70,000 acres.

To the Duck Mountain reserve, 196,000 acres.

To the Cypress Hills reserve, 84,000 acres.

To the Beaver Hills reserve, 20,000 acres.

Similar action has been taken in regard to a tract of 5,000 acres near Spirit Lake, Sask. The foregoing extensions total 305,000 acres, or over 475 square miles.

A tract of land which includes Mount Ida and the Fly Hills (near Salmon Arm B. C.) was also inspected in the fall of 1909, with a view to its being set aside as a forest reserve.

Much other interesting information in regard to the reserves and other work of the Forestry Branch is given in the annual report of the Superintendent of Forestry above mentioned. Copies may be obtained on application to R. H. Campbell, Superintendent of Forestry, Ottawa.

ORDER GRANTED TO WIND UP DAILY NEWS

Assets To Be Advertised For Sale—Liabilities Are $56,000 in Excess of the Assets of the Company

Calgary, Oct. 18—In the Supreme Court today an order was issued by Justice Stuart for winding up the affairs of the Daily News and appointing the Trusts and Guarantee Company liquidators, the assets to be advertised for sale within ten days.

The statement presented in court as to the list of shareholders and amounts held included C. V. Cross $11,000, W. H. Cushing $[illegible],000, A. C. Rutherford $2,000, Hon. Frank Oliver $1,500, J. A. McIntosh $1,500, capital stock $50,000, D. McGillicuddy holding the balance.

In addition Messrs. Cross and Cushing were joint guarantees to the Imperial Bank for $15,000 and Mr. Cross for an additional $[illegible],000.

Statements were produced showing that D. McGillicuddy had put $25,000 cash in the business but not much weight was attached to them by the judge who turned down the application of the shareholders for the appointment of G. Robinson as receiver. It is said that the liabilities are $56,000 in excess of the assets.

KING EDWARD JOTS

Mrs. Davis of Minnesota, mother of Frank Davis of this place, and Mrs. Jones, sister of Frank Davis, are now on a visit to their friends here.

Messrs. Arthurs and Anderson, well borers, were canvassing this district recently for work in their line.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Eckford, paid our burg a visit last Sunday. They report encouraging crops in 52-7.

There is talk of a big dance at the King Edward school in the near future.

The much vaunted Auto is obsolete now, we'll cast it aside with the old wooden plough, now come, take a ride in my flying machine, we will sail up aloft where the evening stars gleam. We'll likely be hungry, we'll pull up at noon, and call in for lunch with the man in the moon, again into space, we will dodge midst the stars, and take a short note of the birth rate on Mars. We'll pass unmolested through Jupiter's haze and on past the bounds of astronomer's gaze, the dull march of science, for us is too slow, we'll solve all deep mysteries as onward we go. We'll plant on each star, as we swiftly pass through, the flag of Great Britain the Red, White and Blue, we'll open to commerce the whole Milky Way with a ten per cent. preference from bold Laurier. Before we turn in at the close of each day, we'll send a short wireless to our own Canada. With copious notes we'll embellish a book, and leave short explorations to Peary and Cook. Now we're off for the heavens, we'll bid all goodbye, keep your eye on the speck as we pass through the sky. Possess yourselves patiently, when we return we'll demonstrate all that you're striving to learn.

TREE DISTRIBUTION.

The Demand for Government Trees Continues to Increase

The work of free tree distribution to homesteaders on the prairies, inaugurated in 1901 by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, has made steady growth, and [illegible] the Superintendent of Forestry included in the annual report of the Department of the Interior lately issued, is shown to be still on the increase.

For some years past the number of trees distributed each spring has been in the neighborhood of two and a half million. The nursery station at Indian Head, Sask., has reached almost its capacity and if the distribution is to be enlarged the nursery capacity must be correspondingly increased.

In the spring of 1909 2,700,000 trees were sent to 2000 applicants. In the spring of 1910 about the same number of trees was sent to 3,175 applicants.

The increase in the number of applicants is due [illegible] to the fact that in 1909 the average number sent to each applicant was 1,000 while in 1910 the number had to be reduced to 800. The number of trees distributed remained practically the same. The number who received trees, however, increased from 1,420 in 1909 to 2,175 in 1910. In 1909, too, the number of applicants for trees was 2,2[illegible], in 1910 this number had increased to 3,8[illegible].

Farmers are urged to grow their own maple and ash trees from seed. Caution must, however, be exercised as to where this seed comes from, as [illegible] possible native seed be secured. In the summer of 1908 some Manitoba maples were found to have been killed back either wholly or partially, during the preceding winter. These had been grown from seed obtained from Dakota, and to this fact their inability to resist the weather seems due. The Forestry Branch has previously had similar experiences with seed obtained from Minnesota and from Eastern Canada. Failure of the local supply of seed, however, occasionally makes it necessary to resort to imported seed.

Further interesting particulars regarding this work are given in the report above mentioned, which is to be had free on application to R. H. Campbell, Superintendent of Forestry, Ottawa.

A NOTE OF WARNING SOUNDED BY MR. BALFOUR

The British Isles are Strategically the Base for Defence of the Empire. Urges Necessity of Absolute Safety in All Battleships.

Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 19.—The Right Hon. R. J. Balfour in an address here today, said the British Isles were strategically the base for the defence of the empire. He would resist any attempt to deal with the question as to how far the responsibility for the protection of the empire should be shared by the self-governing colonies.

The initiative in that respect must come from them. He referred to the relative strength of Great Britain and the other power in 1905 and 1910 and said that never in any other period of British naval history had there been such a change.

Balfour urged the necessity for absolute safety in all battleships. He said the two-power standard was more necessary than ever. Other countries could build as fast as Britain. The admiralty was informed of what other nations were doing and they might at any moment be confronted by the utmost peril without warning.

Great Britain could no longer wait and see what other countries were doing but must see to it that foreign powers did not get ahead.

His Lordship passed sentence immediately, and held out no hope of reprieve. As Crippen left the dock [illegible] was supported by the warders. His face was [illegible] [illegible]

Last Great Buffalo Hunt of The World

Edmonton, Oct. 20.—To engage in the last great buffalo hunt of the world, a party of fifteen sportsmen, headed by Howard Douglas, Dominion Commissioner of Parks, will leave Edmonton on the morning of Thursday, November 3rd, for the flathead hills of Montana. Michael Pablo, the Mexican owner of the big herd of 700 buffalo, which has been transferred to the Dominion government, weary of his efforts to capture alive thirty-five tough old lawless bunch of outlaw bulls, which have caused all the trouble and stampedes in the gathering of the herds, has decided to have them hunted down.

He has agreed to furnish any person wanting a buffalo with saddle horses, a guide and all necessary equipment, and charge $250 for the buffalo. As the head alone is worth $200 and the hide $100 more, the offer of both adventure and profit has made a strong appeal to sportsmen.

Howard Douglas has issued a circular setting forth particulars of the buffalo hunt and asking for applicants for the chase. Among those who have already replied asking for reservations are Sheriff W. [illegible] Robertson and James Ross, Edmonton, S. A. Ramsey and Colonel Walker, of Calgary, A. H. Esterman, H. V. Pauling, of Wainwright.

Mr. Douglas returned to the city last evening from Wainwright, having superintended the unloading of the consignment of buffalo received at the park last week. The buffalo hunt which the Alberta sportsmen will engage in will be the last to take place in America. When the thirty-five head of outlaw bulls have been slain, the remaining fifty head, at large on the Montana plains, will be easily rounded up. All the buffalo in the world will then be in captivity, with the exception of the wood bison of the north, which are under the protection of the Dominion government and may not be hunted or killed.

The North-West Mounted Police and the Murderer

Two Prospectors Go Away and But One Returns—Suspicions Lead to Inquiries and One of the Finest Pieces of Detective Work on Record Was Done

NOT many years ago, a broken down Western American adventurer, an erstwhile cowboy, prospector, gambler, and tramp, ran across a young Englishman, with a little ready money, and game for anything.

It didn't take long to convince the young tenderfoot that up north in Canada untold riches awaited him in the shape of mineral wealth.

The joyous free life of "The Prospector" skilfully depicted, appealed to this young scion of a noble family, and after many libations a partnership was formed. [illegible]

For a day or two the stranger loafed round the Fort buying a few necessaries and getting himself trimmed up a bit, as is customary upon reaching the outposts of civilization, before setting out on the long journey east—there were no railways in those days out there. But fate had decreed otherwise, and even then the mysterious hand of Providence, call it what you will, was upon the collar of that lonely stranger.

The historian tells us that an old reliable employee of the wonderful old Hudson's Bay Company, possessed of all the instincts of the trapper, thought he recognized the stranger and in his own mind identified him as the partner of our young English friend who had passed through there not many months before in search of gold.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

CLOAKS and wraps are the first to indicate the trend of fashion for the coming winter, and already it is quite apparent that the extra wrap or outer garment will be an important factor in the winter outfit. The smart severe tailor street gown is considered an absolute necessity by almost every woman, but with the fashions of the present moment the real tailor made gown has little in common, for its always more or less conservative lines are totally at variance with the still extreme styles that are so noticeable. The one piece gown, so called, though now it is in two pieces, skirt and waist, is not always compatible with a coat of the same material, for a weight of fabric that is best for a skirt and waist is often impossible for an outer garment, being either too heavy or too light. Then there must be the extra wrap, coat or cloak, for there are very few days, in America at all events, during the autumn when the gown without a coat is sufficiently warm.

This has been and is a season when the wearing of scarfs of all kinds has been most fashionable, and while many have been of thin materials suitable for summer there have been many of silk and satin, which are now being made up with an interlining to give more warmth and are also being copied in that he's biting his nails at this very minute and wondering what to do with the girl now that he's got her."

"Got her!" echoed Grant, turning pale and agitated.

"[illegible] what I would mean," Smuggle-erie said uneasily. "I never gave it a thought but I see now. He'd send for her and ask her, and —"

There was a silence. Each was pursuing the name of the poor girl under the rack of [illegible] divided between [illegible] her love and her [illegible]

CHAPTER XIV.

Stand by to Go About!

Heather Bloom and Smuggle-erie were too horror-stricken to do anything for a while but look at the finger, which protruded from the barrel with a kind of devilish accusation. But the brains of both men were working rapidly. In a flash of intuition each knew the name of the murdered man; made a shrewd guess at his murderers; saw the trick which had been played upon them and realized the terrible consequences that were likely to ensue.

Yet it was no time to stand there and glare. The crew, alarmed by Croghleesom's [illegible], were crowding around the barrel. [illegible]'s eyes suddenly shot into their midst, and, in a terrible, rasping voice, he said:

"All hands on deck! Where's the Red [illegible]? [illegible] go forrard and bring aft that red-headed fiend. [illegible] and you, too [illegible] the [illegible] whelp, too [illegible] here!"

[illegible] Heather Bloom had seen the surly Archibald [illegible] against the mainmast, regarding the proceedings with a cold uninterested gaze.

He came forward at the captain's command and stood up before him, with his long arms dangling listlessly at his side. Not even then the three [illegible] came his voice, muffled and hoarse:

"Murder! Murder on my ship! She told me! She told me it would come to that! Poor little lass! If it wasn't for thrale— —"

He suddenly looked up, dashed his hand across his eyes, and the steel trap shut upon his face.

"What's to be done?" he snapped.

"It's mostly done already," said Smuggle-erie coolly. "If you can find anything else to do, you've more brains than me."

"Let's take this from the beginning," said Grant, becoming strangely calm. "Horneycraft is found dead on my ship in a barrel of coarse salt. That barrel of coarse salt came from Cot house, where Horneycraft had been prowling about for evidence. The Red Mole owns that place, and is responsible for every barrel of contraband aboard—he and Ferrymegeour. He— Smuggle-erie!" he cried, breaking off short. "You remember in the cave, Saturday night, now this man Red Mole blurted out that Horneycraft was dead and then swore he had never seen him, and how Ferrymegeour said Archibald would take care of Horneycraft. Oh, why talk? They killed him, put him in a barrel, and shipped it along with the hogs. In fine, they knew that if we landed that barrel without discovering its contents, and somebody else found the body, it would be traced back to us and it would go hard and certain with a poor devil of a smuggler because it happened to be a revenue officer who was killed. Oh, the archfiend!"

Smuggle-erie began to whistle.

"Why land the barrel at all?" he said after a bit. "It's customary, isn't it, to give a man decent burial at sea, even if he happens to be a revenue officer?"

TO all appearances Turkey knows what to do with her ex-Sultan to prevent any strenuous interference with the course of political events. The prescription is simple—continuous and complete isolation from the outside world. Small wonder then that Sultan Abdul Hamid is described as the "unhappiest man on earth" as he passes melancholy days in the Villa Alatini. A correspondent of the London Express reports an account from the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger of the "Sick Man of Europe's" invalid existence. So fearful is he of assassination that he has never appeared at any of the windows of his villa lest he be shot. We read:

Neither advice nor entreaties, nor even stringent medical orders, will induce him to leave the house and take exercise in the garden.

Not only does he remain stubbornly indoors, but nothing will make him leave the first floor of the villa. He fears to trust himself to the ground floor lest bombs should be concealed in the cellars beneath. He will not go up to the second floor for he thinks the villa might be set on fire and he would perish before he could escape.

A victim to insomnia he never undresses, but his thin, bowed figure is seen wandering during the night from [illegible] falls exhausted and slumbers [illegible] on a couch.

He works as a carpenter during the day and recently he finished making a large wardrobe.

Strangely enough, his one desire is to find a purchaser for it. It is not that he needs the money, but he longs to convince himself that the work of his hands is of monetary value.

He begs his warders for leave to send the wardrobe away from the villa to be sold, but his request is refused invariably. The Turkish Government fears that within the woodwork there may be concealed some undesirable communication to his friends.

Abdul Hamid knows nothing of the outside world. [illegible]

THE MYSTERY

[illegible]

The Unchangeable Emperor

Some of the Kaiser's Speeches

"I have read the Kaiser's speech. I can only say the Hohenzollerns never alter."—Herr Bebel, the German Socialist leader, in "The Daily Mail."

SHORT is memory and short is repentance. Barely two years ago the German Emperor promised to put a curb on his tongue and the German people said, "Now we shall get on better." But, as Herr Bebel observes, the Hohenzollerns never alter. The speech at Koenigsberg certainly shows that months of enforced silence have not changed either the manner or the matter of the imperial orations. It is as flamboyant and dictatorial in tone and as instinct with belief in "sovereignty by Divine right," as any of those harangues that have astonished the world and agitated Germany since William II. ascended the throne in 1888.

There is a general belief that the Emperor takes for his model and ideal the grandfather who, in the words of the Koenigsberg speech, "placed by his own right the crown of the Kings of Prussia on his head, once again laying stress upon the fact that it was conferred upon him by the grace of God alone, and not by Parliaments, National Assemblies or popular decrees." But we have the Kaiser's own confession that his hero is the Great Elector, Frederick William, who established his authority at Koenigsberg at a "rocher de bronze."

"We all of us work, so to speak, in the shadow of the Great Elector, a man who, with every fibre and with his whole heart, loved his homeland, and who exerted himself with unceasing energetic toil for its benefit, until he had developed and amalgamated his Brandenburg into a firm, coherent whole, allaying the countless wounds which an inhuman thirty years war had inflicted. He is that ancestor of mine for whom I have the greatest admiration and who has, since my boyhood days, illuminated the path before me as my model and ideal."

In 1900 the Emperor presented to the city of Bielfeld a bronze reproduction of the monument of the Great Elector in Berlin, and added to the gift words that find an echo in the speech at Koenigsberg.

"This [illegible] is also a memento to myself urging me on with a will as true as my great ancestor's, in the path which I have recognized as the right one, uninfluenced by opposition of every kind."

Again in 1900 we have the same declaration of a Divine mission.

What were the causes which made it possible for our House of Hohenzollern to achieve such grand results? Only this, that each and every Hohenzollern ruler [illegible] from the first that he was but the representative here below of a Higher One, that he was to give an account one day of his acts and [illegible] [illegible] which inspired every single one of my forefathers. Thence the unbending [illegible] which enabled them to carry through what they had [illegible]

There is a familiar ring about the Koenigsberg oration that recalls the speech of the Kaiser in East Prussia in 1894:

"The opposition of nobles against the will of their King is a [illegible] thing [illegible] when the King himself stands at its head. How often have my ancestors [illegible]

[illegible]

The Kaiser's faith is [illegible]

Addressing the officers of the Berlin garrison in 1900 he said:

"As my grandfather labored for his Army, so will I in like manner and unceasingly carry on and carry through the work of reorganizing my Navy, in order that it may be worthy of my land forces, and that by it also the German Empire may be in a position to win abroad a place it has not yet attained. With the two united I hope to be enabled, by the guidance of God, to prove the truth of the saying of Frederick William I.: 'When one of this world wants to decide something, the pen will not do unless it is supported by the strength of the sword.'"

Those lofty ideals, expressed now in the language of prophet and priest and poet and now in the flamboyant style of the hustings, have occasional lapses that astonish admirers in this country. Take, for example, the address to students at Bonn in '91:

"It is my firm conviction that every youth who enters a beer-drinking and duelling club will receive the true direction of his life from the spirit prevailing there. He who sneers at the German Student Corps does not understand its real meaning. I hope that as long as there are German corps students the spirit which is there fostered and which is steeled by strength and courage, will be preserved, and that you will always take delight in handling the duelling blade. Many people do not understand what our duels really mean, but that must not lead us astray. You and I know better."

It would be rash to judge the German Emperor by a few extracts from his innumerable orations on almost every topic with the range of human knowledge and experience. His opinion has as many sides as his character and his abilities. Yet two convictions stand out plainly and unmistakably—that he rules Germany by Divine right and that the rattle of the sabre is the strongest of arguments.

A NEW EUROPEAN KINGDOM.

THE BALKAN STATES have long been a volcanic region of political disturbance. The little principality of Montenegro has played no mean part in the struggle with the Turk and with the efforts of German and Austrian intrigue. Now at last Prince Nicholas is to be received into the sacred circle of European kings. He has already granted his people a constitution and a parliament and now a further guarantee is to be given for peace in the Balkan Peninsula by his recognition in the chancelleries as a [illegible] monarch. His subjects number barely a quarter of a million; the area of his mountain kingdom, rising at some points to a height of 8,000 feet, is only [illegible] square miles—but, like Homer's hero, Montenegro, "small in stature is yet a fighter," and, as Tennyson says [illegible] a fine sonnet of its [illegible] "have breathed a race [illegible] mountaineers." Commenting on the jubilee and the coronation of the Prince The Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette (London) remarks:

Sympathy will go out strongly to the valiant little state of Montenegro [illegible] the jubilee of Prince Nicholas's reign. There is a touch of the romantic, the Spartan, the Homeric about the kingdom of the limestone [illegible] which has drawn out our hearts' affection in full measure. The magnificent warriors with their handsome faces and picturesque attire, bristling with [illegible] and cartridges, struck the imagination of a race brought up on Fenimore Cooper and Mr. [illegible] [illegible]

SCIATICA

EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by "Nerviline"

We have all read and heard of the agonies of Sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor C. Hires makes the following declaration: "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended 'Nerviline.' I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. In order to build up my general health and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

CURED SIX YEARS

There isn't a more highly esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." In two sizes, 50c. and 25c., sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A GATE TO STOP RUNAWAYS.

A DEVICE to check runaway horses has been devised and put to successful operation on the Williamsburg Bridge, New York, which on account of its wide roadways and lack of trolley-cars seems to have acquired an unusual record in the matter of runaways, far exceeding the number on the Brooklyn Bridge. In four years 105 runaways took place, 33 horses were killed and 47 injured, while at the same time 96 persons were injured. Says Popular Electricity:

"On April 14, 1910, a 'runaway gate,' the idea of a laborer on the bridge, was put into operation. The device consists of two leaves built of plank as shown, 40 feet long and 6 feet 9 inches high, mounted on wheels. The officer in charge needs only to close a switch which sets in operation motors which cause racks and pinions to push the two ends of the leaves toward each other, forming a V with the opening facing the direction from which the traffic is coming, except that a space [illegible] through which a man may pass is left at the apex. In the one runaway which occurred since its installation the horse started 150 feet distant, and by the time it had reached the gate the leaves were nearly closed. The horse breaking away from the harness passed through the opening without injury, leaving the wagon in the apex of the V. The leaves swing back parallel with the sides of the bridge when not in service."

How Horse Thieves are Treated.—Sixteen horse thieves have been lynched by peasants in the village of Smirnoff, Russia. They were thrashed and beaten by the owners of the horses, three of them killed and thirteen severely mutilated. Cossacks arrived the day after the lynching and arrested forty-three of the villagers.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

THE hat plays so important a part in the dress question of today that the autumn and winter styles in headgear are eagerly sought for weeks before it is time to make the change from the summer fashion. The leading milliners, with designers and workers, have been hard at work for a far longer period than the general public can conceive of, studying out what shall and what shall not be worn, while the buyers have been on the lookout for anything smart and original since long before the summer hats were first displayed. So much depends upon the hat that all this preparation, all this expenditure of time, thought and strength is absolutely essential, for the effect of the smartest and most becoming of gowns can easily be ruined by an ugly hat, while an ugly, ineffective, shabby costume will look well if the hat is up to date and becoming.

And what are the new hats to be, large or small? This is the question most important of all. Both large and small will be fashionable is the somewhat guarded answer, which may be taken to indicate that for certain occasions the small hat and for others the large must be worn. Never were there so many toques and turbans as this autumn, but never were there so many large exaggeratedly large shapes exhibited and in all the details, such as the size of the crown and the width of the brim, is there the same diversity of choice, but there are many more small crowns to be seen than there were last year, small in the head size, that is, and the hats, while many turn down around the face, do not have the all concealing big crowned effects, and more of the hair in consequence is shown. The smartest and most becoming toques are draped in folds of soft material or two or three different materials are combined, as well as different colors. After having admitted velvet and satin to the list of summer fabrics suitable for hats, lace and tulle are permitted for winter and the tulle and velvet theatre and restaurant hat now exhibited is most charmingly dainty. In the autumn the entire satin hat or the satin trimmed with velvet is also immensely popular.

Flowers for some time to come will be fashionable as trimming and will undoubtedly be fashionable all winter for what are known from the [illegible] standpoint as dress hats. The flowers are velvet or satin and velvet combined and are most gracefully and cleverly put on to stand [illegible] straight or at a becoming angle [illegible] marvelously like the real [illegible] the flowers are also wonderfully true to nature [illegible] are fashionable, and black and white, with the yellow stamens, are most charmingly attractive [illegible] whether of [illegible] or velvet. [illegible] and it is best to use instead [illegible] flower or a fantasy of feathers [illegible] strange [illegible] feathers that bear no resemblance to any feathers growing [illegible] the naturalist.

Extreme simplicity and beauty of [illegible] the smartest hats [illegible] a bow of velvet [illegible] made by the most [illegible] stupendous prices demanded [illegible] degree [illegible] most carefully thought out [illegible] the merest too much or too little [illegible] to change the effect. [illegible] for millinery this season. It is too early to select the entire outfit of hats for the winter, as the hats made of fur or trimmed with it need not be chosen at the moment, only, in planning out the entire winter outfit it is advisable to provide for at least one fur hat if one wishes to be in the height of fashion.

While the large shapes are considered correct style for the theatre or restaurant, there are seen the most attractive hats so small that they might reasonably be called head dresses, made for the more elaborate style of dress. A small close fitting cap of fancy net or of open work jewelled bands covering the top of the head, with a large white or black aigrette, is immensely smart and becoming for theatre or restaurant, and the aigrette poised at just the right angle gives height and style in a most effective manner. It is on the theatrical order, but it is one of the few things that can be theatrical without the background of the stage. It is [illegible] the same style of hat or bonnet in black velvet with a large high aigrette will be worn with an elaborate street costume this winter, the aigrette wide enough to be branched [illegible] across the hat. Ostrich feathers and aigrettes are still [illegible] fashion. In the most elaborate and expensive hat trimmings the shaded ostrich feathers are extremely effective, the feathers long and drooping and with the shading of color most artistically arranged so that the deepest color shades at the ends into the very light, this being more generally becoming. Colored feathers on black hats are also in style and colored ostrich plumes but all other kinds including stiff wings. Black hats are most popular, both all black and with the [illegible] and [illegible] trimmings, and although the hat to match the costume is still to be seen, the all black hat is permissible with any and every color of gown.

The taffeta hats are among the latest [illegible] fashions and both the high toques and mob cap shapes are popular. The great danger of this fashion lies in its comparative cheapness, but it must be understood that a cheap taffeta [illegible] hat is an impossibility for any well-gowned woman and these are almost luxuries, just to be worn when straw hats are [illegible] the moment out of season and before the season has begun for velvet and felt and fur, velvet, in spite of its having been worn this summer, not being really a summer fabric in America, at all events.

The fashion of the wide scarf continues popular and there are new designs being exhibited with the latest styles in hats, in fact often hat and scarf are chosen together. One of the most becoming designs is the wide [illegible] scarf trimmed with bands of shaded ostrich feathers [illegible] the black and white ostrich feather [illegible] charming [illegible] shade trimmed with black and white ostrich plumes, while another [illegible] in different shades of purple. Then the [illegible] cloaks and coats [illegible] of lace or [illegible] garment [illegible] of bright [illegible] cloak of the [illegible] coming [illegible] shoulders of [illegible] embroidery [illegible] to all such details [illegible] incidentally adds to the expense.

When one considers that women and men of [illegible] and many years training in the art of dressmaking are [illegible] to keep up the [illegible] of new styles [illegible] do not want the [illegible] to deteriorate [illegible] commonplace the amateur dressmaker need not condemn herself as stupid if her efforts are not always rewarded with success. The best way to assure one's self of a triumph [illegible] is a faithful study of the styles as shown in the best published photographs of the new fashions and in the shops of the fashionable modistes or upon the happy owners of elegant costumes who are to be seen in public on certain occasions. Often this will give the amateur a very distinct idea of what she should strive for in her finished product, and in dressmaking as in all other arts one should see the end from the beginning. It is not often that the paper pattern, although it gives the necessary plan on which to work, supplies detailed instruction for making a truly smart creation. In fact, such instruction can hardly be given in words. It is dependent so largely on line and on the perfection of details that it is necessary for the dressmaker to be fully conscious of what constitutes the style of the particular mode, which she wishes to copy before she starts her work. There are usually also certain points to be observed in the making of any one of these models which are much more important than the choice of any particular design, and these points can be best learned by the faithful study of the season's models which come from the best [illegible]

Just now the principal point to be borne in mind when one is about to make a frock is the necessity for a pliable and graceful waist effect. A stiff looking waist will utterly de[illegible]

"I suffered all my life from Chronic Constipation and no doctor, or remedy, I ever tried helped me. "Fruit-a-tives" promptly cured me. SENTINELS OF THE WIRE
By Harold Sands

MOST remarkable in the world is the description which has been applied to the Yukon telegraph. [illegible]

It Is a Liver Pill.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating or drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

ILL HEALTH, ITS CAUSE
Sluggishness of Liver and Bowels

It took me a long time to learn, and big doctors' bills in the bargain, writes Mr. Ogilby, of Winnipeg, that the disturbance of my system was due simply to liver and bowel inactivity. A nervousness and languor extinguished my old-time ambition. I fear irritability of temper added little to the comfort of my family, yet the headaches, general misery and melancholy forebodings that weighed me down ought to be considered. Tonics, electric treatment and mineral waters in turn failing to cure me, the advertising of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the testimonials supporting the claim of great medicinal virtue induced me to try them. The result of even the first box made clear that my own body was making its own poisons, that by driving it from the system and removing the cause which undoubtedly resided in the liver and bowels, by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, my health would be as good as ever.

It seems certain to me that more than half the sickness we see about us is caused by carelessness in keeping the bowels open and the liver active. Dr. Hamilton's Pills I found do both, and do it better than other remedies. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

showed that the tree had been chopped away until only a gentle blow was needed to cause it to topple across the telegraph line.

"Who did this?" demanded the lineman of some Indians who were watching him. They smiled.

"Klootch chop 'em," they replied.

The lineman sought the Indian girl and she confessed that, sighing for one Irish lover forty miles away, she had hit on the plan of felling trees so that he would have to come to attend to the consequent breaks in the wire.

RINGS ON CIGARS

The practice of placing paper rings or bands upon cigars had its origin in the early days of cigar-smoking, and was designed as a convenience for Spanish and Cuban women smokers.

The first bands used were of plain Manila paper, which the woman smoker removed from the cigar and placed upon her finger, for use in flicking the ash from the cigar without soiling or burning the fingers.

Manufacturers later sought to improve the appearance of their cigars by substituting handsomely colored and embossed bands for the plain rings of Manila paper, and the use of these finely lithographed bands, for many years confined to the higher priced goods, has gradually extended until at the present time it is almost universal.

In fact, to such an extent has the cigar ring been adopted by enterprising manufacturers that its absence from a cigar is in some circles regarded as more indicative of quality than otherwise.

The BUCK-EYE does not need any artificial embellishment of this nature. The manufacturers of the BUCK-EYE decided that, as their customers did not smoke the band, it was bad business to take good money that should go towards improving the quality of the cigar to put into ornamental bands.

That is one reason why the BUCK-EYE makes rings around all other cigars.

P.S.—The BUCK-EYE needs no band to make it saleable. Smokers know it as the best Ten-Cent cigar sold.

The Death Spider

ONE time I was staying down at the Hacienda del Torreon, in the State of Durango. It belonged to my friend and my family's friend, Mariano Conde.

He and I had been out after "berrendos"—lots of antelope and deer still around there—and we got back into Saturday afternoon, just as the "mayordomo" was calling the "raya." That means what we Americans would say by "giving them their time." He takes the list from the bookkeeper's figures, and compares it with the accounts kept for themselves by the peons. As they can not read nor write, they use a system of lines and circles to denote a day, half-day, quarter-day, a "real" (twelve and a half cents), a "medio" (dollars), etc. If the two accounts tally and they generally do, for these rancho folk are mighty honest, then they are paid, sometimes in money, but more generally—the most part, anyway, of their wages—in orders on the "tienda." These "hacienda" stores make lots of money for the "hacendados," and keep the people in debt just about as hopeless as the old scheme of peonage. But the tienda at Torreon was very fairly managed, and the people always could have money if they preferred it to credits.

That time, after the raya was over, and most of the people had gone lounging away for their one rest of the week—for it is a great mistake to think that the "peones" are loafers—they really work like beavers—well, as I was saying, one girl walked up to the mayordomo and said something in a low tone.

"By! what's that?" said Don Enrique, "thou, Yamacla, asking for the washing! Are the clouds readying to rain honey? Since when art thou tired of resting?"

We could not hear what she said, but she appeared to be insisting. Don Enrique looked a question at Mariano. Of course the mayordomo had the right to distribute the work as he thought proper, but when the "amo" was actually on the spot, it was "compromiso"—that is to say, Mexican etiquette—that the employee should consult the master. [illegible] keep away from him and out of mischief. Of course Enrique will let her go with the lavanderas—thinkest not that he should, Carlitos?"

Now I want to say, right here, though it has nothing to do with my story, that my name is not Carlitos, nor Carlos, nor Charles in any shape whatever. My true name is odd and uncommon, even in English, and the Mexicans are determined I shall have "a Christian (i.e., saint's) name," so they have saddled several on me. I am generally Yone, or the diminutive or nickname of it—'Chas, and from that has become my being called 'Jack" by Americans. Mariano dislikes Imes in Spanish as much as I do in English, and so to him I am "Carlos."

A day or two after, we rode around by the "acequia." By Jove! it was a pretty sight there—I wished I was a painter. The wide, deep ditch, with its white sand bottom, was full of rippling water, humming to itself a little song, and the poplars along the edge keeping time to it, with all their glossy leaves a-clapping like tiny hands. Along the bank, in the fringe of ferns and water-sedges, was a string of women kneeling, some in a sort of scoop made of a goods-box, but mostly in holes hollowed in the sand, or boards—are boards in Mexico. Sloping into the water before them, each one had a board or a big flat stone, and on it she scraped, and thumped, and pounded, and paddled the soiled clothes, rinsed by sousing in the water, or by pouring over water with an "olla," or a painted "jicara"—a calabash. Some used the long, inch square bars of Mexican soap, others used pounded or grated "amole" (soap-root), but this was mostly for woollens. The women looked well, moving in free, vigorous swings, with their long, black braids swaying, their blue "rebozos" catching the sun, and their bright skirts. Their brown arms and necks showed like bronze above the white chemises, for these rancho workwomen do not wear waists or jackets.

When we got to Yamacla, we saw that she was washing her stent with some herb—a lot of green leaves. [illegible] to me readers and they can make what they can out of it. I have never tested them personally, but I have eaten of eggs preserved by the first method after being stored away six months, and it would have been impossible to tell the difference between the eggs we had for our meal and fresh laid eggs.

The first recipe is called the sulphur process.

The best of all preservatives is sulphur, but as it will not dissolve in water, we must convert it into gas by mixing it with oxygen, forming what is known as sulphurous acid—gas, mind you, not sulphuric acid—gas, which is done by burning it. To protect eggs place them in a tight box with a sliding lid such as starch commonly comes in. Place a tablespoonful of sulphur on an oyster shell or other suitable receptacle, and set it on fire. As soon as it begins to burn, close the lid tightly and leave it for half an hour. Now take out the eggs and pack them in perfectly dry oats in a box or barrel, filling it full enough that when closed it may be turned over without the eggs ... and once a week turn the box over. ... Eggs treated as above directed and kept in a cool place will remain fresh for months.

A Tale of Baseball and Love

The Pretty Girl Knew the Game—The Plain One Had to be Shown—Which Won?

NOW, as soon as young Mr. Hightower (a New York Sun character) settled in his new boarding house he picked out the prettiest girl and said:

"Oh, Miss Toffey."

"Yes, Mr. Hightower?"

"I was wondering whether you would like to go to the ball game with me this afternoon."

"Why, yes, Mr. Hightower. I should like it very much."

And so that the matter may be fully understood we beg to state that there were no errors in Miss Toffey's make-up, her eyes were like diamonds, her curves broke well, she was always making a hit and one glance from under her eyelashes was generally sufficient to bring in a home run almost any old time that she cared to exercise her option. For the rest of it she had a pert little nose, a pert little mouth, and she always had a look of disdain somewhere near at hand, where she could lay her hands on it in case of emergencies. Yes ... such was Miss Toffey whom young Mr. Hightower took to see the ball game.

"You see that place in the middle of the diamond?" he asked after they had taken their seats. "Well, that is where the pitcher stands."

Miss Toffey looked at the place in question.

"I don't see how on earth you heard what the umpire said," said Mr. Hightower.

"Oh, I think Silk has got a lovely voice; don't you?"

"Silk?"

"Silk O'Loughlin."

"Oh, yes." And turning to his neighbor on the other side Mr. Hightower said: "Silk has got a great voice, hasn't he?"

The man at the bat smote the ball on the nose and it bounded painfully over the field.

"That," said Mr. Hightower, "was a hit. The best hitter in the two big leagues is going to get an automobile. Lajoie is up at the bat next. He is running Ty Cobb hard for the prize."

"Snodgrass is second in the race," said Miss Toffey, "not Lajoie."

"No, I'm pretty sure that Lajoie is second."

"No, daddy's average is .365 and Lajoie's .362."

And as for Mr. Hightower, he fell into silence and moved uneasily around in his seat.

"Knaupp is at the bat," he said once, consulting his score card.

"No, that isn't Knaupp," said Miss Toffey. "They have taken Knaupp out. Don't you remember that he had blond hair? This new man is Hall. Last July he made an unassisted triple play, don't you remember?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Hightower, weakly.

Only once after that did he try his hand.

"That wasn't a ball," he said. "That was a strike. It went over the plate just even with the batter's chin."

"No, that was a ball," said Miss Toffey. "A strike has to go between the batter's shoulders and his knees."

And then Mr. Hightower subsided.

THE LAST OF THE OLD THUNDERER —From the London "Graphic"

While the new "Thunderer" is being built at Canning Town, England, there can be seen, on the opposite side of the River Thames, the pathetic sight of the breaking up of the old "Thunderer," a turret ship of the second class, which was built in 1877.

"Smuggling ..." said Larkin with a silly laugh. "I said smuggling. The smugglers, you know," and the laird looked astonished ... "I was saying, actually drove a cartload of contraband whisky under the castle windows on Sunday night."

The laird staggered back a couple of paces. Larkin could not help noting the blank astonishment on his face. "What did you say?" he stammered.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

THAT "there is nothing new under the sun" applies more to the fashions in dress to-day than to anything in the world, and equally true is the old saying that if a gown is kept for seven years it will again be in style. But it will be a brave and patient woman who will wait the seven years and then wear the same gown without some marked alteration thereto. The general outline and design of the newest models for the winter street costumes are not like those of so long ago as seven years since, but they have many points in common with those of three or four seasons past.

The favorite skirt waist model at the moment, the advance style as it is declared to be, is apparently simple, but it is a studied simplicity not easily attained. Fashion cont...

plain satin edged with a fold of velvet, collar and cuffs of satin heavily embroidered, while above the circular side piece a band of embroidery is worked on the cloth itself. This band does not go entirely around the coat, but stops at either side. The back, while quite flat and straight from the shoulders, has a seam down the centre, and in consequence is much more becoming to the majority of women, for it is only a slender woman who looks well with the plain, straight back effect of coat. One of the newest styles has the back quite wide across the shoulders and then sloped in toward the waist. This is rarely becoming and the fashion does not seem destined to be popular, but it is different from the fashions that have prevailed so long and for that reason may become worthy of imitation.

Black is to be fashionable this season, and the satin finish black cloths are always effective, all black, with only the relief of color in the waistcoat, which is not always separate but is part of the coat itself. Moire is a favorite material for the waistcoat, while Japanese embroidery, cloth and old brocade are also used. There are some coats made with collars of colored velvet or with revers faced with color. This fashion is sometimes becoming and effective, but it is apt to be too popular, and there are so few colors that contrast well, even with black. The bright dark blue that has been so popular all summer appears again in these trimmings and is far better than anything else in so far as being generally becoming, but an emerald green is newer. White cloth is also included as among the possibilities, the principal objection being that black and white have been so much worn all summer that the fashion is no longer new. A most striking effect is gained by black velvet collar and revers with an edge of white satin ribbon. This white against the black of the cloth of the costume and the black velvet collar ...

GOD KEEP MY BOY GEORGE V

Recollections of His Majesty's Foster Mother

TO have nursed and brought up a King is an experience that few people can look back upon, but there is a woman alive today who can boast that the boy she fostered years ago has become the ruler of the greatest nation in the world, His Majesty George V. of Great Britain, and of our vast dominions beyond the seas.

That woman is Mrs. Ann Roberts, and she is now living in a quiet little American village with her brother. She is seventy-three years old, and she comes from a very old Welsh family. She lived in 1866, with her husband, who was a respectable tradesman, carrying on the business of a ... near Buckingham Palace.

But among all the babies she has ... not one appealed to Mrs. Roberts as did George V. How often I fondled him on my knee, I could not tell ... many times, she said, ... to King that God would bless his reign ... mindful of his high office ...

Vexed Question Again Up

Certain Objections by Coun. Craig To Further Expenditures of Water Supply Money—Wants Engineer's Advice—Contract Awarded

A special [illegible] meeting [illegible] Monday night [illegible] members [illegible] council being present except [illegible] Henderson. The object of [illegible] meeting [illegible] proposition from Messrs. [illegible] & Davis, operators of a diamond [illegible] drilling outfit, capable of [illegible] feet, for putting down [illegible] for the town in the [illegible] of attaining a heavy water supply.

On the ground that there is no immediate necessity of water for fire fighting purposes and further that a civil engineer [illegible] be employed before a dollar [illegible] spent, Coun. Craig took a [illegible] decided stand against the proposition. He was agreeable [illegible] to employing a drilling outfit for the drilling of more wells in the town [illegible] this was what he advocated [illegible] the time the contract was let [illegible] the day before, while acknowledging that the town with its chemical engine, ladders and buckets and hose connection with the C. N. R., possessed fire fighting apparatus probably unequalled by towns of its size, the other members of the council could not see any gain to be obtained by the town towards the solution of ever really obtaining a heavy water supply by frittering away the money which was raised by last year's council for a specific purpose and object. At the same time it was pointed out that the [illegible] residential section of the town was [illegible] of [illegible] of the [illegible] supply. There were [illegible] that the debenture money should be used for the object for which it was raised [illegible] to sink a well to a water bearing depth. The problem [illegible] which has to be solved by the town sooner or later and when the [illegible] of the ratepayers has been [illegible] money raised for a specific purpose, that money should be expended in the manner prescribed.

[illegible] passages were exchanged around the board and near the hour of midnight the [illegible] was closed [illegible] the putting and carrying of the following motion:

Dunsmore—Rutherford: That we accept the offer of Messrs. [illegible] & Davis to drill a [illegible] inches in diameter. Offer being $1.75 [illegible] first 75 feet and [illegible] cents a foot additional for each 25 feet up to 900 feet, and $4.00 per foot after 900 feet as deep as council requires to go. They to [illegible] town to purchase same.

Carried.

The council was again called together Tuesday morning to hear objection of K. McLay to the location of a livery stable on the corner of Alberta Ave. and First St. North opposite his residence and requesting that council not grant permit to the purchasers of the property in question, Messrs. Armstrong & Darling, for operation of same on the grounds that it would be a nuisance.

Mr. McLay and Messrs. Armstrong & Darling were present.

After hearing the objections of Mr. McLay on behalf of himself and other residents in that portion of the town, the solicitor for the town, N. Murray, was called in to define the powers of the town in the matter. Under the ordinance a livery [illegible] classified as a nuisance, though it might become a nuisance in several ways. The council was [illegible] to be without power to prohibit Messrs. Armstrong & Darling from running and operating a livery stable on the corner above mentioned.

Hunting Bison in Southern India

By W. R. Gilbert

I HAD been some months in the country, on this my second visit, and my lot was cast amongst the wooded hills of Travancore, and having shot various beasts of small importance, like most new arrivals, was always yearning for a tiger, worrying my friends for information, till I am sure they must have wished that I could find one that would remove me from their midst. But all to no purpose, and for the very simple reason that there was not a tiger in the place.

Early one morning I was returning from one of many all-night vigils in a tree, when the shikari who accompanied me pointed to something on the ground. "What is it?" I asked, too sleepy to care, yet hoping it might be the fresh track of a leopard. "Bison, sahib," he replied, using the local name, which now I cannot remember. I looked, and there, impressed deeply in the mud, were what appeared to be the hoof marks of a bullock. Now, I had been told that bison sometimes visited the neighborhood, but having heard of none since my arrival, had come to regard the information as one of the legendary associations of the place. As the evidence seemed conclusive, and the shikari declared the tracks to be quite fresh, my interest was aroused, and every other beast I had seen or ever heard of sank into insignificance.

On my arrival at the bungalow I was met by my "boy," who, despite his sixty years, still retained this youthful title, and who, amongst his many self-claimed virtues, possessed some sporting instincts, and I could see from the old boy's face that he had something important to impart, and on coming in later with my tea he told me he had seen some bison on a certain hill a little distance off. "But how do you know they were bison?" I inquired, wondering how he could have seen them, since the hill itself was not visible from the bungalow...

...carefully, often on tip-toe, and taking advantage of every natural opening I managed fairly well. My progress was somewhat erratic, and necessarily slow, nor could I tell whether in the right direction, having to change my course so often, but still I persevered, and when I thought I had come far enough, turned towards the open.

This was an important movement for if I had judged correctly, the herd should be now about sixty yards from me. Fortunately here the jungle was lighter, and I was able to go through it without the slightest sound, but with every step I took I paused to look and listen. Advancing thus, foot by foot, I had made about fifteen yards in about as many minutes, when I found the high jungle came abruptly to an end, leaving nothing but grass before me, a fringe of it some twenty yards in width, and so low that I could see over it.

As I stood for a time, undecided what to do, some dark objects at the farther edge attracted my attention. They looked at first like anthills, those curious creations of the white ant, but presently, to my amazement, they seemed to me to move. Thinking this must be an optical illusion, due to the waving of the grass, I examined them through the glasses, when, to my inexpressible delight, I discovered that what I had mistaken for tops of anthills were the withers of the bison. I had hit them off exactly, and there they were, barely fifty yards in front of me and seemingly quite unconscious of my presence, for they were evidently grazing, but as I stood watching them I saw a head or two suspiciously raised in the air, then slowly sink down again, as if still thinking something was amiss. I crouched down at once, then again on hands and knees crept silently through the grass till I had almost reached its edge and could now see the herd distinctly...

Board of Trade Initial Banquet

Optimism Keynote of Sparkling Addresses

Jas. McGeorge, Pres. Ed. Tod. C. on Trade a Visitor

Friday night, November 11th, the first banquet of that active body of business men designated the Vermilion Board of Trade, was held in the Brunswick Hotel, and the event will long be remembered in the annals of the town as one of great significance. The prevailing tone of the speeches at this banquet developed the fact that Vermilion possesses in a marked degree optimism of the most commendable sort, tempered with a wholesome determination to make a mark for themselves in the great future of our province. Another notable feature was the prevailing spirit of optimism which permeated the gathering, every speech rang with the true optimistic spirit which accomplishes and develops. Truly Vermilion has a brilliant future ahead of it and the City of Vermilion of 10 years hence with its 12,000 population as pictured by the speakers was to our mind a reasonable but mild forecast.

The evening's enjoyment was started at 8 o'clock when some fifty covers were laid in the [illegible]

Year's Work Source of Gratification

[illegible]

Monday, the ... with their abundance of ... viands, were filled ... and again and the ladies are ... if the material side of ... was strongly apparent in the ... appearance of all on ... from the dinner room. However, everyone seems to possess, at this time of the year, a special thanksgiving or anniversary appetite of enormous capacity, and this fact serves as sufficient apology.

Promptly at 8.30 the pastor, Mr. Simons, opened the evening's programme. He was pleased to state that the Sunday contributions were some $230.00 with only half the congregation ... the appeal for $500.00 to clear off back indebtedness, and it was a source of great gratification to note the ever increasing prosperity in church work. He introduced the Rev. Mr. Reid who delighted the audience with a sketch of "Roughing it in Alberta", which was interspersed with vocal items by local talent.

Ontario has this year a very heavy crop of oats and hay and Ontario farmers are ... the Winnipeg market for stock ...

In the districts where there is still a great scarcity of water the farmers are no doubt justified in parting with their cattle, for without an abundance of water it is hopeless to attempt to feed any animal with profit. In the northern sections of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, however, there is plenty of water and plenty of rough feed, as well as a heavy supply of oats that have been more or less damaged by frost. It would certainly pay farmers in these districts to buy cattle from southern Manitoba and feed them either in open sheds or in bluffs during the winter and have them fat for the spring market.

Eyes On Vermilion

Mr. MacDonald representative of Davidson & McRae, C. N. R. townsite owners, spent a few days in Vermilion during the week and in an interview with the Standard man reported numerous enquiries and an active demand for Vermilion lots. Mr. MacDonald is authority for the statement that next year will witness great activity in the west end of the town. That Vermilion was destined to become one of the big cities of Alberta no one has ever doubted and the rapid growth of the town this year is an indication of the great future ahead. The building activity of the present year while of no mean proportions will appear insignificant compared with what we will witness in the year 1911.

Care of Farm Machinery

There is one thing in which farmers are very lax, and that is the proper housing of their farm machinery after they have finished their summer's work. If the average farmer was to be told that he was losing five hundred dollars a year through the simple neglect of something on the farm, he would be astonished to know it, and would want to know how and where the loss was coming from—that is, providing he didn't get outrageous for having been reminded about his own business. The fact remains, however, that the average farmer is just losing five hundred dollars every year that he leaves his farm machinery out during the fall and winter months. A binder in this country costs all the way from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and sixty dollars, and the average farmer buys a new binder every five or six years. A binder under ordinary conditions and with the proper care in housing, should last at least ten years. In some cases they have been known to last as long as fifteen years. So for the farmer that has to get a new binder every five or six years in these times when the trusts and combines are all combining to make prices as high as possible, it is quite easy to see that the profits accruing from the old farm are going to dwindle away to a pretty small item, and ten to one that farmer will tell you there is no money in farming.

Every farmer, whether farming one hundred and sixty acres or one thousand acres, should have sheds for his machinery. When through with an article of machinery in the summer or fall he should do nothing else before he puts that article safely away in a good solid shed, free from the wind, rain and snow. In the case that his machinery, then he should use ... the thing which can least stand the outside weather. First, of course, to go in, should be the binder. Above all farm implements ... to stand the elements ... the weather is the binder ...

Board of Trade Initial Banquet

guests assembled themselves around the attractive banqueting board and did ample justice to the elaborate menu served by The Brunswick Hotel.

Among the distinguished visitors present was James McGeorge, president of the Edmonton board of trade. President Seed read letters of regret from Premier Sifton, W. Prest of Mannville, W. H. Cairns, Islay, and the president of the Lloydminster board of trade, after which the toast list of the evening was proceeded with. Following that of "The King" came the "Town of Vermilion" ably responded to by Mayor Stephens and R. G. Dunsmore. "The District of Vermilion" drew forth intensely interesting addresses from J. A. Rowlsborough and M. A. Brimacombe. The banqueters listened to a splendid address from Jas. McGeorge, president of the Edmonton board of trade, who expressed his genuine pleasure at being present and dealt in a masterful manner with board of trade work, generally, strongly advocating the centralizing of the boards of trade of central Alberta for general publicity purposes—this would mean a more thorough advertising campaign, for better handling and locating of incoming settlers and more general all-round results to this portion of Alberta, for what was to the advancement of one ... to the advancement of the whole, and by a system of centralizing every portion of the territory embraced would be benefited greatly to the same extent. "Canada" drew forth two strong orations from J. Mace and J. W. G. Morrison. Chas. V. Caesar and Mr. Phelps ably responded to "Alberta". Inspector Parker upheld "Our Educational Institutions", while "The Professions" drew forth a masterly and learned speech from Dr. G. H. W. Ryan. "Our Banking Institutions" proposed by W. C. Craig and responded to by A. F. Turner were in capable hands. R. L. Craig and L. A. Knope did honors to "The Ladies", while the concluding toast "The Press" was responded to by C. V. Caesar with his usual ability.

During the banquet music was furnished by the Vermilion Orchestra.

When packing for the country cottage, don't forget your box of Zam-Buk! Blisters, sunburn, ant bites, insect stings, etc., if not immediately attended to are likely to spoil your pleasure. Zam-Buk ends these and guards against trouble from them. Take Zam-Buk instead of "taking chances."

Soothes sting [illegible] and blistered hands, heals baby's chafed places, cools the sunburn patches and prevents freckles. No mother should be without it. Purely herbal in its composition, Zam-Buk is also so superior to the ordinary ointments containing animal oils and fats and mineral coloring matter. STOP POISONING YOURSELF

Headaches and Neuralgia Pains Promptly Cured by "Fruit-a-tives."

Where there are frequent attacks of Neuralgia and Headaches, there is always Constipation, Weakness of the Kidneys and Blood Poisoning.

Non-action of the bowels compels the blood to absorb foul matter which should have passed from the body.

Weak Kidneys fail to filter from the blood the necessary amount of waste.

The blood thus becomes poisoned and it is this poisoned blood which hurts the nerves and causes Neuralgia and Headaches.

"Fruit-a-tives," made from fruit juices, acts on the bowels and kidneys and is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

King of Arms a Song Composer.

Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, Garter King of Arms, who was a prominent figure at the recent solemn functions in London, is one of England's most famous popular song composers and his "True Till Death," "Little Songs for Little Children," "The Goose Girl," and others have been instanced as examples of his talents in that direction. Few, however, who witnessed Garter King of Arms proclaiming George V. in all the glory of his mediaeval trappings and listened to his Majesty's phraseology associated him with those typically negro plantation ditties which bear his name both as composer and author. Millions have sung the choruses of "De Ring Tail Coon," "De Ole Banjo," and "Dat's Berry Queer," to mention three of Sir Alfred's most popular efforts in negro minstrelsy. Altogether he has hundreds of plantation songs and many more nursery rhymes and children's songs to his credit.

A Sure Corrective of Flatulency.—When the undigested food lies in the stomach it throws off gases causing pains and oppression in the stomachic region. The belching or eructation is offensive and the only way to prevent them is to restore the stomach to proper action. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet and a course of them taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

"Am I the first girl you ever kissed?" asked the fair young thing from the refuge of his shoulder.

"Well," he replied, "after the way my arm just naturally slipped around your waist as you unconsciously leaned toward me, and my fingers tilted your chin as you unconsciously lifted your head, and I bent forward where your lips were waiting, and didn't get the kiss either on your nose or your chin, but where it belonged—after all that, and with the knowledge of the subject which you have displayed, I shall say nothing, except that I leave the question to your own judgment."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

A Canadian lawyer tells this story:

A bailiff went out to levy on the contents of a house. The inventory began in the attic and ended in the cellar. When the dining-room was reached, the tally of furniture ran thus:

"One dining-room table, oak.
"One set chairs, (6), oak.
"One sideboard, oak.
"Two bottles whiskey, 'full.'"

Then the word "full" was stricken out and replaced by "empty," and the inventory went on in a hand that straggled and lurched diagonally across the page until it closed with:

"One revolving doormat."

The butler and the gardener were interested in the doings of the household, as butlers and gardeners should be. London "Opinion" reports the following conversation between them:

THE DEMAND FOR RUBBER.

The Supply Is Entirely Insufficient and Prices Are Soaring.

There is a great scarcity of rubber in the industrial world. More rubber is produced now than at any other time in history, but the varied demands for it are so great that the supply falls short of meeting them and prices have rapidly advanced. England is rubber mad and speculation there is almost as great and wild as in the days of the South Sea bubble of infamous memory.

The real commercial value of rubber on a large scale began with the discovery of the vulcanizing process, which permitted the making of a homogeneous joint between two pieces. At that time half a million dollars would have covered the value of the world's output. At present $40,000,000 would scarcely buy a year's output, while the total weight of the crude rubber as drawn from the tree reaches 70,000 tons.

During recent years an enormous amount of rubber planting has been going on and savage wildernesses in Asia, Africa and America have been ransacked for rubber trees. It was the increased demand for rubber that led to so many of the Congo atrocities under the administration of the late King Leopold of Belgium. Brazil is now supplying a good share of the world's supply, with the result that in the wild scramble for the product its forest are being drained. Ceylon, Java, Borneo, New Guinea, Burma, the Malay peninsula—all are planting rubber trees on an extensive scale.

In this connection we print an interesting picture dealing with rubber gathering in the Congo. Among the most industrious people in that vast and wild region are the Batetela. In gathering rubber they go into the forests inhabited by the Bankutu, who are a head-hunting people. While the men are in the forests, the provisory camp is guarded by a man who surveys the surroundings from a platform and a drummer. When the Bankutu are seen to approach the drummer beats the alarm and the men return to the camp to fight. The weapons used are spears and shields, or bows and arrows. The gathering of rubber in the Congo to satisfy the commercial greed of civilized man has been marked by many tragedies.

Hard on the Eyesight.

Looking into the fire, particularly a coal fire, is very injurious to the eyes. The stimulus of fire and heat united soon destroys the eyes. Looking at molten iron will soon destroy the sight. Reading in the twilight is injurious to the eyes, as they are obliged to make great exertion. Reading or sewing with a side light injures the eyes, as both eyes should be exposed to an equal degree of light. The reason is the sympathy between the eyes is so great that if the pupil of one eye is dilated by being kept partially in the shade the eye that is exposed cannot contract itself sufficiently for protection and will ultimately be injured.—British Health Review.

Pet Mispronunciations.

"Have you ever noticed," asked the teacher in English, "that a great many well-educated people persistently pronounce at least one word incorrectly? I know a college man who for some reason always says 'timedity' for timidity, and he drags this oddity into almost every sentence he speaks. Then there's little Mrs. Barrett, who invariably talks of practicing 'economy.' Mrs. Smith's pet word is 'prejudice,' while Mrs. Jones can't help saying 'guilantic.' Just listen to them and you'll hear the same people repeating over and over such mistakes as 'communicate,' 'predeliction,' 'circuitous,' 'percolator,' 'aerated,' 'cupola,' etc."

Watches and Pickpockets.

"It's a peculiar thing," said the headquarters detective, "that with the increase in popularity of cheap watches the number of reports which we have received of watches stolen by pickpockets has diminished greatly. No first-class pickpocket tries for watches any more. The same skill is required to get away with a dollar watch as a hundred dollar one, so when the dips found they were touching well dressed men for imitations they gradually ceased trying for them. The objective points now are stickpins, which the crooks can appraise before trying for them, and wallets, which they are willing to take a chance on."

Had Eczema on Legs for Twenty Years

Thinks no One Could Have it Worse—Was Cured by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

There are plenty of more fatal diseases than eczema, but not many which cause more downright suffering.

The tendency of eczema to spread over the body is annoying and discouraging, and the itching—the almost constant and persistent itching—nearly drives a person crazy.

You can scarcely wonder that people are enthusiastic over Dr. Chase's Ointment, when it brings them prompt relief and actually cures itching, tormenting eczema. And if you could read a few hundred of the letters we receive from cured ones you would not be long in deciding what treatment to apply for eczema, salt rheum and similar skin diseases.

Mr. Fred W. Clark, Petworth, Addington Co., Ont., writes: "My mother had eczema in both legs for about 20 years. She doctored for a long time and got everything for it, but got no relief until a friend advised her to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, which she got.

"She found that Dr. Chase's Ointment gave her great relief, so she got some more and continued this treatment faithfully, until now she is entirely cured of eczema. I don't think anyone could have this disease worse than she did, and shall not attempt to describe her sufferings. She recommends Dr. Chase's Ointment to any one suffering from eczema."

It is such cures as this that has made Dr. Chase's Ointment the "standard ointment" the world over. Do not be satisfied with the "just as good" kind. It will only disappoint. If you insist on getting what you ask for you will be better pleased afterwards and your intelligence will not be insulted next time.

Insane for Hiring Him.

Senator Dolliver tells of the trial of a man for murder, who was undoubtedly guilty, but was acquitted, greatly to the surprise of the presiding judge. The jury had been out two days considering the case, without reaching a conclusion. Then the judge called the jury into court and asked what the difficulty was. The foreman said:

"Judge, there is only one thing that is troubling us. Was the prisoner's counsel appointed by the court or retained by the prisoner himself?"

"The prisoner is a man of means," said the judge, "and he retained his own counsel."

Ten minutes later the jury sent out word that an agreement had been reached. They filed into court. The foreman rose and announced the verdict:

"Acquitted, on the grounds of insanity."

WORDS OF CAUTION TO YOUNG MOTHERS

Mothers must keep guard over the health of their little ones during the summer months. Summer is an anxious time for all mothers, but more especially for young mothers. It is the most fatal time of the year for babies and young children. It is then that stomach and bowel troubles come almost without warning, and often before the mother realizes there is any danger, the little one may be beyond aid. The mother must take strict caution to keep her little one's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine can do this so quickly and thoroughly as Baby's Own Tablets. The tablets should always be kept in the house. An occasional dose will keep baby well or if illness comes on suddenly the Tablets will quickly remove the cause and make baby well and happy. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

With the Horses

WITH every season comes up the regular complaint of the defective character of the score card at the average trotting meeting and the woeful lack of information which they should have. We will admit that the average secretary has much to contend with and that owners or trainers who enter the horses seldom comply with the rule which requires them to give the pedigrees of the horses nominated or to say that they are unknown, but there can be no excuse for a score card in which all the pedigrees are ignored and even in many cases even the color and sex of the horses are omitted.

We have before us several of these unfortunately not choice specimens of turf literature and can easily understand how and why it is that the average spectator derives no intelligent interest in the races. If he is a student of breeding he is hopeless in the dark, for neither the sire or the dam of the horse appear on the program. The vigilant reporter may, after a good deal of time and trouble, get them all right for his report, but the public is left in the dark. The next important omission is placing the numbers of the horses on the score card so that the spectator would thus be able to identify the horses. The public also like to know the names of the drivers and that is also omitted or simply the name of the man who is sitting [illegible] the name of a firm and often the name of the farm where they were bred.

All this can be obviated and grand music should be made at small expense by following the Lexington plan. Every driver must wear a colored jacket and cap. If he has not got them the club provides them. The programme not only gives the colors but also the numbers on the drivers' arms so that every driver is identified as well as the horse he drives. The spectator can then watch the progress of the race with interest and unless in a very close finish can [illegible] the horses [illegible] get all the necessary information about the horses, while the secretary should be able to give all the information as to colors and numbers. There is no excuse for a poor score card.

NATURE'S STONE-CRUSHER

IN the evolution of her geological and other features, Nature presents many curious phenomena. To the thoughtful investigator there is a very remarkable instance to be seen in a hill of broken volcanic rock situated near the city of Honolulu. The hill, in the district of Kaimuki, is several hundred feet high, and as far as it has been opened up, is composed in great part of finely divided lava, slightly adherent, but crumbling readily under slight pressure. Not only is it finely broken up but it is to a great degree sorted out as if it had been separated by a graduated sieve, the particles ranging in size from coarse dust up to an inch or so in diameter. The greater part of the pieces are cylindrical in shape, with sharp edges, as though they had been formed by repeatedly breaking off threads or ropes of very liquid lava. The most curious feature of the deposit is its homogeneity. Hundreds of wagon loads of any particular size may readily be obtained, the size varying in different parts of the hill, but that in any one spot being uniform. A pit has been dug in the side of the hill from fifty to one hundred feet in width and depth and several hundred feet in length from which thousands of tons have been taken for road construction in the vicinity. It is not known how deep the deposit goes but apparently it has considerable depth.

This broken trap rock makes excellent macadam roads, the coarser varieties being used for the foundations and the finer ones for the top layers. For some reason it is said to be unsuited for use in making concrete though it is not known that a thorough trial has been made of it for this purpose.

Many conjectures have been made as to the manner in which this deposit was formed. It was undoubtedly made [illegible] at the adjacent crater [illegible] to be broken into such quantities of uniformly shaped and sized fragments is beyond conjecture.

"THE DEAD HAS COME TO LIFE"

A "FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURE

MRS. JAMES FENWICK

Enterprise, Ont., October 1st, 1908.

"I suffered tortures for seven long years from a Water Tumor. I was forced to take morphia constantly to relieve the awful pains, and I wanted to die to get relief. The doctors gave me up and my friends hourly expected my death. Then I was induced to take "Fruit-a-tives" and this wonderful fruit medicine has completely cured me. When I appeared on the street again my friends exclaimed "The dead has come to life." The cure was a positive miracle." MRS. JAMES FENWICK.

50c a box—6 for $2.50—or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HE had been making a night of it but had forsaken his companions. He was acquainted with an undertaker named George, and decided at three o'clock in the morning that he must see this officer. Arrived [illegible] he found George's undertaking establishment, over which George had his sleeping apartments. The intoxicated young man rang and rang George's bell, and at last awoke him. The undertaker put his head out of the third-story window, expecting to find that his funeral services were required immediately. Instead he recognized his friend Frank.

"Well, Frank," he exclaimed crossly, "what is it you want?"

"I just want to tell you, George," said Frank, "that you're the last man in the world I want to do business with."

Let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen) from your druggist and give it to you (free) to prove its great value.

Psychine is the greatest vitality builder of the age.

For thirty years Psychine has been curing almost every disease that is due to run-down vitality.

Hundreds of thousands have used Psychine with wonderful beneficial results.

We have received thousands of unsolicited testimonials from people whom Psychine has cured, of in many cases, hopeless ailments.

There are still thousands of people suffering from disease, however, whom Psychine can benefit.

There are still thousands who are trying to cure themselves by wrong methods, who are using dangerous and harmful medicines.

There are still thousands who are gradually losing their vitality from whose body the necessary resisting power to disease is slowly but surely slipping away.

There are still those who soon will hear the dread "call in the night" if they do not take prompt action.

To these we have the above message to say.

"Let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine from your druggist and give it to you free, to prove its great value."

That 50-cent bottle of Psychine will tell you more powerfully than mere words can how tremendously beneficial Psychine will be for you.

It will give you an unmistakable indication of its wonderful power to renew the bodily vitality, to strengthen the phagocytes (the white corpuscles), the policemen or scavengers of the body.

* * *

The Surgical Department of the Japanese Army, in the Japo-Russian war first drew the attention of the scientific world to the function of the white corpuscles of the blood or phagocytes.

Foreign medical men were astounded to see Japanese soldiers with wounds that had not been cleansed or dressed for days, that were apparently dirty, [illegible] and altogether unsanitary.

Yet these dirty wounds healed marvellously. No army the world had ever known had such a wonderful record for the recovery of their wounded as the Japanese army.

And all because the Japanese knew how to let the white corpuscles cure.

* * *

There are two kinds of corpuscles in your blood, you know: red and white.

The red carry nutrition. The white are the policemen or scavengers of the body.

Whenever a disease germ enters the body, these white corpuscles attack and literally eat it.

A wound that attracts disease germs from the air is cleansed and healed by billions of phagocytes or white corpuscles devouring these [illegible] germs.

Any disease can be cured by these white corpuscles if they be in sufficient number or strong enough to attack and destroy the germs that cause the disease.

If they are not in sufficient numbers or strength, then the disease germs eat them and disease claims the body.

That's the cause of every disease to which humanity is heir.

For centuries the cure of disease has been by means of herbs—nature's remedies.

It is only within recent times that we have come to know how these herbs act.

Now scientists tell us they increase the strength and numbers of the white corpuscles or phagocytes.

In Psychine we have some of the most healing and beneficial herbs in the world, herbs that increase and strengthen the white corpuscles.

From Arabia comes one herb, from South America another, China and Japan produce a third, while the jungle of India yields a fourth.

All these herbs are recognized by the medical profession as being the most beneficial to health that they know.

That's why Psychine in the third of a century it has been made has cured hundreds of thousands of people who suffered from the following diseases:

La Grippe	Bronchial Coughs
Bronchitis	Weak Lungs
Hemorrhages	Weak Voice
Sore Throat	Spring Weakness
Anaemia	Early Decline
Female Weakness	Catarrhal Affections
Indigestion	Catarrh of Stomach
Poor Appetite	Night Sweats
Chills and Fevers	Obstinate Coughs
Sleeplessness and	Laryngitis and
Nervous Troubles	Dyspepsia

After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La Grippe.

That's why we believe it will be beneficial to you.

Now we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us, and we'll give you an order on your druggist (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given to you free of cost.

We have undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our 30 years' experience with this splendid preparation with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

Harvest Time in a Beaver Colony

By Enos A. Mills

ONE autumn I watched a beaver colony and observed the customs of its primitive inhabitants as they gathered their harvest for winter. It was the Spruce Tree colony, the most attractive one of the sixteen beaver municipalities in the big moraine on the slope of Long's Peak—which is in the Colorado Rockies.

The first evening I concealed myself close to the beaver "house" by the edge of the pond. Just at sunset a large, aged beaver of striking, patriarchal appearance, rose in the water by the house and swam slowly, silently around the pond. He kept close to the shore and appeared to be [illegible] to see if an enemy lurked near. On completing the circuit of the pond he climbed upon the end of a log that was thrust a few feet out into the water.

Presently several other beaver appeared in the water close to the house. A few of these at once left the pond and nosed quietly about on the shore. The others swam about for some minutes and then joined their comrades on land, where all rested for a time.

Meanwhile the aged beaver had lifted a small aspen [illegible] out of the water and was squatted on the log, leisurely eating bark. Before many minutes elapsed the other beaver became restless and finally started up the slope in a runway. They traveled slowly in single file and one by one vanished amid the tall sedge. The old beaver slipped noiselessly into the water and a series of low waves pointed toward the house. It was dark, and Mars was gently throbbing in the black and rippling water as I stole away in silence for the night.

Beaver are a primitive folk of marked industry and [illegible] skill. Some of their engineering work wins the admiration of engineers. Most beaver live in a house of their own building, this usual house is made of mud and sticks and commonly is either in the shallow water of a lake, near the shore, or in a pond formed by one of their dams. They generally maintain good roads and excellent waterways. In old colonies there usually is an extensive system of long subterranean passages. Their food consists largely of the bark of deciduous trees, [illegible] long slide which reached to the big pond. This canal was new and probably had been dug especially for this harvest. For sixty feet of its length it was quite regular in form and had an average width of thirty inches and a depth of fourteen. The mud dug in making it was piled evenly along the lower side. Altogether it looked more like the work of a careful man with a shovel, than of beaver without tools. Seepage and overflow water from the ponds above filled and flowed slowly through it and out at the farther end, where it swept down the long slide into the big pond. Through this canal the logs had been taken one by one. At the farther end I found the largest log; it probably had been too heavy to heave out of the canal; tracks in the mud indicated that there was a hard tussle before it was abandoned.

Close to the big house a few aspen leaves fluttered on twigs in the water. Evidently some large pieces of aspen were sunk beneath—the pile of winter supplies was started. Could it be that the aspen which I had marked on the mountain-side a quarter of a mile distant so short a time before, and which I had followed over slope and slide, canal and basin, was now piled on the bottom of this pond? I waded out into the water, prodded around with a pole and found several small logs. Dragging one of these to the surface, I found there were three notches on it.

Scores of aspens were felled in the grove where the notched ones were. They were trimmed, cut into sections, and limbs, logs and all taken over the route of the one I had followed, and at last placed in a pile beside the big house. This harvest gathering went on for a month. All around was busy, earnest preparation for winter. The squirrels from the tree tops kept a rattling rain of cones on the leaf-strewn forest floor, the cheery chipmunk foraged and frolicked among the withered leaves and plants, while aspens with leaves of gold fell before the [illegible] sickles of the beaver. Splendid glimpses, grand views I had of this Harvest Home epic so strange. How busy the beavers were! [illegible] may be that the beaver which felled them looked and thought before they went ahead with the cutting.

Why had this and several other large aspens been left uncut in a place where all were convenient for harvest? Although neighboring aspens were cut years ago, the explanation is that the beaver realized that the tops of the aspens were entangled and interlocked in the limbs of crowding spruces and would not fall if cut off at the bottom. This and one other were the only large ones that were felled, the tops of these had been recently released by the overturning of some spruces and the breaking of several branches on others. Other scattered large aspens were left uncut but all of these were clasped in the arms of nearby spruces.

It was the habit of these colonists to transfer a tree to the harvest pile promptly after cutting it down. But one morning I found logs on slides, in canals, and unfinished work in the grove, as though everything had been suddenly dropped in the night when work was at its height. Coyotes had howled freely during the night, but this was not uncommon. In going over the grounds I found the explanation of this untoward [illegible] in a bear track and numerous wolf tracks, freshly molded in the muddy places.

After the bulk of the harvest was gathered, I went one day to the opposite side of the moraine and briefly observed the methods of the Island beaver colony. The ways of the two were in some things very different. In the Spruce Tree colony the custom was to move the felled aspen promptly to the harvest pile. In the Island colony the custom was to cut down most of the harvest before transporting any of it to the pile beside the house. Of the 16[illegible] trees that had been felled for this harvest, 1[illegible] were still lying where they fell. However, the work of transporting was getting under way, a few logs were in the pile beside the house and numerous others were scattered along the canals, runways and slides between the house and the harvest grove.

There was [illegible] talent, too, in the Island colony. This was noticeable in the attempts that had been made to fell limb-entangled trees that could not fall. One [illegible] aspen had three times been cut off at the bottom. The third cut was more than three feet from the ground and was made by a beaver working from the top of a fallen log. Still this high cut aspen refused to come down and there it hung like a collapsed [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] and spoiled the aspen had been cut [illegible]

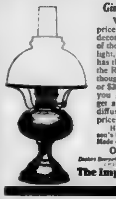
The Famous Rayo



Gives the Best Light at Any Price

When you pay more than the Rayo price for a lamp, you are paying for extra decorations that cannot add to the quality of the light. You can't pay for a better light, because there is none. An oil light has the least effect on the human eye, and the Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made, though low in price. You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for some other lamp, and although you get a more costly lamp, you can't get a better light than the white, mellow, diffused, unflickering light of the low-priced Rayo.

HE FEARED BLOOD POISON

But Zam-Buk Saved His Thumb!

Once again a case is reported in which the popular balm Zam-Buk has saved a worker from the terrible effects of blood poisoning. Mr. Alfred Hy. Orth, of Shipley, Ont., says: "While at work I had the misfortune to run a rusty nail under my thumb nail, to the depth of about one and a half inches. The pain was terrible, and [illegible] I feared was that the nail, being so dirty and rusty, would set up festering and blood poison. I knew from previous experience how good Zam-Buk was, so I cleaned the thumb, melted a little Zam-Buk, and ran it into the wound. The result was wonderful! It soothed the pain and the thumb actually did not swell. Zam-Buk kept away all inflammation. I was able to go on with my work all the time, and in a few days the thumb was as good as ever. A balm which can do this should be in every working man's home."

Zam-Buk is the finest form of "insurance" for all workers. Its antiseptic power is so great that no disease germ can live in it, and if immediately applied to a sore or injury or diseased patch, all danger of blood poisoning is averted.

Being composed of pure vegetable essences, Zam-Buk is an ideal balm for babies and young children, and mothers will find it far superior to the ordinary salves, some of which contain harmful mineral poisons, rancid animal fats, etc.

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for ... abscesses, eczema, ringworm, ... scalp sores, chapped hands, cold sores, inflamed patches, bad leg, ... sore veins and ulcers, piles, ... burns, bruises, and all skin diseases and injuries. Sold by all druggists and store keepers at 50c a box, 3 for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. ... substitutes.

A COUPLE of young men on the street the other evening offered a new version of an old one after they had passed a couple of auburn haired damsels one of the young men took his stand at the curb and gazed up and down the bridge.

"What are you looking for?" inquired his companion.

Pointing to the red headed girls, the young man answered:

"I'm looking to see a white automobile."

HERE is the latest poker story coming from a well-known club. The midnight hour was fast approaching. Mr. Robinson had been drinking ... during the course of the game and losing his money right along. Pulling his watch out of his vest pocket he laid it on the table in front of him and said he would play just half an hour more.

The game continued with some good ... jackpots. The man with the watch, who is dignity personified during the business hours, bet fast and furiously, but just managed to have next to the highest hand most of the time.

While he was elevating another scotch and soda to his lips the man on his right grabbed the watch and deftly slipped it into the outside pocket of the owner's coat. Mr. Robinson was too deeply in earnest with trying to win back some of his losses to notice that his watch was gone. The play continued long after the time fixed by the gentleman as the hour he must stop, but luck was still a stranger to him.

The Horseman

THE BELGIAN HORSE

THE Belgian horse enjoys a world-wide reputation as a beast of heavy burden whose production constitutes a practical monopoly for its native country. To this three factors contribute: The soil and climate, the economic conditions, and the skill of breeders. In the central districts of Belgium there is found a humid soil peculiarly adapted to the requirements of the horse, while the action of a maritime climate, with frequent but relatively light rains, combines with this favorable condition of the soil to produce a vegetation of the soil that is abundant, rich, and suitable fodder for the animal.

Similarly, the economic conditions of Belgian agriculture are ideal for horse breeding, especially where the heavy draught horse is concerned. The industry is carried on on farms of from one hundred to one hundred and twenty acres (the minimum area practicable) to others of several hundred, and of farms of this size the country boasts a greater number.

The heavy soil necessitates much labor, three strong horses are required to draw a plow. Small wonder, therefore, that the farmer favors the indigenous draught animal. So rooted, in fact, is his preference that interventions pursued for a century in a contrary spirit by government have been abortive. After several devastating wars there arose a demand for a cavalry horse of lighter build and more spirited than the Belgian animal, and succeeding governments tried in vain to induce breeders to fill the bill. In 1770 there was established at Alost a breeding stud with Arab, Neapolitan, and Dutch stock. Napoleon, in 1806, ineffectually repeated the attempt with Arab stallions, as did the Dutch government at Walverdange subsequently. Finally, in 1864, all idea of a state breeding stud was definitely abandoned.

After the Franco-Prussian War of 1870, Germany became the chief buyer of the Belgian horse in place of France. England also gave an impetus as a customer. Thus encouraged, native breeders sought more definite results. They had their work cut out. Each district hitherto had operated irrespective of its neighbor with dissimilar results. Hence many local strains: Flemish, Brabantine, and the Ardennes, etc.; the last an extreme of Oriental crosses. The desire to remedy, if possible, the blemishes in these several races led in 1863 to the establishment at Liege and Ghent of two associations of breeders devoted to the improvement of the horse. These became merged twenty-five years ago in the present foundation, "The Society of the Belgian Draught Horse," having its headquarters at Brussels.

This society, with its membership of 1,200, has accomplished much already by the following means: The institution of genealogical race books (stud books) insuring purity of stock, and the holding early each June of an exposition. Sometimes ... hundred animals are exhibited, while the prizes distributed represent a lump sum of over $6,000. Results mark an improvement in the Belgian farm horse, which now approximates more nearly to the ideal type intended for hard work.

The popularity abroad of the Belgian horse is already of comparatively ancient date. England was the first importer, then the north of France. A later customer was Germany, hitherto without a draught horse properly so called. Then came the turn of agricultural competition with the English "Clydesdale," that resulted finally in the survival of the native breed. Denmark, although possessed of a draught horse favorably known, yet followed the example of Germany. Brazil, the Argentine, and Japan have given their attention to the Belgian horse. From December 1, 1906, to November [illegible] 1907, the administration of the stud book delivered 1,150 pedigrees of stock sold abroad. Of this number 450 stallions and 150 mares were shipped to the United States.

Several facts of horse-breeding are of economic importance. For instance, it is arranged that births shall take place in spring, when agricultural labor is well advanced, in order to turn the foals and mares out to grass. In round figures, there are born annually 40,000 foals, but apart from those chosen for breeding purposes the farmer does not usually keep foals until they are full grown. They are sold in the autumn which follows their birth, or the next autumn, and become the property of agriculturalists of another district, where they are broken in to work from the age of eighteen months to two years. Some breeders, again, undertake to fatten animals before selling them in the market. Prices average for foals of three to six months, $60 to $120; for foals of eighteen months, $120 to $200. Three-year-old horses fetch $200 to $280; four-year-olds, $250 to $300. Finally, the value of the Belgian equine exportation trade has risen to $3,800,000, ranking in importance after such necessities as sugar, $7,400,000, and oil, $3,200,000.

THE HEIGHT OF GREAT MEN

BALZAC declared that "nearly all great men are little." But Mr. Havelock Ellis has compiled some height statistics which point just the other way. Scott was 6 feet, Shelley 5 feet 11 inches, Carlyle 5 feet 11 inches, Byron 5 feet 8½ inches, Swift 5 feet 8 inches, and Dickens 5 feet 9 inches. So much for statures of men eminent in the world of literature who were over, at, or slightly under six feet. The great men who were short in stature include Balzac himself, 5 feet 4 inches; Keats 5 feet, Napoleon 5 feet 1½ inches, Nelson 5 feet 4 inches, Tom Moore 5 feet, while Dryden, Milton, Gibbon, Goldsmith, Horace Macaulay, Spencer, and Blake all hovered near the 5 foot mark. We usually think of Gladstone as a very tall man and Disraeli of medium height. As a matter of fact Disraeli was 5 feet 9 inches, and Gladstone only 5 feet 8 inches. If we believe Carlyle, Jeffrey would seem to have been something under 5 feet, but he was 5 feet 6 inches. DeQuincey's contemporaries always describe him as a diminutive elf, whereas he was four inches taller than Moore and Keats.

Canada Growing Up

UNDER the above heading in the "Nineteenth Century Review," Captain Cecil Battine makes some comments on Canada that are chiefly interesting because they show how the people of the Motherland are being informed concerning us. Says Captain Battine:

The statesmen of British North America are in a unique position. They rule a territory which is wide enough in itself to accommodate and support a nation greater in population and power than any now established on earth. They control their own destinies so completely that they regulate admission into these wide lands. Although their present population barely suffices to hold the country with a line of the peaceful garrisons of agriculture and railway traffic, they are exempt from the anxiety which would inevitably beset the owners of the finest part of the earth's surface in case the right of possession should be challenged by foreign foes, for the Imperial Crown guarantees the safety of this splendid inheritance. The mighty fleet of Great Britain is able to ward off the attack of any enemy from over the sea, and while the ocean thoroughfare is open the resources of these islands in men and material can be poured into Canada. There is as yet no danger that the history of Britain will be repeated across the ocean, when successive waves of invasion from Continental Europe swept across England and drove first her Celtic, then her Saxon inhabitants westward, because they were not numerous enough to defend her long coast line against the thrusting hordes of hungry barbarians whom the sea brought up the estuaries of her rivers.

The Government of the Dominion has the exalted mission of deciding who are to be the forefathers of the nation which will, at any rate, have the opportunity of rivalling all others in wealth ... [illegible]

It still, however, remains to be seen whether an empire can healthily grow and guard itself in modern times without a permanent army, even under the peculiarly favorable conditions of Canada. To form a correct judgment on this question we must realise fully the functions of the army in the body politic, and, besides the task of military defence against foreign enemies, it must not be forgotten that the army in all modern states is the principal agency for promoting union and consolidating national feeling. The effect of military training in improving the physique and moral character of a people has probably been a good deal exaggerated by the advocates of conscription in England. At any rate, the training of a youth in the ranks, even for three years, cannot be compared as a physical and moral preparation with discipline endured in reclaiming virgin forest and prairie all one's life, or even with the ordinary experience of agricultural life in the settled provinces of Canada. But it can and does give a sense of corporate existence. It teaches grown men to combine in a way no other human institution is capable of teaching combination and it gives an inspiring and far-reaching confidence in national strength and national unity. It may not be counted too pedantic to recall that the very word "empire" means a military confederacy.

Can Canada develop an empire, a sovereign state capable of holding and protecting the fairest and richest realm on the earth's surface without an adequate army of her own even sheltered though she be by the fleets and legions of the Motherland? All who look to Canada for the future supremacy of the British race and ideals should examine this supremely important question.

It is no figure of speech that heavy sacrifices are indispensable to maintain ... [illegible]

... pathy, candor also, can be counted upon. Great importance attaches to the success of his mission, and to the reality of the efforts of the Canadians to conquer the obstacles in the way of giving effect to his recommendations.

A modern State needs, in order to develop power as an international unit, a sturdy peasantry, a self-contained industrial system, and a class capable of supplying subordinate and superior leaders. Such an organisation of her people Canada already possesses in embryo, but trusty guidance will be required for some years to achieve satisfactory results. The canvas is clean. The opportunity is unrivalled for a masterpiece of statesmanship in delineating the features and modelling the form of the new nation. The evils which have overtaken some older civilisations in Europe, from neglect of social legislation and superintendence of the poor, from overcrowding and unrestricted industrial competition, have been so far-reaching and disastrous that young states have taken warning and provided against them. There are, however, other perils to be guarded against. Every organism, whether individual or corporate, is liable to maladies, the failings of senile decay, the temptations of middle age, and the slackness and undiscipline of youth. No man and no state is ever secure from unhealthy symptoms. They must perpetually be guarded against to keep the body in good health.

Much has been heard lately of the advantages of settling young men from the overcrowded districts of Britain and Ireland upon the boundless prairies of the Canadian North West. Without seeking to contest the wisdom of encouraging the settlement of Canada by the most valuable class of British emigrants, it is as well to remember that these young men are precisely those most required in their native land, so that in exporting them to Canada we are in truth giving of our best. There are a certain number, however, who would be safe to emigrate somewhere, and it is essential to divert the stream as far as possible to our own dominions. The enlightened policy of preparing homesteads and farm buildings for a certain class of settler is already bearing ... [illegible]

... tegral, is clearly foreshadowed. The Pacific slope of the giant mountains is even more beautiful than the eastern side, owing to the milder climate and more varied clothing of forest and flora. The population has been more largely recruited in recent times from the British Isles themselves, and is therefore an advanced post of the Imperial system on that ocean which is said now to be the centre of the world's future progress and activity. It is worth our while to look ahead and be ready to support the courageous outpost in case its grip on these priceless regions of vantage be threatened. It is also worth our while to reflect on the apathy, ignorance, and cowardice which lost us the coastline from ... to the ... degree of latitude, half the Pacific coast of British Columbia, as well as the whole coast of the Yukon. This ... negligence ... in the future be expiated in a sea of human blood. Let us beware not to repeat it.

No catalogue of the potential riches ... [illegible] ... can compare for educational purposes with a visit to the spot. Why does not society follow the good example which His Majesty has set by sending their sons and daughters to visit the dominions overseas? THE IDEAL FARMER

If you pick up an agricultural paper [illegible] who is never behind with his work. Still another aims to describe the [illegible] words of wisdom may be taken as an inspiration by some [illegible] he is not what he ought to be, and that this article is just the thing for him [illegible] was written especially for his benefit.

The ideal farmer is not necessarily the man who always has things done right on the dot, nor the man who never makes a serious mistake in his work. He is not the man who attends to important business just at the moment when it should be attended to. In fact, he is not the man who always does the right thing at the right time.

The ideal farmer is the man who always endeavours to do the right thing at the right time. True, many men are not so naturally gifted as to be capable of seeing into the immediate future, and as a matter of fact, nearly always doing things just about right. But when a writer begins to tell his readers that there is only one perfect man in the community, and that all who are not like this perfect individual are more or less doomed, he is straying from the truth and unfaithful to his trust.

The farmer, or any other tradesman for that matter, who always endeavours to hit the nail on the head, whether he falls down in the effort or not, is the ideal. No human being can be sure that he is not going to fall in his undertakings, because man was not made perfect. Imperfection is the keynote of our nature. Still we can attain as near as possible to that state of perfection by constant and concentrated perseverance in whatever vocation or walk of life we may happen to find ourselves. In like manner the farmer who [illegible] to make a success of everything he undertakes by carefully following the most improved and up-to-date methods of doing things, is the man who is the greatest success, both morally and materially. Of course it does not necessarily follow that a farmer may sit down and take things as they come without giving a care to the final result. Because we cannot be the community's ideal, it does not follow that we are a failure. And after all it is the happy medium which is to wished for in all things, because the man who is the greatest success as a raiser of money producing crops may not be a good homemaker. He may not be a good citizen. He may not have a care for the general welfare of the community in which he lives. Whereas the farmer who always does the best there is in him in all things, great or small is a great [illegible] to be of some [illegible] to the world about him. [illegible] and let the [illegible]

Vermilion [illegible] to its credit, a number of public spirited progressive [illegible] consider it a duty incumbent upon their citizenship to devote their best energy and abilities in serving the town.

The history of Vermilion as a town is a short one and its chief magistrates have been few. The first occupant of the chair, M. A. Brimacombe, who in the two years he served the town formulated and shaped the policy which has since been followed by his successors, Dr. Ryan and the present mayor, H. N. Stephens.

Mayor Stephens has filled the chair, we deem ourselves justified in saying with a marked degree of credit to the town and honor to himself. His cool, practical and [illegible] judgment has expedited business, and been productive of an harmonious sentiment about the board as well as proving to be in the best interests of the town. A hope prevails that he will stand for [illegible] another term and it is expected that a statement regarding [illegible] will be forthcoming [illegible].

The retiring councillors are J. A. Roseborough, W. C. Craig and [illegible] all of whom we believe will be willing to serve the town for a further two years term, if the heavy demands of their business will permit them to do so.

No less important to the ratepayers are school affairs, and as the meeting will be for the receiving of the annual school statement and report of the school board for the year, it will pass [illegible] for all. Principal Hartley [illegible] render a school report that night on school work and outlook. Just what vacancies there will be to fill on the board the Standard is [illegible] to state.
